It has been said that no material invented by man has been of more service than glass. It is certainly one of the greatest necessities of civilized life, coming into use in almost every department of activity, and it is one of the most interesting industries. How the process of making it was ever discovered is a mystery, and it taxes the imagination to conceive some happy accident by which the possibility of such a substance was disclosed. The ancient Pliny has a yarn, which perhaps he believed to be the explanation, but nobody believes it today. He says that some Phoenician sailors landed on the bank of a river in Palestine and looked about for stones on which to rest the kettles in which they were to cook their food. The best they could find were lumps of "nitrum" (probably soda is meant). When these had become affected by the fire they fused with the sand and produced a transparent liquid, which vitrified and became crude glass. This pleasant fiction is discarded as throwing no light on the matter, because the heat of a camp fire would be entirely insufficient to produce the result described.

The great antiquity of the industry is clearly proven by the discovery of vessels with inscriptions to show that they could not have been made later than 3,000 years before the Christian era. Glass making was for many centuries confined wholly to vases and other forms of hollow ware, and although plate glass was known as early as the Third century, more than a thousand years passed before it came into general use for windows except in churches. It is said that the first window glass taken to England for ecclesiastical purposes was carried there by the Abbot Benedict in 674 A. D. As late as the Sixteenth century it was a mark of great wealth to have glass in the windows of one's house.

The industry was introduced into this country soon after settlements had been established, and though in the early colonial days it did not make much headway it has now become a very important feature of our manufactures, and in some departments it rivals any productions in the world. It took its prosperous start soon after the end of the Revolutionary war. In the finer ornamental grades no one would affirm for a moment that the famous products of Venice and Bohemia are duplicated here. They may never be, as some of the ingredients are not found in America, and the expense of importation is so great as practically to debar domestic enterprise in this direction.

America's best hold on the glass industry is in the way of plate glass for windows and the manufacture of bottles. There are many prosperous factories in both these departments scattered all over the country, and the most marked improvements in mechanical contrivances during the last quarter of a century have been introduced by American manufacturers. The extent of the industry at present compares curiously with the disheartening results of colonial enterprises. That there was a factory in Gloucester, Mass., in the latter part of the Seventeenth century is clear from some vague records, and the name of a portion of the town, Glasshouse Field. Washington refers in his diary to a factory at New Haven, Conn. In other places it is known that the industry was established, and disappeared because Dutch and Germans could get the product to this market cheaper than we could make it. Probably the oldest house in the country now is the Whitney works, at Glassboro, N. J. Bottles only are made there. The factory was established nearly 125 years ago. Plate glass began to be made in America as recently as 1853, at Lenox, Mass. This factory is still in existence, but its work is mainly directed to "rough plate;" that is, glass intended for conservatories, hothouses and other uses where a clear, polished surface is not necessary.

Probably 99 people in 100 if asked what glass was made of would answer "sand." So it is in great part. Sand of a certain character is the main ingredient but not necessarily the most important. It is an old puzzle problem to determine which factor of a number, say 20, is of the greater importance, 2 or 10. Ten is certainly the greater factor, but of what use would it be in constituting 20 if it were not for insignificant little 2? So with glass. Sand is the greatest factor in bulk, but with it must be used other substances—soda, potash, lime, magnesia, alumina, oxides of iron and lead, etc., one or more of these in different proportions, according to the style of glass desired.

Of course! exclaim the ninety-nine, we might have mentioned soda or potash if we had supposed that such a trifling ingredient as 3 to 14 per cent. of either were to be included in the answer. Very good, but unhappily for American manufacturers these trifling ingredients are absolutely necessary, and sometimes they are very hard to get. This is especially the case with makers of hollow ware. To make a good bottle soda is necessary, and soda of a particular kind which has to be imported. If our manufacturers of bottles could get the soda, even from Europe, at what it actually costs, they could more than compete with the Germans. As it is, German beer bottles and the like are crowding our markets every year and making the domestic manufacturers hustle to secure a reasonable profit. The trouble comes that the tariff schedule compels Americans to pay 23 per cent. more than its value for the soda they need in their work. This difference on a small factor in their industry prevents them from entering the field as fair competitors with Germany.

The Germans make better bottles, as American manufacturers admit, at rates that are cheaper than we can make them. Another way of conducting the industry in this element of it came under the writer's observation last summer. There is a fine porcelain factory at Bonn, Germany, the doors of which on one side open directly upon the Rhine. This factory needs from foreign parts not so small a factor as soda, but the very base of its product, sand. It comes in boats from Scotland directly up the Rhine to the doors of the factory, and is there discharged without a suggestion of duty. The cost of production is, therefore, normal, uninfluenced, to the injury of the consumer, by a tax levied for the purpose of "protecting" owners of sand hills or makers of porcelain.

BUTTERWORTH'S OPINIONS.

Good Doctrine from a Prominent Republican "with Ultra Tendencies."

Hon. Benjamin Butterworth, of Ohio, who defined himself as "a Republican with ultra tendencies," has given expression to one of the favorite truths of the low tariff men. The high protectionists occasionally let slip such truths, to the great delight of all advocates of freer trade.

Tariff reformers have been saying for a long time that if protection be in itself a good thing our different states ought to adopt it and protect their home enterprises against the competition of the more favored states in the Union. The inequality in the price of labor in the different parts of the country affords here ample play for the cheap labor arguments of the protectionists.

As an example of this, tariff reformers have pointed out the fact that the wages paid in 1888 by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, in his blast furnace A, at Braddock, Pa., ran from fifty cents to $1 lower than was paid for similar work in furnace No. 2 of the Union Steel company at Chicago.

A still more startling difference was shown in the wages of the heater's helper, Mr. Carnegie paying $1.32 per 100 tons, while the Chicago concern paid $3.

Does not Illinois need a protective tariff against "the cheap pauper labor" of Pennsylvania?

What does Mr. Butterworth say?

"Is the arbitrary control of competition by congress without regard to condition be desirable—that is, if a protective tariff as a means of limiting competition be good in the abstract—congress should at once, if it has the power, divide the United States into six divisions, so that each one may get rich by fencing out all competition."

That is what may be called "blurtin' it out in meetin'."

American Goods Seeking a Foreign Market.

Mr. W. J. Coombs, of the firm of Coombs, Crosby & Eddy, large exporting merchants of New York, recently made public a fact which shows how American manufacturers are reaching out after the markets of the world. He states that repeatedly during the past year his firm had chartered vessels to come in ballast—i. e., without any cargo—from foreign ports to New York in order to take away merchandise for which the firm had orders. At the time when this statement was made there were six vessels serving the firm on such charter.

But why was it necessary for these vessels to come to America empty? Did not this involve great loss of time and money? Did it not render the freight charges on the outgoing cargo of American wares much greater?

Mr. Coombs answers these questions by showing that, in order to render this foreign trade profitable, the incoming cargo must also be found. He says that his experience proves that the problem of providing the outgoing cargo is already solved. The time has come, he says, when the enterprise of our manufacturers, combined with the intelligent skill and inventive genius of our mechanics, enables us to compete in the markets of the world with the European factories as regards nearly every class of our industrial productions.

The articles on which we cannot compete successfully are those in which the cost of the raw materials is the chief item. With cheap raw materials these articles would also be profitably exported.

We are told repeatedly that it is the high price of American labor which prevents us from sending our wares into foreign markets, but here is an experienced exporter who says that he competes most successfully in those classes of goods in which the labor cost is greatest.

One of these vessels which had to lose time in sailing empty across the seas to New York took on a cargo there for Natal in South Africa. This part of the great "Dark Continent," of which such marvelous things are now being told, produces immense quantities of the very finest grades of wool. Our manufacturers need these wools and have recently petitioned congress for them.

But the ship in question was not able to take on a return cargo of wool, for the custom house officers in New York would have exacted ten cents for every pound of it, and this is more than half of its cost in Africa.

What then did the captain of Mr. Coombs' vessel do?

He sailed empty across the Atlantic again to Brazil, where he took on a cargo for New York. This he could very well do, as the great products of Brazil are coffee and crude rubber, which are allowed to enter New York free.

Mr. Coombs, it should be stated, does not seek a remedy for these evils by asking congress to grant a subsidy to vessels carrying his merchandise. On the contrary, he thinks that this would be only a temporary expedient, a correction of one error by the commission of another. His remedy is a removal of the almost prohibitory duty on South American and Cape wools.

That was a notable event in the history of tariff reform when recently a large number of Philadelphia manufacturers in the late Judge Kelley's district, who have always been Republicans and who voted for Harrison, signed a letter asking Mr. William M. Ayer to become the candidate of the tariff reformers and the free raw materials men against Mr. Reyburn, the high tariff candidate.

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: He positively believes he would have died, had it not been for Electric Bitters.

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidneys, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles, should remember that no other remedy in the world will so speedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

"I was caught in a python's folds and saw fierce eyes glaring down into mine. If that tremendous coil were tightened around me, I knew that I might at once commit my luggage for the undiscovered country. In this moment of my fate I saw the great python's tail in close proximity to his mouth. I grasped the snake's tail and pushed a yard or two down his yawning jaws. Serpents seldom bite their prey; they lubricate it and suck it down. With such a long and cold-blooded creature I calculated that it would take over a half a minute before the sensations of his tail could be conveyed to his brain and render him aware that he was committing suicide."

A Reservoir Gives Way Sweeping Everything

A Lake Three Miles in Length by Three-Fourths of a Mile Wide and One Hundred and Ten Feet Deep Breaks, Drowning Scores of People—The Town of Wickenburg, Thirty Miles Down the Valley, Believed to Have Been Swept Out of Existence.

PRESCOTT, A. T., February 24.—The fine, large storage dam built across Haasayampa river by the Walnut Grove Water Storage Company two years ago, at a cost of $300,000, gave way in the morning, under the great pressure of the heavy flood, and swept everything before it.

FORTY PERSONS

Are known to have lost their lives. As the town of Wickenburg, thirty miles below the dam, was on the same stream, great fears are entertained for the safety of that town, but as there is no telegraphic communication no news will be obtainable of its fate until tomorrow at least.

The service dam of the company, located fifteen miles below the reservoirs, and fifteen miles of flume just approaching completion, was also swept away, although the company has spent over $800,000 on the enterprise of storing the water. The hydraulic mining machine had arrived, and they expected to commence operations next week. The dam which held the water back was 110 feet long at the base and 400 feet at the top. It was 110 feet thick at the base and ten feet at the top, forming a lake three miles in length by three-fourths of a mile wide and 110 feet deep.

Lieutenant Brodie, in charge of the work, was absent at Phœnix, superintending the shipment of the machinery to the works, and was saved. Of those

BRITISH BANQUET.

DISTINGUISHED HONORS TO THE LATE ENGLISH

Commissioner to the Marine Conference at Washington—London Workingmen to Hold a Monster Mass Meeting—Tailors and the Sweating System—Latest European News.

LONDON, February 24.—A banquet was tendered at Cambridge to Mr. Charles Hall, M. P., British commissioner to the late marine conference at Washington. The company was a most distinguished one, and the value of Mr. Hall's services received full recognition in the speeches. Evidence was not lacking that in the opinion of those present the conference had been rather slighted as compared with the Pan-American Congress which was convened about the same time. The results of the meeting, nevertheless, were regarded as of permanent value.

There will shortly be a monster mass meeting in Hyde Park, of workingmen of all classes, to express condemnation of the Russian penal system and its accompanying outrages. The meeting is being arranged by labor leaders who recognize in the so-called political prisons of Russia the friends of universal reform and progress both in respect to social and political conditions. The great interest taken in this matter in America has found an echo here.

The tailors of the east end of London, who are the worst victims of the "sweating" system, are greatly cast down because of the failures of the parliamentary committee on sweating to improve their condition. The unfortunate tailors are now planning a general strike, in the desperate hope that their wretched condition may awake some sympathy and aid. Such a strike must necessarily have some resemblance to the now famous "hunger strikes" of Siberian prisoners, for it will involve wholesale starvation.

The importation of American swine meat into Germany is again permitted, but only at one part—that of Niel—where such an elaborate system of inspection has been established that it is thought impossible for any danger to exist from diseased meat slipping through.

Russia has made further demands recently upon the Porte for the payment of the indemnity, which, according to the Berlin treaty, should have been paid by Turkey on account of the Russo-Turkish war. All previous demands have been met by ample promises, explanations, and expressions of regret, but no cash has been forthcoming. It is doubtful if, in the continued bankrupt state of the sultan's treasury, the present urgings of Russia will have any more substantial results.

WORLD'S FAIR.

The Discussion Opens in the House.

THE FIGHT BETWEEN THE EAST AND WEST.

The Four Places Contending for the Prize, New York, Washington, St. Louis and Chicago—Big Backing for the National Capital as Its Site.

WASHINGTON, February 21.—Mr. McCreary, of Kentucky, argued in favor of Chicago: Saying the three greatest national celebrations ever held in this country had been held in the east, and it was now the turn of the west. Messrs. Cutcheon, of Michigan, Taylor, of Illinois, Perkins, of Kansas, Chipman, of Michigan, spoke in favor of Chicago. Mr. Neidringhaus, of Missouri, spoke for St. Louis, and Mr. Stone, of Missouri, enlarged upon the advantages of the geographical position of St. Louis. Mr. Breckenridge, of Arkansas; Mr. Beckery, of Missouri, and Mr. Caruth, of Kentucky, favored St Louis. Mr. McComas, of Maryland, favored an exposition, but wherever it was held it was held, it should be held in the Washington, in the district bearing the name of the discoverer of the continent—In the District of Columbia, and at the national capital. He invoked the members to seek some higher motive and broader ground than locality. He appealed to the friends of Chicago, New York and St. Louis to come together in piece here—a national ground. There would be no trouble about accommodations; every other house would be opened to visitors, and Baltimore was within forty minutes travel. Mr. Lee, of Virginia, held that Washington was not only the proper, but the only place where the fair should be held. If it was to be national; if we were to invite the governments of foreign nations, Washington was the proper site. Mr. Coleman, of Louisiana, argued in favor of the selection of Washington. Messrs. Compton and Stockbridge, of Maryland, urged Washington, the mecca of American life, where there was no partisan spirit, as the proper place to hold the exposition. At 5:50 p. m. the House adjourned until today, when the world's fair debate will be continued.

BREEZY DEBATE IN THE SENATE.

The Senate, after a breezy debate, agreed to the resolution calling for information regarding the killing of Deputy Marshal Saunders in Florida. The Educational bill was again under consideration.

The resolution of Mr. Chandler, calling on the Attorney General for information as to the assassination at Quincy, Fla., of W. B. Saunders, Deputy United States Marshal, was taken up, and Mr. Pasco resumed his remarks in regard to it. He sent to the clerk's desk and had read various documents, newspaper articles and proceedings of public meetings denunciatory of the conduct and character of the United States court and its officers in the Northern district of Florida. These representations, he said, might tend to throw some light on the causes leading up to the sad affair at Quincy. If the killing of Saunders was a result of the facts and circumstances declared in the papers read, then the Senate ought to have all the causes which led up to it. The great trouble in the case was that the principal law breakers were the officers of the court.

In conclusion, he offered an amendment directing the attorney general to inform the Senate also whether any efforts have been made by the department of justice to correct the action of the officers of the court, which has resulted in partisan juries made up mainly from one political party, and if so, to report the same to the Senate. Also directing the attorney general to inform the Senate whether he had any information of an official letter written by Marshal Mizell, directing the names of "true and tried Republicans" to be furnished for jurors of the United States court, and what action the department of justice had taken in reference to communications of that character.

Mr. Hawley said that the remarks of the Senator from Florida and the amendment offered by him seemed to be a premature apology for murder.

What, he asked, had the bad character of Saunders and of the administration of justice to do with the murder of Saunders? After some discussion, Mr. Pasco's amendment, on motion of Mr. Chandler, laid on the table, and the resolution calling on the attorney general for information as to the assassination of Saunders, was agreed to.

The educational bill was then taken up, and Mr. Blair proceeded with his argument in favor of it. In concluding his argument he said the bill had been part of the national Republican platform since 1884. It had been incorporated in the platforms of several states. It had been approved by the action of several state legislatures in quite a number of the northern states, and in some of the southern states. It had been approved by President Harrison, who had voted twice for it (almost exactly as it now stood) in 1884 and 1886. In fact the president's hand had been conspicuous in fashioning many of its details when the bill first passed. In spite of all opposition, he believed that the sense of self-preservation would cause the bill to be enacted into law. At the close of Mr. Blair's speech, Mr. Faulkner obtained the floor to speak on the bill; and the Senate at 5:30, adjourned till today.

Daylight Murder.

COLUMBUS, O., February 21.—Dick White found Achilles Kell and the former's wife together in the afternoon, talking, in front of the Davidson hotel, and without a word he drew a self-acting, 32-callibre revolver and fired, the ball striking Kell under the left ear. As the man was falling White snapped the gun again, but it failed to go off. At the third attempt the pistol again exploded, but it is not known as yet whether the ball took effect or not. Kell will not recover and is at death's door. White had repeatedly warned Kell to keep away from his wife or he would avenge his intimacy with her. Kell died at 7:30 p. m.

Applications for Banks.

WASHINGTON, February 23.—The following applications for authority to organize national banks have been filed with the comptroller of the currency: The First National bank of Gallatin, Mo., by T. B. Yates, of Gallatin, Mo., and his associates; The Pomona National bank of Pomona, Cal., by H. A. Palmer, of Pomona, Cal., and his associates; The First National bank of Big Stone Gag, Va., by T. H. Walker, of Big Stone Gap, Va., and his associates.

Inspector of Customs.

WASHINGTON, February 23.—J. B. L. Dawson, of Pennsylvania, was appointed a special inspector of customs.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF WAR.

Speculation as to Whom the President Will Appoint.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 24.—The fact that the bil providing for an assistant secretary of war will undoubtedly be approved by the President has furnished material for speculation in the war department during the past week, rgarding the probable occupant of the office. The salary is $4,500 a year, and the bill provides that it shall be a civilian appointment made by the President. Mr. T. C. Partude, Secretary Proctor's private secretary, and Mr. John Tweadle, chief clerk of the Department, are among the names suggested for the new office.

Secretary Noble in Columbus.

COLUMBUS, February 24.—A soft voiced gentleman of courteous manner and benevolent appearance, whose bright eye and ruddy countenance were a pleasing contradiction to the silvery wealth of curling hair adorning his intellectual head, was a guest at the residence of Mr. Henry C. Noble on South Third street last night. It was Hon. John W. Noble, Secretary of the Interior Department, who is in the city to spend the Sunday with his brother.

GOVERNOR

CAMPBELL'S STATEMENT AS TO THE O'BRIEN-BURCHARD

Speech at the Washington Birthday Celebration at Ohio's Capital, That Caused Such a Sensation.

COLUMBUS, O., February 24.—Some of the Sunday papers having attacked L. W. O'Brien, State Vice President of the P. O. S. A. for having attacked the Catholic religion and priesthood in his speech at a meeting at which the Governor presided on Washington's birthday, the governor was interviewed last night, and gave out the following for publication. Governor Campbell said: I was called on about a fortnight ago by Mr. C. L. Young, of Columbus, and another gentleman whose name I have forgotten, and asked to preside at the Washington birthday celebration. I declined, owing to my then intended absence from home. On last Thursday night Mr. Young met me at the the Light Infantry concert, and learning I would be here again invited me to preside. I accepted the invitation, and have no doubt that Mr. Young intended it in good faith, and with a design of holding a meeting wholly appropriate to the occasion and utterly non-sectarian. Last night I attended the meeting and for the first time saw the programme. Nothing upon it indicated anything out of the usual line, and my name did not appear thereon. The exercises were in charge of a secret order known as the P. O. S. of A., of which I never have been a member, but which I understand in a general way to be devoted to promoting American institutions or something of that kind. The speeches of Senator Massie and Representative Taylor were excellent, and suitable to the occasion. The music was patriotic and very excellent indeed. The only thing which occurred which has caused criticism, was Mr. O'Brien's speech, and it has been greatly exaggerated. For instance, it is said he attacked the Irish, but on the contrary he paid them a eulogy so fulsome that Senator Massie asked whether Mr. O'Brien was not a native of Ireland. Mr. O'Brien also said that the P. O. S. of A. was not opposed to the Catholic church. He did, however, attack what he called priestcraft in India, Europe, Mexico and elsewhere, and the inference to be drawn was that he opposed the Catholic church. Of course this was not proper to the occasion or approved by the audience but I understand Mr. O'Brien disclaims any such deliberate intention. He is a mechanic, not a public speaker, and it is probable he said more than he really meant, and therefore overstepped the bonds of propriety on an occasion which was the public celebration of a patriotic holiday. Of course I would not preside at a public meeting where I thought any one's creed or politics would be attacked, nor do I presume any one would accuse me of such a thing."

$7,000 VERDICT

Against a Theater Whose Policeman Clubbed a Man.

INDIANAPOLIS, February 24.—The day of President Cleveland's visit to this city, Henry Waldron, of Urbana, Ill., was here, and went to the Park theater. He got into a dispute with the agent at the ticket box over some change, and the agent called upon Special Officer Kyle to arrest him. Waldron resisted and was brutally clubbed by the officer. Waldron filed suit for $20,000 against Dickson & Talbot, owners of the theater, and Saturday the trial was concluded, the plaintiff being awarded $7,000. The court held that the theater managers were responsible for Kyle's act, and on this ruling the jury gave damages.

LOST HIS LIFE

In an Effort to Save a Train from Being Wrecked.

AKRON, O., February 24.—Michael McDonough, aged about fifty, discovered a railroad rail, which had been placed across a track just outside the city limits. A train was in sight, and he only had time to lift one end and drag it from the track when the engine struck the other end and the rail was dashed against his head, crushing his skull like an egg shell. The engine and cars did not leave the track.

Amnesty to Army Deserters.

WASHINGTON, February 24.—The proclamation of Secretary Proctor's amnesty to deserters is in the judge advocate general's office, where the legal aspects of the case are being considered. A report from the Fort Leavenworth military prison shows that of the 550 prisoners at that institution, 423 are serving time for desertion. The secretary has not yet decided to what date amnesty will be extended. It is not improbable that all deserters prior to December 31, 1889 will be pardoned.

Electric Light Works Burned.

FREEPORT, ILLS., February 24.—The electric light works in this city, both arc and incandescent, were destroyed by fire at 2 o'clock in the morning. The loss is between $30,000 and $35,000. Insurance $3,000. The streets will be in darkness until the works can be rebuilt, which will take from two to three months.

Pell Secures Bail.

NEW YORK, February 24.—Broker George H. Pell, the alleged bank wrecker, has secured bail and was released from jail. His condsmen are his brother Charles, T. L. Meyer, president of the Meyer Lighterage Company, and Theodore Squire.

DR. ERASMUS MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

RAISING CATTLE FOR BEEF.

A Paper Read Before the Farmers' Institute in January, by J. D. Shull, of Tecumseh.

Either through compliment, courtesy or misapprehension, our genial friend Mills invited me to participate in this discussion. In the belief that his invitation was prompted by personal friendship, it was at first, courteously declined. This however didn't end the matter. With that open-faced, patent-lever, genuine American "get there" movement, characteristic of Mills, he assigned me a topic, and politely solicited a paper. The man's persistency could be accounted for, only upon the theory of misapprehension. He was evidently laboring under a delusion. You remember it has frequently been asserted that during the administration of president Grant, he once said—that if we had a bad law, the proper plan for the executive was to have it rigidly enforced, thereby insuring its repeal.

Pursuing the same line of thought. I reached the conclusion that by complying with this request, my friend, the secretary would more speedily be convinced of his error in selection.

The text assigned me: "Must the farmers of Michigan cease to raise cattle for beef?" is important and far-reaching. It has perplexed the brains of many farmers in each of the 82 counties of the commonwealth. It is not a great moral question either, any further than in the abstruse relation which poverty bears to crime. It appeals, not to our consciences, but to something equally sensitive with many of us—our pocket books. Unless the same subject has also been assigned to some one else, I am to act as both judge and jury in the case. Considering the importance of the interests involved, it is well that this is not a court of last resort, for my justness as a judge and impartiality as a jury may be somewhat warped by a prejudice, born of a legitimate love for cattle culture. My knowledge and experience in regard to farm affairs is somewhat limited, and of recent acquisition. It does not extend away back into the 40s, to the time of my birth, but only throughout the last six years. Prior to that, it had been a cherished desire with me to some day become an agriculturalist. My natural inclinations in this line were further, and perhaps unnaturally stimulated by the perusal of agricultural journals and other farm literature, I was chock full of maxims and texts laudatory of the independence and nobility of rural avocations. To use a modern classicism, I had it bad, and was fully imbued with the idea "that he who causes two blades of grass to grow where but one grew before, is a public benefactor." I will not now deny the general truth of the main proposition, but in the light of recent events think it matters materially, as to what kind, and where the grass is grown. I have sometimes succeeded, without half trying, in having double the quantity of June and other wild grasses grow among the corn in fields which former farmers kept clean. But from the remarks of friends and neighbors this achievement was not regarded as a "howling success." It did not seem to materialize into a public benefit, or crystallize into private profit. Suffice it to say that when I began farming my dream of success and prosperity centured mainly on stock raising; and in the animal kingdom cattle constituted the great central sun, about which in subordinate positions all others were grouped. And it so happened that dairying was not the branch that claimed my attention. The fawn-like, mild eyed Jerseys were pretty, and picturesque as seen grazing upon a lawn; but I had no fancy for churning by hand power, dog power, tread mill, or wind-mill so butter making was not considered. The stately, mottled Holsteins were beautiful to gaze upon when wading in clover up to their knees, and had surprising records in "giving down" great pails full of milk, but I knew nothing of cheese manufacture, and not wishing to drive a milk wagon they were discarded. It was cattle for beef, that I was after, and for which my dispositions were accordingly made. The relative merits of Short Horn Durhams Polled Angus, Herefords, Holsteins, Devons and Galloways were duly considered, and finally, a choice made of the red, white and roan descendants of the famous short horned Hubback, as improved by the Collings, the Booths, and Bates. The wisdom of this selection it is not necessary here to consider. I will say, however, that the result as to quantity and quality was satisfactory, and had the average prices of 1884-85 been maintained, a fair revenue realized. But as we all know, these prices have not been maintained; and hence this paper. Yet in face of all facts, discouraging, and otherwise, if a categorical answer is to be made as to whether "the farmers of Michigan must cease to raise cattle for beef" I would unhesitatingly answer, no. There is no denying that present prices do not warrant such answer. I know an intelligent farmer, a close buyer, and a good seller, who bought a lot of fall calves in the spring of '88, at seven dollars per head, and in the fall of '89, after keeping them in fair condition through one winter and two summers he offered them for $20 per head and failed to get it. I also know a farmer who in the fall of '88 had a lot of calves for which he refused five or six dollars a piece when four weeks old. He has kept them a year, and now although in good store condition, I doubt if the lot can be sold for an average of over $10 a head. Such increase in value certainly is not commensurate with the cost of keeping, and if the conditions responsible therefor are to be permanent, then a different answer would have to be given. Michigan farmers would have to discontinue growing cattle for beef. But I do not believe these conditions will be permanent or much longer continue, or at any rate, not long enough to drive us wholly out of the field. This is simply my opinion. I will now tell you on what it is based. It is mainly this: If we in Michigan must give up growing beef cattle all New England and the Middle Atlantic States will be driven to the same line of action. Not one of the Southern States east of the Mississippi can grow beef profitably when Michigan can not. Neither can Ohio, Ind. Wis. or Ills. This comprises all the states east of the Missouri river. And now let us consider the first tier of states west of the great father of waters. From North to South they are Minn., Iowa, Mo., Ark., and part of La. Even their advantages for beef production are not so very much superior to ours. Now I am of the opinion that a majority of our people under estimate the beef production of the states east of the Miss., and over estimate it for the states and territories west of it.

OBITUARY.

We clip the following from a Carson City, Nevada, paper of recent date:

"Died, in this city, Jan. 24, 1890, M. M. Hyde, a native of Tecumseh, Mich., aged 49 years. M. M. Hyde, master car builder of the U. & T. R. R. and a member of the Board of City Trustees, died a few minutes before three o'clock this morning, at his home in this city, from pneumonia. Deceased was first taken down with the prevailing influenza, which was succeeded by pneumonia, and despite the best medical aid and nursing he succumbed to the dreaded malady. Mr. Hyde has been connected with the U. & T. R. R. machine shops in the capacity of overseeing carpenter and car builder for fourteen years. He was a very superior workman and greatly esteemed by his employers, as well as by the community at large. He leaves a devoted wife, son and daughter to mourn his untimely taking off. The funeral will be conducted by Carson Lodge No. 1, F. and A. M., of which he was an active member, and will take place on Sunday."

Myron M. Hyde will be remembered by many of our older residents as the youngest son of Morris Hyde. He was born May 3, 1841, and his youth and early manhood were passed in Tecumseh, where he acquired a good common schooling. In 1860 he went to California, returning in 1864. In 1875 he went to Nevada and settled at Carson City, where he has since resided. He possessed a talent for mechanical labor, which always insured him steady employment at the highest wages. A life of usefulness and honor has been cut short in its prime by his untimely death. The friends of his boyhood here in Tecumseh had viewed with pride his success in life, and they will sincerely sympathize with his father's family in their bereavement.

RECESS.

Then followed the discussion of the question, Resolved—That the farmers of to-day are more prosperous than they were twenty-five years ago. G. W. Allen, aff; S. N. Munger, neg. The question was well discussed by both sides and was so near a tie there was some delay in deciding it. It was finally decided in favor of the negative. The Society then adjourned to meet in two weeks at E. J. Whelan's. The question for discussion is, Resolved—That the government should be at the expense of building the public roads. Cecil Billington, aff; George Taylor, neg.

One of the best family residences in Tecumseh will be sold for two-thirds of its cost if taken soon. For particulars enquire at this office.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS.

The hospitable home of Isaac C. Hendershot, Esq., in the town of Macon, was the scene of a most happy social event on Wednesday evening, Feb. 19th, on which occasion his niece, Miss Laura B. Dildine, was united in marriage to Darius C. Hendershot. One hundred and fifty guests were present to witness the nuptials, and many more who were invited were detained at home by the inclement weather and the horrible condition of the roads. Promptly at eight o'clock the bridal party appeared in the parlor and took their station beneath an evergreen arch and floral horse shoe, made from flowers sent by friends in Denver, Col. and Ithaca, Ind. The bride was neatly attired in white faille silk, brocaded front and beaded with pearls, en train, with corsage boquet of Marechal Niel roses, and boquet of the same in her hand. The first maid, Miss Clara Hendershot, was attired in a light blue silk, with pink roses. The second maid, Miss Persis Rimert, was attired in a white dress, with white roses. The groom was dressed in plain black. John Dildine, of Mason, Mich., and C. J. Hendershot, of Denver, Col., officiated as groomsmen. The nuptial ceremony was performed by Rev. W. H. Babbitt in a few well chosen words, and the congratulations of the company followed. The remainder of the evening was most happily spent, in discussing the viands provided for the inner man, in social converse, music and mirth. The entire affair was admirably planned and most effectively carried out in every detail. The bride has for several months filled the position of saleslady in Anderson & Co.'s store. The groom is one of the most promising young men of our neighboring township. Both of them have hosts of friends through this section, who will bid them a hearty "God-speed" as they embark upon life's voyage together. The beautiful array of wedding gifts, comprising articles ornamental, useful and novel, was a testimonial of the esteem of their friends more emphatic than words alone can express. The happy pair left Thursday afternoon for Pennsylvania, where they will spend the honeymoon at the bride's old home. Upon their return they will take up their permanent residence in Macon.

THE WASHINGTON ENTERTAINMENT.

The entertainment given last Saturday by the W. C. T. U., at Dr. H. L. Stewart's, was a most enjoyable occasion. At early supper time the crowd began to assemble and for nearly two hours the company filled the tables, three in number. Oysters were served at one table and the usual refreshments at the two others. Dr. Stewart and Mrs. N. M. Sutton were attired in costumes of "ye olden time," to represent General and Lady Washington, and they filled the role of host and hostess during the evening in a most acceptable manner. After refreshments were disposed of, most of the company remained to listen to a fine literary program, presented mostly by the little folks. The receipts of the evening added a goodly sum to the W. C. T. U. treasury.

THE PROGRAM.

Instrumental music—Gertrude Fisher.
Address of Welcome—Julia Brown.
Little Blossom—Ina Elliott.
Vocal Solo—Edna Potter.
An Appeal to Voters—Lena Wyrill.
What will you have?—Stella Beneway.
Song—Etta and Edgar Coddington.
Temperance man—Eddie Beneway.
Duet—Etta Thorp and Grace Heck.
I'll take what Father takes—Lonnie Jones.

The exercises closed with a vocal solo by Mrs. Bidwell.

The children, who contributed so much to the entertainment of the evening, were members of Miss Kyle's room.

TECUMSEH AND FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB

On the evening of February 19th this society met at Mr. Langton's, although the attendance was small. All present enjoyed a short literary program and a pleasant box social. Next meeting at the home of Mr. Philip Pentecost, March 5th. Program of the evening:

Singing by the choir.
Rec.—Clarence Hurry.
Reading—Mrs. Munger.
Dialogue—Frank and Jennie Osborn.
Song—Mrs. Wm. Waldron.
Alphabetical Rhymes—Mrs. VanValkenburg.
Essay—Adah Waldron.
Dec.—Fred Welch.
Question—How far is it advisable for wives to be conversant with the details of the farm? Ladies and gentlemen will please come prepared to say something on this question.

MRS. HURRY, Sec.

"MY STORY OF THE WAR."

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore's Famous Book.

We regard this splendid book as a wholly unique work, for it presents the womanly, or what may very appropriately be termed the heavenly side of the war, and this has never hitherto been written.

But the illustrations! An able critic recently said: "This is the most richly embellished work ever published in America." We endorse this opinion There are splendid steel-plate portraits of famous nurses of Union soldiers, and many plates illustrating hospital scenes and thrilling incidents in a woman's army life. No newspaper description can do these costly plates justice. They must be seen to be appreciated. There are also splendid fac simile plates of famous old battle flags, from photograps and paintings made from the original flags, printed in sixteen colors from one hundred and twenty-eight engraved stones. The story of each flag is told, with pathetic incidents attending the death of color bearers who died under their folds.

The FORUM

A MONTHLY REVIEW OF LIVING SUBJECTS

By the Foremost Writers in the World.

THE FORUM has won the highest place reached by any periodical; for it publishes articles by more authoritative writers and by more workers along instructive lines of activity than any other publication. It contains eleven studies of great subjects every month. It is impartial, giving hearings alike to each side. It is financially independent, and it belongs to no section or party or "interest." It is never sensational, but it aims always to be instructive.

The FORUM is of great value to that part of my college work which deals with practical politics and current questions. Two sets are hardly enough for daily use by students.—Prof. ALFRED BUSHNELL HART, of Harvard.

I consider THE FORUM as furnishing the most intelligent and sympathetic audience that a thoughtful writer can find to address in any land.—Prof. ALEXANDER WINCHELL, of the University of Michigan.

THE FORUM continues to hold its place as the foremost of our magazines, for the variety, the value, and the weight of its contributions.—THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There has come forward no problem of grave importance since THE FORUM was established that has not been discussed in its pages by masters of the subject. Announcements of forthcoming articles can seldom be made long in advance, for THE FORUM'S discussions are always of problems of present concern. Every such problem that the year 1890 will bring forward will be discussed, whether in politics, or religion, or social science, or practical affairs. The January number will contain a reply by ex-Speaker J. G. CARLISLE to Senator Cullom's recent article on "How the Tariff Affects the Farmer."

ALBERT J. SLAIGHT, Executor.

Village election next Monday.

DeWitt Tallman tapped his sugar bush last week and is making a very superior article of syrup.

James M. Erskine has our thanks for late Dakota papers. Jim's new town that he started up there is booming.

Mr. and Mrs. Darius C. Hendershot will please accept the thanks of the Herald boys for that box of wedding cake.

The Theo. P. Wood Dramatic Company will give their first entertainment at the Tecumseh Opera House on Monday evening, March 17th.

The Prohibitionists held a caucus last evening and placed in nomination the following village ticket to be supported at the charter election next Monday.

President—Homer L. Stewart.
Recorder—Harry Tansley.
Treasurer—C. E. Williamson.
Trustees—M. J. Tremaine, M. P. Brown, Charles E. Eldridge.
Assessors—James D. Sholes, Samuel McClure.

An old bachelor down in York State has recently eloped with another man's wife and six children. It is little episodes like this which reconcile many people to the theological dogma that there is no punishment after death.

Mrs. D. W. Clark received news last Saturday of the death of Miss Ida A. Lamb's father at Washington Mich. Miss Lambs friends will all sympathise with her in this great affliction. She is now teaching at Greenville Mich.

Frank Kinney of Cambridge walked off with the biscuit at the State Dairymen's Association taking both prizes on butter. The first was a Jackson refrigerator worth twenty eight dollars and the second a lightning heater and cooker worth thirteen dollars.

A company has been formed under the name of the Lenawee Hydrogen Burner Co. to sell rights for the water funel which was on exhibition last week at J. C. Eccles shop. The company controls Lenawee and Hillsdale counties, and will commence operations early in March.

Chas. E. Barry opens the Clark grocery store to day. The store has been cleaned and painted throughout, and presents a very neat appearance. Joe VanNess will help deal out sugar and coffee at present. We bespeak for the new proprietor a fair share of patronage.

Chicago got there on the eight ballot. The final bill is yet to be passed but it will undoubtedly go through all right, notwithstanding some opposition, to any government appropriation. It is reasonably safe to predict however that a World's Fair will be held in Chicago in 1892. Western pluck and grit have won the day.

Do you want your daughters to learn how to cook? Then start them in with the Cooking Class commenced in the March number of Demorest's Family Magazine. The articles carry the "Cooking Class" right into your own kitchen, for the editor tells us that these lessons are identical with the instruction given to her class by the head instructor of one of the large cooking classes in New York City.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Another January thaw.

Rev. F. Adkins filled the Presbyterian pulpit last Sabbath.

Sam James spent last Sabbath with his Tecumseh friends.

The village registration board will meet in the Council rooms next Saturday.

L. P. Tribou visited friends in Detroit and Toledo last Saturday and Sunday.

Both banks were closed last Saturday in commemoration of Washington's birth day.

Grand Lecturer Arthur M. Clark will visit the Adrian Masonic Lodge on March 6th.

Prof. W. C. Hopkins, the principal of the Clinton High School, was in town last Saturday.

A. L. Symonds, of Allen's Hill, Ontairo Co., N. Y. is spending a couple of weeks with friends in Tecumseh.

A. W. Miller has returned from a few weeks visit with his brother, Dr. Thomas Miller, at Washington, D. C.

We have a copy of the "Angelus" framed and hung in our counting room. People are invited to call and examine this beautiful picture.

The national colors were proudly floating from the flag staffs of the Central and East branch schools last Saturday.

The, windows of Lilley, Bidwell & Co's. bank were tastily decorated with flags and flowers in honor of Washington's birth day.

The corporation caucus to nominate a ticket to be supported next Monday will be held at the Council rooms next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A donation party for the benefit of Rev. A. W. Stalker will be held at Edwin Howell's in Macon on Thursday evening, March 6th.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren VanAntwerp, of Deerfield, were the guests of R. C. VanAntwerp and family over Sunday.

Levi Stevens made a flying trip home last Monday. He is setting down to business in his new position first rate and is well pleased with it thus far.

Wm. Gray is enthusiastic over his trip to Ionia last week to attend the state Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows. There were nearly one thousand delegates and visitors in attendance.

The foundations for the engine and boiler for the Table factory are nearly completed, and the engine and boiler will soon be placed in position.

The noon train north on the Jackson branch beat the season's record last Saturday by being four hours late. It is frequently two or three hours late.

A special school meeting will be held next Monday evening to consider the question of purchasing new heating and ventilating apparatus for the East Branch school.

Chauncey M. Depew in the characteristic pose of an after dinner speaker will be the subject of a full page drawing from life, by T. de Thurlstrup, to be published in Harper's Weekly, Feb. 26th.

Harry Martin, who for the past year has been clerking in D. Nissly's store in Saline, has taken a similar position in Anderson's dry goods store in Tecumseh. Harry will make a valuable addition to the corps of clerks at Anderson's.

J. C. Eccles had quite an attraction at his tailor shop last week, in the shape of a water burner for a stove. By the mixture of water and oil a hydrogen gas is formed which makes an intense heat. The apparatus can be attached to any ordinary cook stove, and is operated as easily as a gasoline stove.

The masquerade dance at Cheever's hall last Friday evening was a rouser. The music was good, the hall was crowded, and the dancers were happy. Some of the masquer's rigs were "perfectly killing." The head set, about nine o'clock, beat anything this town has seen for a long time. The affair was a success financially also.

The following letters are held at the Tecumseh post office for better direction: Chas. Breittin, Mich.—Dr L. B. Hartman, 241 & 243 4th St., O.—Miss Eliza Anderson, 33 Montcalm St., West.—Mrs. Chas Westfall, Perrinsville, Wayne Co, Mich. The persons who wrote these letters are requested to call at the Postoffice and correct the address.

Three papers under one general head, "The New Nationalism," will appear in the March issue of Belford's Magazine as the leading article. The great and constantly increasing body who are interested in the great social and governmental questions of the hour will find the newest phase of these questions intelligently discussed by J. W. Wakeman, Rev. Edward Hale, and Hon. Wm. McAdoo.

Work on the M. E. parsonage is progressing right along now.

Sew on your vest buttons tight before going to hear Little Trixie.

The Sherwood recital has been fixed for Saturday evening, March 8th.

Miss Gertrude Anderson has returned from a visit of several weeks in New York.

J. S. Kinney has something to say this week about his grand closing out sale of furniture.

The G. A. R. Post has issued some neat little pocket cards containing a calender of their meetings during 1890, for distribution among their members.

We call attention to the official notice of the Special School Meeting next Monday evening. There should be a full attendance.

The University calendar for the present college year, now almost completed, will show a total attendance this year to March 1, of 2166 students.

Save your spare change to go to the Sherwood piano recital on Saturday evening of next week, March 8th. The people of Tecumseh seldom have an opportunity of witnessing an entertainment of this character.

Our Clinton patrons can hereafter leave locals, ads, printing etc., designed for the HERALD, at Lancaster's store. Our Clinton news will not be confined to the general township collection, but will be awarded the eighth page hereafter.

Every friend and patron of the public school should make it his business to attend the special school meeting next Monday evening. The East branch building is sadly in need of a new heating apparatus, and some action should be taken to supply it.

Miny Hughes, having succeeded in getting himself pretty well advertised, has turned up at Sacramento. It is not known that he had any trouble with anyone. He was probably seized with an ambition to travel.

Chas Albaugh went to Lansing last Tuesday as a delegate from Tecumseh Council Royal Templars to the State Grand Council which is held this week in that city. He will be gone about three days.

Chas. Skinner, Jr., left home Saturday for Jackson where he will join Church's band, which leaves for New Orleans to travel with a circus. He will play the baritone horn. Charley is a very skillful player on that instrument, and was one of our best musicians. The band will miss him very much, but the boys would like to see him succeed in his new role.

The Little Trixie Musical Comedy opened to a crowded house at the Grand, and they made a great hit. The play, "Little Trixie, the Romp Heiress," was presented in good style and the specialty features called forth repeated applause. Each of the participants in the role did their parts creditably.—Kalamazoo Gazette.

G. A. R. attention! At the last regular meeting of Beer's Post, No. 140, the by-laws were so amended that the regular meetings will be held on the first and third Monday evenings of each month hereafter. The next regular meeting will occur on Monday evening March 3rd. The monthly social will be held March 17th. By order of,

A. P. CODDINGTON, Commander.
J. M. INGERSOLL, Adjutant.

A public entertainment will be given at Grange Hall in Macon, Sat. evening, March 1, commencing at 7:30 P. M. Program will consist of readings, recitations, songs, violin, cornet and organ solos. Recess, during which maple sugar will be served in the lower hall. Afterwards a play and tableau will be given. Admission 10 cents. Sugar supper 10 cents.

Now that Wm. H. Sherwood has set an example to the musical world by coming to Chicago to take a place at the head of the piano department of the Chicago Conservatory, this city will assume a new position. Instead of a field for recruiting students, it will be a centre of attraction for all pianists. The change is already shown by the number of people from New York and Boston who have already entered as students of the Conservatory, and is a good omen for the art future of this city.—Chicago Times.

Nearly one year ago, the Juvenile Dramatic Society under the management of Theo. P. Wood, made its first appearance before a Tecumseh audience in that glorious old temperance drama, Ten Nights in a Bar Room, and were greeted with a full house. When the curtain fell on the final scene, the universal verdict was that it was a grand success. Now the society, having strengthened and reorganized its company by the selection of some excellent amateur talent, and having succeeded in securing the services of Mr. Wood as general manager, will present another of the series of temperance plays to our people in the very near future. From the fact that Mr. Wood is an indefatigable worker who will spare no pains to make the next entertainment equal if not superior to the last, it is safe to say to our people that a rich treat awaits them.

Little Trixie Saturday night.

The soft weather still sticks.

Sherwood Recital. Saturday March 8th.

All roads will lead to Chicago in 1892.

Miss. Mary Gray is spending the present week with her sister Mrs. Jos Rynd of Madison.

John J. Orr visited Adrian on business last Tuesday.

Prof. Sherwood's piano recital will be something that every resident of Tecumseh ought to hear.

The new two cent postage stamp has made its appearance. It is a fine design.

N. M. Sutton attended the Michigan Club banquet at Detroit last Friday and remained over the Sabbath with Mr. F. C. Stoepel's family.

Wm. McCowen is still on deck and has a change of card in this week's paper.

Mrs. Frank Wood of Devils Lake came down yesterday to see her father Alva Raymond, and will remain the balance of the week.

Col. McCreery of Flint has been appointed consul at Valparaiso, the place now filled by Col. James W. Romeyn.

There will be services at the Universalist Church next Sunday morning and evening at the usual hours.

The subject of discourse at the Presbyterian Church next Sunday night by the Pastor will be, "The Sketch of a noble life" being that of John Coleridge Patteson, Bishop of Melanesia.

Jones and Hazlett have now in stock a large supply of Spring suitings, which they offer at lower prices than ever. Examine their new announcement on the first page.

Levi Stevens is packing up his household effects this week prepartory to moving his family to Detroit. His father, Asahel Stevens, will go to Detroit also and make his home with Levi.

It is hoped that every member of Co. C. 1st. Reg, M. S. Troops will be present at the drill next Tuesday evening, because some important suggestions as amendments to the By-Laws will be under discussion and it is to the interest of all members to be on hand and air their views. Your attendance is earnestly solicited.

"With the accession of William H. Sherwood to the Chicago Conservatory faculty, as head of the piano department, this city assumes a new position in the musical world. Instead of students flocking to New York and Boston for instruction in piano playing, the travel will turn the other way. Indeed, the change is already apparent, many pupils from the East as well as from the South and West, having arranged to attend the Conservatory this winter.—Chicago Herald.

The Lantern is the name of a new weekly publication at Chicago, in which an old townsman J. M. Fuller, now of New York City, is interested.

The Times says:—Levi B. Stevens, a former employee of the Tecumseh Herald office, has secured a position as proof reader on the Detroit Free Free Press. With a Lenawee county proof reader, the F. P. should be as clean as a new sheet." That is true. By the way, the Free Press has a strong Lenawee contingent now—Milo Dole, Levi B. Stevens and Fred Gray.

HUMAN NATURE.

If you are interested in the study of HUMAN NATURE and Character, and the improvement of yourself and others in any way, we would like to call your attention to the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL AND SCIENCE OF HEALTH, a well-known magazine which has been published for fifty years, and is devoted to all that will improve men Mentally, Morally, or Physically. It is the only magazine of its kind published in this country, and in every way the most important.

The specialty of PORTRAITS of distinguished, or notorious persons, with studies of their character and sketches of their lives, which has always been a marked and attractive feature of the JOURNAL, will still lead the host of good things prepared for the reader.

No one can study themselves or others and not be greatly benefited by the results, and therefore no one can afford NOT to read the JOURNAL. A knowledge of HUMAN NATURE would enable us to understand ourselves and others and to avoid many of the disappointments in life.

TERMS.—Monthly at $2 a year, or 20 cents a Number. To each new subscriber is given either the PHRENOLOGICAL BUST or NEW PHRENOLOGICAL CHART Premium. When the premiums are sent, 15 cents extra must be received with each subscription to pay postage on the JOURNAL and the expense of boxing and packing the Bust, which will be sent by express, or No. 2, a smaller size, or the Chart Premium, will be sent by mail, postpaid. Send 10 cents for specimen Numbers, Premium List, Posters, Catalogue of books, etc. Address

EXPLOSION.

Death Dealt Among Packing House Hands.

A BOILER IN A BATTERY OF NINE AT OMAHA LETS GO

Killing Four Men and Seriously Injuring Many More—Terrible Scenes About the Place.

OMAHA, NEB., February 24.—Saturday morning an explosion occurred at the Armour-Cudahy packing house at South Omaha, which resulted in the instant death of at least one man, the subsequent death of another, and which may be followed by the death of others. The explosion occurred in the boiler room of the old packing house. There is located a battery of nine boilers, two of which are reserves. The outside boiler of this battery burst, tearing great holes in the walls of the machinery department adjoining. The noise of the explosion soon attracted the great army of packing-house employes to the scene, where, beneath the ruins, perhaps twenty-five men lay wounded. An alarm of fire was promptly sounded, and the fire department soon arrived on the scene, joining forces with the Armour-Cudahy fire department, and the two soon quelled the flames. A crowd of 100 went to work on the debris, hurriedly working to relieve the sufferers, and in a short time had the dead and injured removed and taken to St. Joseph's hospital.

The following is a list of the dead and injured: Jack Tigh, head fireman, instantly killed; Hans Oleson, coal wheeler, died from inhaling hot air; Samuel Gibson, burned about the head and face, will probably die; Ed. Miskel was taken from the ruins with a fractured skull and severely burned, he will die; James Black was severely burned and his skull fractured, he will probably die; James Sheridan was badly scalded about the head and neck, his relations live in Chicago; Al. Harder was scalded and burned, but his injuries are not regarded as serious; James McGuire was severely burned about the hands and head; George J. Meahan was burned about the head and eyes; J. Lanahan has not been found, and at last accounts was believed to be dead and lying beneath the ruins; Mike Harrahan was badly burned about the head and hands; James Armstrong was burned badly about the head.

Other men injured were: —— Leonard, Billy Dunklin, John Peterson and Daniel Harland. Many others were slightly injured. Many narrowly escaped from the falling walls.

The cause of the explosion is yet to be determined, but it is probable that the wall of the boiler room caused the explosion by falling on the boiler. The loss reaches many thousand dollars.

A FATAL SCARE.

Ex-Treasurer of Mississippi Hemingway Does Not Owe the State Anything, the Balance Being the Other Way.

JACKSON, MISS., February 24.—Majority and minority reports were made by the legislative committee appointed to examine the office of the state treasurer. The reports do not differ materially. They express the opinion that when Hemingway is credited with $105,550 paid out by him for coupons in 1876, and for which no credit can be found on his general books, it will be found the state owes him over $2,000.

Another Account.

JACKSON, MISS., February 24.—A hasty examination was made Saturday by the committee of the legislature, of the books and accounts of Col. Hemingway, ex treasurer of the state. According to the statement made by the committee, and the expert accountants employed, the state owes Hemingway a little over $2,000, and thus the matter stands until a thorough investigation of the treasurer's and auditor's books can be made by a commission heretofore appointed for that purpose. Although the examination made is not final, yet it is confidently believed Col. Hemingway will be fully exonerated when the examination is completed.

FAITH CURISTS MOBBED.

An Allen County Mob Disperses the New Religionists.

LIMA DEPOT, O., February 24.—Several weeks ago a company of faith cure advocates came to Uniopolis, this county, and commenced advocating their religion. Their doctrines did not meet with the approval of the community, and they were given three days in which to leave the town. They paid no attention to the warning and held their meetings as usual until Friday night, when a mob visited the building during the service and surrounding the structure commenced storming the house. The assembly was broken up, several of the converts injured and the leaders driven from the house and run out of town. They were not even given time to collect their wearing apparel. The excuse for breaking up the meeting was brought about by a boy breaking his leg, refusing medical attention and depending entirely on the faith cure. The boy grew gradually worse and died.

FOREPAUGH'S SHOW.

Syndicate of British Capitalists Get Scooped by Cooper.

PHILADELPHIA, February 24.—The syndicate of English capitalists who have been negotiating for the past several months for the purchase of the great Forepaugh show, were yesterday routed from the field by a citizen of Philadelphia, Mr. James E. Cooper, to whom the executors of the Forepaugh estate, in consideration of a princely sum, have transferred the entire vast circus plant and title of the late Adam Forepaugh.

The purchaser, Mr. Cooper, was the senior member of the circus firm of Cooper and Bailey. The show will be managed by Adam Forepaugh, jr., and John A. Forepaugh, son and nephew of the deceased Adam Forepaugh. At the conclusion of the engagement here, May 1, the show will make a tour of the eastern states.

INTERNATIONAL RAILROAD.

The Pan-American Conference Recommends a Commission of Engineers to Report on the Project.

NEW YORK, February 24.—The Herald's Washington special says that at the session of the Pan-American conference the committee on railroads reported, recommending the appointment of a commission of engineers to examine into and report upon the feasibility of the construction of an international railroad to connect all or a majority of the nations represented in this conference—the road to be subsidized by the different governments interested.

SILCOTT'S FRENCH BEAUTY.

Herminie Thiebault Appears in Washington, But the Cashier is Far Away.

WASHINGTON, February 22.—A detective last night left Washington with Miss Thiebault, Silcott's companion in his flight from this city, and will keep close to her in hopes of coming up with Silcott in that way.

Sergeant-at-Arms Leedom was informed that Miss Thiebault was to visit Washington yesterday. He consulted with the district attorney to see if she could be detained, and found that there was nothing to hold her on.

Mr. Leedom got a letter from a United States detective at Victoria, stating that he had seen Silcott there on January 18, and that he thought he had seen him the night before the letter was written. The detective knew Silcott the first time he saw him, but was not so certain of the identity of the man he saw at the latter date. He thought it was Silcott and that he had changed his appearance. The letter says that when Silcott was there on January 18 he was seeking passage to China.

It was stated that one purpose of Herminie Thiebault's visit to Washington, was to draw a sum of money she had on deposit at the National Savings Bank. A reporter called at the National Savings Bank and asked the paying teller whether Herminie Thiebault called there for the purpose of drawing out money that she had deposited.

The paying teller said that the officials of the bank had been instructed to answer no questions, and he would say nothing about the matter.

LEPROSY PLAGUE

MAKING FEARFUL RAVAGES IN CALEDONIA.

Over Three Thousand Cases Said to Exist Among the Natives and Convicts—Louise Michel, the Noted Anarchist Goes as a Nurse.

LOUISE MICHEL.

LONDON, February 22.—Leprosy is making terrible progress in New Caledonia, and there are now over three thousand cases among the natives and convicts. A dispatch from Paris says that Louise Michel, the noted anarchist, has announced her intention of going to New Caledonia as a nurse.

NEARING THE END.

GENERAL F. E. SPINNER, EX-TREASURER OF THE U. S.,

A Victim of a Cancer in the Face, Which is Likely to Make Short Work of Him—He is Past Eighty Years of Age.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., February 22.—Gen. Francis E. Spinner, ex-United States treasurer, writes from Jacksonville, Fla., that the cancer on his face is rapidly getting worse, and it is not likely his life will be spared much longer. The general was eighty-eight years old on January 21. His eyesight is much affected.

Indiana Prohibitionists.

INDIANAPOLIS, February 22.—The Prohibitionists at their state convention nominated the following ticket: Secretary of state, B. M. Blont, Marion county; auditor, Abraham Huntsinger, St. Joseph county; treasurer, John E. Branson, Hendricks county; attorney general, Sumner Haines Jay county; superintendent of public instruction, L. M. Crist, Boon county; clerk supreme court, C. T. Jessup, Hendricks county; supreme court judge, fifth district, S. J. North, Kosciusko county. Their platform declares against local option and favors the exemption from taxation of clothes and necessities of life. A reduction of the salaries of county officers is favored.

THE COULTER TRIAL

Still Draws Large Crowds at Zanesville.

ZANESVILLE, O., February 22.—The trial of Ewing Coulter for murder still draws immense crowds at the court house here. Of those present today fully seventy-five were ladies. The State put Coulter's 13-year old daughter, referred to in these dispatches yesterday as present at the trial, on the stand. She said that when her father loaded his gun that morning her mother said "You'll be sorry for this." The State put on Mrs. Haben, wife and some of the children of the murdered man, who gave sensational testimony.

APPROPRIATED THE FUNDS.

A Delegate to Rome Concludes Not to Go.

BUFFALO, N. Y., February 22.—One of the delegates sent to Rome by the disgruntled congregation of St. Adelbert's Roman Catholic church here, has been found at Mount Pleasant, Pa., with funds amounting to thousand dollars in his possession which the congregation had given him to defray his expenses.

TERRIBLE FLOODS.

Vast Districts in California Are Submerged.

HURON, CALA., February 22.—A terrible flood struck this place yesterday. The flooded district is two miles wide and fifteen long. Six miles of track between here and Lemoore are under running water. The damage to Huron and vicinity is $10,000.

POISONED COFFEE.

Startling Sensation Reported From Ironton, O.

IRONTON, O., February 22.—Mrs. J. H. McIntosh and daughter, of Pine Grove, were poisoned this morning by rough on rats in their coffee. It is believed to be a case of murder.

JESUS VISITS NAZARETH.

LESSON IX, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 2.

Text of the Lesson, Luke iv, 16-32—Commit Verses 18-21—Golden Text, John i, 11—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

16. "And He came to Nazareth, where He had been brought up." After the temptation in the wilderness he returned to where John was baptizing, and John pointed Him out as the Lamb of God. Andrew and Simon, Philip and Nathaniel are the first to follow Him. Having returned into Galilee, He and His mother, and His disciples attend a marriage at Cana, where He works His first miracle. He visits Capernaum and soon after journeys to Jerusalem to keep the Passover. There He cleanses the temple, receives Nicodemus by night and tells him of the necessity of the new birth. On His way home He stops at Samaria and talks with the woman at the well. He returns to Cana where He had made the water into wine, and there He healed the nobleman's son who was sick at Capernaum. All these events intervene between the last lesson and this one, and are consecutively recorded in John i, 19; iv, 54. Then He came to Nazareth, his native town, and as His custom was, He went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day. Nathaniel's question, "Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?" (John i, 46) seems to imply that Nazareth had a very poor reputation, and yet in this unenviable place the Son of God lived thirty years. The power of a holy life must be within us, not around us.

17. "There was delivered unto Him the book of the prophet Isaiah." He did not open it carelessly, but no doubt with the greatest reverence. Whether He read the regular portion for the day or not we are not told; but He unfolded the roll till He found what we call Isa. lxi, 1, and then He read, and He surely read according to Neh. viii, 8: "Distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading."

18. "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me." As in Gen. i, 1, 26, so here we have in few words the doctrine of the Trinity. The Son is reading, and He says that the Spirit of the Father is upon Him, for presently He will tell us that these words concern Himself. This is the fourth reference to the Spirit in this chapter. Jesus is said to be full of the Holy Spirit, to be led by the Spirit, to have returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee, and now He reads from Isaiah words concerning Himself, that the Spirit of the Lord is upon Him. Without being filled, led, controlled by this same Spirit, we are simply "nobodies" in God's sight, and can do nothing pleasing unto Him.

"He hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor." In Isa. lxi, 1, we read "Good tidings unto the meek," indicating that "the poor" does not necessarily refer exclusively to the poor in this world's goods, though as a rule they are more likely to receive the glad tidings than the rich (Luke xviii, 24), but to the meek or poor in spirit (Isa. lvii, 15; lxvi, 2; Matt. v, 3).

"He hath sent me to heal the broken hearted." Steir says that "a broken heart is the foundation of all true theology," and the following texts indicate that such hearts are apt to be very near and dear to God (Ps. xxxiv, 18; li, 17; cxlvii, 3).

"To preach deliverance to the captives," such as the Gadarene demoniac, and the woman bound by Satan eighteen years (Luke viii, 27; xiii, 10), and the multitudes oppressed and led captive by the devil at his will.

"Recovering of sight to the blind." Those both literally and spiritually blind, the latter being in much the worse case (Matt. ix, 27; Mark viii, 22; John ix, 1-40, 41; Rev. iii, 17; Ps. cxix, 18).

"To set at liberty them that are bruised." This may refer more to the bodily afflictions inflicted by Satan, as Luke ix, 39, and the other cases, such as those mentioned under "Captives," while the captives may refer more to the minds and wills controlled by Satan, and may also have a much deeper meaning.

19. "To preach the acceptable year of the Lord." Can there be anything not included in this wonderful commission to this most wonderful man whose name is "Wonderful!" (Isa. ix, 6; Judg. xiii, 18, marg). Is it not all included in one of His far reaching sayings, "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest?" Thank God the acceptable year has not yet passed, but even today it is true that "Now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation." The hour in which the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live, still continues, and whosoever will may take freely (Matt. xi, 28; 2 Cor., vi, 2; John v, 25).

21. "This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears." While all eyes were fastened on Him, He began His discourse with this startling statement, which was equal to saying: "These words which I have just read to you from the prophecy of Isaiah were written, not about himself, but about me, who now sit here before you, and whom you have known so long as simply the Son of Mary, the carpenter of your town (Mark vi, 3); I am the Messiah whom Isaiah foretold."

22. "And all bare him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they said; Is not this Joseph's son?" His full discourse is not given, but as one has said, His words must have been "rich in matter and sweet in manner."

23, 24. "Verily I say unto you, No prophet is accepted in his own country." We have a similar saying to this effect, "Too much familiarity breeds contempt." When we read that at one time "Neither did His brethren believe in Him" (John vii, 5), and at another that His friends said, "He is beside Himself" (Mark iii, 21), we do not wonder so much that His townsmen did not receive Him, for if the hearts of those nearest to Him failed to receive Him, why be astonished at the rest?

25, 27. "A woman that was a widow. Naaman, the Syrian." In reply to their desire for as mighty works at Nazareth as He had done elsewhere, He reminds them that in Elijah's day not every famished household saw a miraculous supply of food; nor in Elisha's day did every leper receive healing, but the favored ones were the widow of Sarepta, and Naaman, the Syrian. God has mercy on whom He will have mercy, and whom He will He hardeneth. He causeth it to rain upon one city, and causeth it not to rain upon another city (Rom. ix, 18; Amos iv, 7). At the same time he will be found of those who seek Him, and none who come to Him will be cast out.

28, 29. "Filled with wrath, * * * thrust Him out of the city, * * * that they might cast Him down headlong." Alas! poor Nazareth! she knew not the time of her visitation.

30, 31. "But He passing through the midst of them went His way." His time to die was not yet, therefore they could not hurt Him. No retaliation, no vengeance, but meekly and quietly He passes from them and goes His way to teach others who will listen to Him. The field is the world, and as His commission was to make it known to all Israel then in the land that the kingdom was at hand, so ours is to preach the gospel in all the world and to every creature.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January, A. D. 1884, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife, of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan, of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A. D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages, on page 591, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1885, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 20th day of January, A. D., 1893, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in Liber 118 of Mortgages, on page 689; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-one and 12-100 Dollars ($1751.12) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that, by virtue of said power of sale, and the statutes of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now, as aforesaid, due and owing on said mortgage, together with interest to accrue thereon, and the costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Thirty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the 21st day of April, A. D. 1896, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan, known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5) town five (5), south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

Dated Jan. 23d, 1896.

CHAPTER XXIX.

THE LEARNED OLYMPUS AT MEMFI; POISONINGS; SPEECH OF ANTONY TO HIS CAPTAINS; PASSING OF ISIS FROM THE LAND OF KHEM.

NOW must I, Harmachis, make speed with this, my task, setting down that which is permitted as shortly as may be, and leaving much untold. For of this am I warned, that Doom draws on and my days are well-nigh sped. After the drawing forth of Antony from the Timonium came that heavy time of quiet which heralds the rising of the desert wind. Antony and Cleopatra once again gave themselves up to luxury, and night by night feasted in splendor at the palace. They sent ambassadors to Cæsar; but Cæsar would have none of them; and, this hope being gone, they turned their minds to the defense of Alexandria. Men were gathered, ships were built and a great force was made ready against the coming of Cæsar.

And now, aided by Charmion, I began my last work of hate and vengeance. Deep I wormed myself into the secrets of the palace, counseling all things for evil. I bade Cleopatra keep Antony gay, lest he should brood upon his sorrows; and thus she sapped his strength and energy with luxury and wine. I gave him of my draughts, draughts that sank his soul in dreams of happiness and power, leaving him to wake to the heavier misery. Soon, without my healing medicine he could not sleep, and, thus, being ever at his side, I bound his weakened will to mine, till at last little would he do if I said not "it is well." Cleopatra, also grown very superstitious, leaned much upon me; for I prophesied falsely to her in secret. Moreover, I wove other webs. Great was my fame throughout Egypt, for during the long years that I had dwelt in Tape it had spread through all the land. Therefore came many men of note to me, both for their health's sake and because it was known that I had the ear of Antony and the Queen; and, in these days of doubt and trouble, fain were they to learn the truth. All these men I worked upon with doubtful words, sapping their loyalty; and many I caused to fall away, and yet none could hear an evil report of what I had said. Moreover, Cleopatra sent me to Memfi, there to move the Priests and Governors that they should gather men in Upper Egypt for the defense of Alexandria. And I went and spoke to the Priests with such a double meaning and with so much wisdom that they knew me to be one of the initiated in the deeper mysteries. But how I, Olympus, the physician, came thus to be initiated none might say. And afterward they sought me secretly, and I gave them the holy sign of brotherhood, and thereunder bade them not to ask who I might be, but send no aid to Cleopatra. Rather, I said, must they make peace with Cæsar, for by Cæsar's grace only could the worship of the Gods endure in Khem. So, having taken counsel of the holy Apis, they promised in public to give help to Cleopatra, but in secret sent an embassy to Cæsar.

Thus then it came to pass that but little aid did Egypt give to its hated Macedonian Queen. Thence from Memfi I came once more to Alexandria, and having made report, continued my secret work. And, indeed, the Alexandrians could not easily be stirred, for, as they say in the market place, "The ass looks at the burden and is blind to the master." So long had Cleopatra oppressed them that the Roman was like a welcome friend.

Thus the time passed on, and every night found Cleopatra with fewer friends than that which had gone before, for in evil days friends fly like swallows before the frost. Yet she would not give up Antony, whom she loved; though to my knowledge did Cæsar, by his freedman, Thyreus, make promise to her of her dominions for herself and for her children if she would but slave Antony, or even betray him bound. But hereunto a woman's heart (for still she had a heart) would not consent, and, therefore, of necessity must we hold him to her, lest, Antony escaping or being slain, Cleopatra might ride out the storm and yet be Queen of Egypt. And this grieved me, because Antony, though weak, was still a brave man and a great; and moreover, in my own heart I read the lesson of his woes. For were we not akin in wretchedness? Had not the same woman robbed us of empire, friends and honor? But pity has no place in politics, nor could it turn my feet from the path of vengeance it was ordained that I should tread. Cæsar drew nigh; Pelusium fell; the end was at hand. 'Twas Charmion who brought the tidings to the Queen and Antony, as they slept in the heat of the day, and with her I came.

"Awake!" she cried. "Awake! This is no time for sleep! Seleucus hath surrendered Pelusium unto Cæsar, who marches straight on Alexandria!"

With a great oath Antony sprang up and clutched Cleopatra by the arm.

"Thou hast betrayed me—by the Gods I swear it! Now thou shalt pay the price!" And snatching up his sword he drew it.

"Stay thy hand, Antony!" she cried. "It is false—naught know I of this!" And she sprang upon him, and clung about his neck, weeping. "Naught know I, my Lord. Take thou the wife of Seleucus and his little children, whom I hold in guard, and avenge thyself. O, Antony! Antony! why dost thou doubt me?"

Then Antony threw down his sword upon the marble, and, casting himself upon the couch, hid his face, and groaned in bitterness of spirit.

But Charmion smiled, for she it was who had sent secretly to Seleucus, her friend, counseling him to surrender forthwith, saying that at Alexandria would no fight be made. And that very night Cleopatra took all her great store of pearls and emeralds—those that remained of the treasure of Menka-ra—all her wealth of gold, ebony, ivory and cinnamon, treasure without price, and placed it in the mausoleum of granite, which, after our Egyptian fashion, she had built upon the hill that is by the Temple of the holy Isis. These riches she piled up upon a bed of flax, that when she fired it all might perish in the flames and escape the greed of money-loving Octavianus. And in this tomb henceforth she slept, away from Antony; but in the day time still she saw him at the palace.

But a little while after, when Cæsar with all his great force had already crossed the Canopic mouth of the Nile, and was hard on Alexandria, I came to the palace whither Cleopatra had summoned me. There I found her in the Alabaster Hall, royally clad, a wild light in her eyes, and with her Iras and Charmion, and before her guards; and stretched here and there upon the marble, bodies of dead men, among whom lay one yet dying.

"Greeting, thou Olympus!" she cried. "Here is a sight to glad a physician's heart—men dead and men sick unto death!"

"What doest thou, O Queen?" I said affrighted.

"What do I? I do justice on these criminals and traitors; and, Olympus, I learn the ways of death. Six different poisons have I caused to be given to these slaves, and with an attentive eye have watched their working. That man," and she pointed to a Nubian, "he went mad and raved of his native deserts and his mother. He thought himself a child again, poor fool! and bade her hold him close to her breast and save him from the darkness which drew near. And that Greek, he shrieked, and shrieking, died. And this he wept and prayed for pity, and in the end, like a coward, breathed his last. Now, note the Egyptian yonder, he who still lives and groans; the first he took the draught—the deadliest draught of all, they swore—and yet the slave so dearly loves his life he will not leave it! See, he yet strives to throw the poison from him; twice have I given him the cup, and yet he is athirst. What a drunkard have we here! Man, man, knowest thou not that in death only can peace be found! Struggle no more, but enter into rest." And even as she spoke, the man, with a great cry, gave up the spirit.

"There!" she cried, "at length the farce is played—away with those slaves whom I forced through the difficult gates of Joy!" and she clapped her hands. But when they had drawn the bodies thence she drew me to her and thus she spoke:

"Olympus, for all thy prophesies, the end is at hand. Cæsar must conquer, and I and my Lord Antony be lost. Now, therefore, the play being well nigh done, must I make ready to leave this stage of earth in such fashion as becomes a Queen. For this cause, then, do I make trial of these poisons, seeing that in my person must I soon endure those agonies of death that to-day I give to others. These drugs please me not; some wrench out the soul with cruel pains and some too slowly work their end. But thou art skilled in the medicines of death. Now, do thou prepare me such a draught as shall, pangless, steal my life away." And as I listened the sense of triumph filled my bitter heart, for I knew now that by my own hand should this ruined woman die and the justice of the Gods be done.

"Spoken like a Queen, O Cleopatra!" I said. "Death shall cure thy ills, and I will brew such a wine as shall draw him down a sudden friend and sink thee in a sea of slumber whence, upon this earth, thou shalt never wake again. Oh! fear not Death.

AS SHE SPOKE, THE MAN, WITH A GREAT CRY, GAVE UP THE SPIRIT.

Death is thy true friend; and, surely, sinless and pure of heart shalt thou pass into the dreadful presence of the Gods!"

She trembled. "And if the heart be not altogether pure, tell me—thou dark man—what then? Nay, I fear not the Gods! for if the Gods of Hell be men, there shall I queen it also. At the least, having once been royal, royal shall I ever be."

And as she spoke, suddenly from the palace gates came a great clamor and the noise of joyful shouting.

"Why, what is this?" she said, springing from her couch.

"Antony! Antony!" rose the cry—"Antony hath conquered!"

Swiftly she turned and ran, her long hair streaming on the wind. I followed her, more slowly, down the great hall, across courtyards to the palace gates. And here she met Antony, riding through them, radiant with smiles and clad in his Roman armor. When he saw her he leaped to the ground, and, all armed as he was, clasped her to his breast.

"What is it?" she cried; "is Cæsar fallen?"

"Nay, not altogether fallen, Egypt; but we have beat his horsemen back to their trenches, and, like the beginning, so shall be the end, for as they say here: 'Where the head goes the tail will follow.' Moreover, Cæsar has my challenge and if he will but meet me hand to hand, soon shall the world see which is the better man, Antony or Octavian." And even as he spoke and the people cheered, there came the cry of "A messenger from Cæsar!"

The herald entered, and, bowing low, gave a writing to Antony, bowed again, and went. Cleopatra snatched it from his hand, broke the silk, and read aloud:

"Cæsar to Antony. Greeting:

"This answer to thy challenge: Can Antony find no better way of death than beneath the sword of Cæsar? Farewell!"

And thereafter they cheered no more.

The darkness came, and ere it was midnight, having feasted with those friends who to-night wept over his woes and to-morrow should betray him, Antony went forth into the gathering of the Captains of the land forces and of the fleet attended by many, among whom was I.

And when all were come together he spoke to them, standing bareheaded in their midst, beneath the radiance of the moon. And thus he most nobly spoke:

"Friends and companions in arms! who yet cling to me, and whom many a time I have led to victory, hearken to me now who, to-morrow, may lie in the dumb dust, disempired and dishonored. This is our design; no longer will he hang on poised wings above the flood of war, but will straightway plunge, perchance thence to snatch the victor's diadem, or, failing there, to drown. Be now but true to me, and to your honor's sake, and still may you sit, the most proud of men, at my right hand in the Capitol of Rome. Fail me now, and lost is the cause of Antony and lost are ye. Hazardous indeed must be to-morrow's battle, but many a time have we stood and faced a fiercer peril and ere the sun had sunk once more have driven armies like desert sands before our gale of valor and counted the spoils of hostile Kings. What have we to fear? Though allies be fled, still is our array as strong as Cæsar's! And show me but as high a heart, why, I swear to you, upon my princely word, to-morrow night shall I deck yonder Canopic Gate with the heads of Octavian and his captains! Ay, cheer, and cheer again! I love that martial music which swells not as from the different lips of clarions, now 'neath the breath of Antony and now of Cæsar, but rather out the hearts of honest men who love me. Yet—and now I will speak low, as we do speak o'er the bier of some beloved dead—yet, if Fortune should rise against me and, if, borne down by the weight of arms, Antony, the soldier, dies a soldier's death, leaving you to mourn him who ever was your friend, this is my will, that after our rough fashion of the camp I here declare to you. You know where all my treasure lies. Take it, most dear friends, and in the memory of Antony, make just division. Then go to Cæsar and speak thus: 'Antony, the dead, to Cæsar, the living, sends greeting, and in the name of ancient fellowship and of many a peril, dared crave this boon: the safety of those who clung to him and that which he hath given them.'

"Nay, let not my tears—for I must weep—overflow your eyes! Why, 'tis not manly; 'tis most womanish! All men must die, and death were welcome were it not so lone. Should I fall, to your tender care I leave my children—if, perchance, it may avail to save them from the fate of helplessness. Soldiers, enough! to-morrow at the dawn we spring at Cæsar's throat, both by land and sea. Swear that ye will cling to me, even to the last issue!"

"We swear!" they cried. "Noble Antony, we swear!"

"'Tis well! Once more my star grows bright; to-morrow, set in the highest heaven, it yet may shine the lamp of Cæsar down! Till then, farewell!"

He turned to go, and as he went they caught his hand and kissed it; and so deeply were they moved that many wept like children; nor could Antony master his grief, for, in the moonlight, I saw tears roll down his furrowed cheek, and fall upon that mighty breast.

And, seeing all this, I was much troubled. For well I knew that if these men held firm to Antony all might yet go well for Cleopatra; and though against Antony I bore no ill will, yet must he fall, and in that fall drag down the woman who, like some poisonous plant, had twined herself about his giant strength till it choked and moldered in her embrace.

Therefore, when Antony went, I went not, but stood back in the shadow watching the faces of the lords and captains as they spoke together.

"Then it is agreed!" said he who should lead the fleet. "And this we swear to, one and all, that we will cling to noble Antony to the last extremity of fortune!"

"Ay! ay!" they answered.

"Ay! ay!" I said, speaking from the shadow; "cling and die!"

Fiercely they turned and seized me.

"Who is he?" quoth one.

"'Tis that dark-faced dog, Olympus!" cried another, "Olympus, the magician!"

"Olympus the traitor!" growled another; "put an end to him and his magic!" and he drew his sword.

"Ay! slay him; he would betray the Lord Antony, whom he is paid to doctor."

"Hold awhile!" I said in a slow and solemn voice, "and beware how ye try to murder the servant of the Gods. I am no traitor. For myself, I abide the event here in Alexandria, but to you I say: Flee, flee to Cæsar! I serve Antony and the Queen—I serve them truly; but above all I serve the holy Gods; and what they make known to me, that, lords, I do know. And this I know, that Antony is doomed, and Cleopatra is doomed, for Cæsar conquers. Therefore because I do honor you, noble gentlemen, and think with pity on your wives left widowed, and your little fatherless children that shall, if ye hold to Antony, be sold as slaves; therefore I say: Cling to Antony if ye will, and die; or flee to Cæsar and be saved! And this I say because it is so ordained of the Gods."

"The Gods!" they growled; "what Gods? Slit the traitor's throat and stop his ill-omened talk!"

"Let him show us a sign from his Gods, or let him die; I do mistrust this man," said another.

"Stand back, ye fools!" I cried. "Stand back—free mine arms—and I will show you a sign;" and there was that in my face which frightened them, for they freed me and stood back. Then I lifted up my hands, and, putting out all my strength of soul, searched the depths of space till my Spirit communed with the Spirits of my Mother Isis. Only the Word of Power I uttered not, as I had been bidden. And the holy mystery of the Goddess answered to my Spirit's cry, falling in awful silence upon the face of earth. Deeper and deeper grew the terrible silence; even the dogs ceased to howl, and in the city men stood still afeared. Then, from far away, there came the ghostly music of the sistra. Faint it was at first, but ever as it came it grew more loud, till the air shivered with the unearthly sound of terror. I said naught, but pointed with my hand toward the sky. And behold! bosomed upon the air, floated a vast vail shape, that, heralded by the swelling music of the sistra, drew slowly near, till its shadow lay upon us. It came, it passed, it went toward the camp of Cæsar, till at length the music slowly died away, and the awful shape was swallowed in the night.

"'Tis Bacchus!" cried one. "Bacchus, who leaves lost Antony!" and, as he spoke, from all the camp there rose a groan of terror.

But I knew that it was not Bacchus, the false God, but the Divine Isis who deserted Khem, and, passing over the edge of the world, sought her home in space, to be no more known of men. For though her worship is still upheld, though still as she is here and in all Earths, no more doth Isis manifest herself in Khem. I hid my face and prayed, but when I lifted it from my robe, lo! all had fled and I was alone.

CHAPTER XXX.

OF THE SURRENDER OF THE TROOPS AND FLEET OF ANTONY; THE DEATH OF ANTONY, AND THE BREWING OF THE DRAUGHT OF DEATH.

IN THE morrow, at dawn, Antony came forth and gave command that his fleet should advance against the fleet of Cæsar, and that his cavalry should open the land battle with the cavalry of Cæsar. Accordingly, the fleet advanced in a triple line, and the fleet of Cæsar came out to meet it. But when they met, the galleys of Antony lifted their oars in greeting, and passed over to the galleys of Cæsar; and together they sailed away. And the cavalry of Antony rode forth beyond the Hippodrome to charge the cavalry of Cæsar; but when they met they lowered their swords and passed over to the camp of Cæsar, deserting Antony. Then Antony grew mad with rage and terrible to see. He shouted to his legions to stand firm and await attack; and for a little while they stood. One man, however—that same officer who would have slain me on the yester night—strove to fly; but Antony seized him with his own hand, threw him to the earth, and, springing from his horse, drew his sword to slay him. On high he held his sword, while the man, covering his face, awaited death. But Antony dropped his sword and bade him rise.

"Go!" he said. "Go to Cæsar, and prosper! Once I did love thee. Why, then, among so many traitors, should I single thee out for death?"

The man rose and looked upon him sorrowfully. Then, shame overwhelming him with a great cry he tore open his shirt of mail, plunged his sword into his own heart and fell down dead. Antony stood and gazed at him, but never a word he said. Meanwhile the ranks of Cæsar's legions drew near, and so soon as they crossed spears the legions of Antony turned and fled. Then the soldiers of Cæsar stood still mocking them; but scarce a man was slain for they pursued not.

"Fly, Antony, fly!" cried Eros, his servant who alone with me stayed by him. "Fly ere thou art dragged a prisoner to Cæsar!"

So he turned and fled, groaning heavily. With him I went, and as we rode through the Canopic Gate, where many folks stood wondering, Antony spoke to me:

"Go thou, Olympus, go to the Queen and say: 'Antony sends greeting to Cleopatra, who hath betrayed him! To Cleopatra he sends greeting and farewell!'"

And so I went to the tomb, but Antony fled on to the palace. When I came to the tomb I knocked upon the door, and Charmion looked forth from the window.

"Open," I cried, and she opened.

"What news, Harmachis?" she whispered.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, with its varied and excellent contents, is a library in itself.

It was indeed a happy thought to print an entire novel in each number.

Not a short novelette, but a long story such as you are used to get in book form and pay from one dollar to one dollar and a half for.

Not only that, but with each number you get an abundance of other contributions, which gives you a good magazine besides the novel.

The ringing blows which have been struck on the gateway of popular favor, have resounded throughout the entire land, and to-day Lippincott's Magazine stands in the front rank of monthly publications, and is the most widely-read-and-talked-of publication of its kind in the world. CLINTON, MICH., FEB. 27, '90.

W. S. Kimball was in Adrian Friday.

M. F. McClure went to Toledo, Tuesday.

Jamie Hamilton of Detroit, is in town this week.

H. Saxton and Wm. Price visited Tecumseh Monday.

Melvin Bull is visiting his sister, Mrs. E. VanDeMark.

Business Men's Carnival Friday evening at Town Hall.

The meetings at the M. E. church are continuing this week.

Miss Libbie Kirchgessner of Tecumseh was home over Sunday.

Willie Woodward is recovering for an attack of pneumonia.

Jones & Hazlett, the Tecumseh tailors, were in town last week displaying their new samples and taking orders.

L. C. Reynolds, clerk in Calkins Drug store, made Jackson a flying visit Monday.

Mrs. Frank Kirchgessner and her sister, Mrs. Mat Staib, visited their mother in Freedom, Friday.

Mrs. F. D. Lancaster has been fighting the "Grippe" for a few days but at last accounts was doing well.

Judge Geddes came up from Adrian Tuesday to hear Laura Dainty. He was entertained by E. W. Freezs.

Mrs. James Wadsworth and child of Flint are in town at the home of her parents, Nelson Prentice and wife.

Schloss Bros. of Detroit, were in town Tuesday. They own the property formerly known as the Silvers block.

Geo. McIlwain came over from Ann Arbor Saturday, remaining over Sunday, visiting his many friends and former school mates.

Mrs. Abram Ward, a long sufferer from paralysis is able to be taken out and last Monday visited her son in the north end of the village, something she has not done for years.

Mr. Ernest Wisner of Franklin, will return to McPherson, Dakota, next week and will be accompanied by his sisters, Misses Minnie and Grace, who expect to engage in their present occupation of teaching.

Mrs. Alonzo Clark has been very dangerously ill since Friday. She suffered a partial stroke of paralysis but at this writing is reported as better. Dr. White is the attending physician. Mr. Clark was summoned from Chicago at once and is now at home.

Mrs. Laura Dainty gave the fifth entertainment of our lecture course Tuesday evening. She was greeted with a crowded house and all were pleased with her happy style of elocution. The Royal Hand Bell Ringer will be here the 6th of March, and another concert after that is assured making seven entertainments for one dollar.

C. S. Burroughs departs this week for his new home at Kokomo, Ind. He becomes a principal stockholder in a company, backed with abundant capital, for the manufacture of chewing gum. The many friends of Mr. Burrows and wife will exceedingly regret their departure from Clinton.

A veterinary surgeon found it necessary to insert a silver tube into the windpipe one of Joe Sage's horses, in Macon last week, to aid the animal in proper respiration. Several candidates for postoffices in the county, are going to send for that horse doctor, to see if he can make them breathe easier.—Adrian Press.

County merchants are warned against a man giving the name of G. E. Phillips, claiming to hail from Toledo, Ohio. His scheme is to "write up" the business of the merchants, agree to have it published in the local paper, collect the fees in advance and skip.

There are many thousand gallons of maple syrup annually manufactured in this vicinity, and therefore there is a good supply of sweetness for everybody. The season is just opening. The improved manner of making syrup during the past few years is so great that the quality is much improved, and the article of to-day is vastly superior to that made a dozen years ago.

Laura Dainty, or more correctly speaking, Mrs. Fred Pelham, arrived in the city this morning from Clinton, where she gave one of her readings last evening, before the star course audience of that village, and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Geddes on West Maumee street. The Judge and Mrs. Geddes, and son Clifford, were at Clinton to listen to the inimitable little lady, and accompanied her to the city. She goes to Monroe this evening, but will return here to-morrow, and be the guest of of General and Mrs. Humphrey.—Times of Tuesday.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

New maple sugar made out of last year's crop is on the market now.

Adrian ice men are stocking up with Cadillac ice.

Clinton boasts of being the home of widow McGinty.

Harmon Camburn, of Adrian, has received an increase of pension.

John F. Nestell succeeds Geo. W. Doty as postmaster at Manchester.

The roller mill at Morenci has been shut down two weeks for repairs.

Geo. B. Horton, of Fruit Ridge, is re-elected President of the State Dairymen's Association.

Farmers near Morenci have sold $5000 worth of ship timber this winter.

St. Patrick's Day—March 17—will be celebrated in Hudson by a grand banquet.

A Cincinnati and a Toledo firm are putting up two large ice houses at Addison.

Col. N. B. Eldredge, of Adrian, has suffered a relapse and is confined to his bed again.

The maple sugar industry bids fair to be good throughout the County, notwithstanding the dull times in other lines of business.

It is said that the Lenawee county farmers' mutual insurance company exceeds any other like organization in the amount of property insured.

The Morenci Observer wants everybody to understand that the Morenci Fair Association will have a big exhibition next fall.

Editor Kempton, of the Addison Courier, has received a can of new maple syrup on subscription and his health is improving rapidly under this treatment.

Hudson is a pretty wide-awake village in many respects, and her example is worthy of emulation, but she still adheres to the old fogy custom of running her village election on political lines.

The authorities who have been investigating the cause of so many dead fish in Sand Lake have not fully decided whether it is due to the decomposition of McGinty's body or the explosion of dynamite.—Hudson Gazette.

Judge Lane will deliver a series of lectures on commercial law at Raisin Valley Seminary, beginning Wednesday, Feb. 26. The series will embrace these subjects: "Contracts," "Negotiable Paper," "Real Estate Transfers."

Country merchants are warned against a man giving the name of G. L. Philips, claiming to hail from Toledo, Ohio. His scheme is to "write up" the business of the country merchants, agree to have it published in the county paper, collect the fees in advance and then skip.

A Tecumseh clergyman estimates that out of a population of 3,000 not over 500 attend the five churches. He especially wants to know where the young boys and girls are. If the situation is the same as in Hudson, he will find the girls in the churches and the boys on the walk outside waiting for them to come out.—Hudson Post.

A Clinton chewing gum manufacturer is about to move to Kokomo, Ind., and carry on the business on a large scale, a stock company having been formed. Thus Lenawee county loses an industry which every girl thinks should be protected, even if they are compelled to discard rubbe shoes not half worn out to furnish the raw material.—Hudson Post.

E. N. Bissell, a prominent sheep man of Vermont, is here buying sheep for far-off Australia. A. A. Wood is assisting him in picking them up and the flocks of several of our prominent breeders are contributing to the number, some of which we will make mention of next week. Verily the fame of Washtenaw's stock breeders is getting almost world-wide.—Saline Observer.

Col. Eldredge is confined to the bed and his condition excites considerable apprehension on the part of the family. He was inclined to sleepiness and it was with difficulty that he could be roused from his stupor; for a time Sunday he was better, and was dressed and around the house, but since then he has been in bed and it is feared that the old veteran is beyond the help of medical skill.—Adrian Press.

The census enumerator, whoever he may be, will have to put in a month of hard work during June. The work begins June 1st, and he must have it all done and the schedules filled out by July 1st. The enumerators are paid two cents for each inhabitant enumerated, two cents for each death recorded, five cents for each soldier or sailor, twenty cents for each industry reported and fifteen cents for each form returned.

Here's excellent advice from an exchange: Never send a dollar away from home, when the article that the dollar will purchase can be bought at home. Money is our financial blood. Its circulation keeps the body alive. Bleed that body by sending that money from it and soon trade will put on a look of lethargy and inactivity. Always trade at home. It is doubly useful. It helps the person patronized and finds its way back to you.

A dog entered the Gazette office while the edition was being run off, last Friday, but seeing that the whole force was busy, wagged his tail and retired without making his business known. It is supposed that the visitor was Postmaster Thorn's English setter, and he called to see why he was left out of the dog article in the paper. Being a full blooded quadruped, with a pedigree that any dog might be proud of, he certainly deserved a place in the list of noble canines, and The Gazette is sorry he was omitted.—Hudson Gazette.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Sold by Druggists, Price 75. per bottle.

Five Strong Points of S. S. S.

1st. It is entirely vegetable, contains no minerals or poisons of any kind, and builds up the system from the first dose.

2d. It cures cancer of the Skin. No other remedy or treatment was ever known to cure it.

3d. It cures hereditary Blood Taint, even in the third and fourth generations. No other remedy has ever done it.

4th. It has never failed to eradicate Scrofula (or King's Evil) in all its forms from the system.

5th. It cures contagious Blood Poison in all its stages by eliminating the horrible virus from the system, thus giving relief from all the consequences of this bane of the human family.

"My blood had been so out of order during the summer of 1888 that I virtually had no health at all. I had no appetite; nothing I ate agreed with me. I was feeble, puny, and always feeling bad. I had tried various remedies without receiving any benefit, until at length I commenced on Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) That medicine increased my weight from 155 pounds to 177 pounds in a few months, and made me as well and healthy as any man now living. S. S. S. is undoubtedly the greatest blood purifier to day on the American continent. JOHN BELLEW,

SONG BIRDS.

O singing birds! What happy words
Are in your sweet, wild song!
What thrilling notes your tiny throats
In melody prolong!
In darkest days the softest lays
You ever sweetest sing,
And through the air in music rare
With perfect cadence ring.

O happy birds, your tuneful words
Pour forth so full, so free,
Your rarest trill each heart to thrill
As swift the gay notes flee!
Unwritten words sing ye, sweet birds,
Unwritten music, too;
Nature's own child, your wood notes wild
To harmony are true.

Could we but know the thoughts that flow
Along that liquid strain,
That charm the ear with lack of fear,
We might a lesson gain
From each song bird whose notes are heard
So musical and clear;
Whose magic voice bids souls rejoice,
And fills our heart with cheer.

—Mrs. C. B. Sawyer, in Woman's Journal.

AN INNOCENT BURGLAR.

Why Hannah Is Still Searching for the Bonds.

"Now do lie still, Aunt Martha, and don't fret and worry all day and all night. Ain't it bad enough to be all aches and pains, but you must add fretting to them?"

The speaker was a tall, bony woman of some forty-five or fifty years, with a hard face, that expressed far more annoyance than sympathy as she shook up the pillows and arranged the covers of the bed where an older woman lay. Not a very old woman, but one whose gray hairs and wrinkled cheeks told of many years' sojourn in the world.

"Bertha!" she said, in a low, plaintive voice. "I want Bertha!"

"How many times have I told you that Bertha can't be found?"

"She's down-stairs."

"Well, if it wouldn't try the patience of a saint to hear you! Can't you remember, Aunt Martha? Bertha ran away two years ago with that painting chap that said his name was Thornton. Goodness knows whether it was or not. But he made love to Bertha while he was painting her picture. I told you no good would come of letting her rig herself out like a play actress, and stand up for hours, a-smirking and smiling, while he took her picture and talked soft nonsense to her. He ran away with her and that was the end of it. Can't you remember?"

"Yes, I remember. He wrote to me, and he sent me a copy of the marriage lines, so I'd know he loved her true and faithful. I remember it all, Hannah. And I was mad because they'd deceived me, and wrote back an angry letter. But I did not know how I should miss her pretty face and sweet voice. She was so young, too, Hannah. Only sixteen! Not more than a child! I was too hard, too hard. But she is here, now. Let her come to me.

All this was uttered in the faint, gasping voice of one whose journey of life was fast drawing to a close. But there was no pity in the hard face, no tenderness in the harsh voice of her niece.

"I tell you she is not here!" she said, roughly, "and I'm tired of your eternal whining for her. Go to sleep!"

"I can't sleep! I never sleep now! And I heard her. I heard Bertha downstairs."

"I wonder, now, if she did hear her," Hannah muttered, uneasily. "It's bad luck to cross the dying. If she would only tell me where she's put her money. Six thousand dollars in United States bonds, Lawyer Brown says he's bought for her, and never sold one; and they're in the house, too. I've ransacked as much as I dare, but she sleeps so little that I can't do much in this room. And there's the doctor coming every day, so I daren't make her mad, or she'll send and change her will."

Partly muttering, partly thinking all this, the woman tidied the room for the night and set the lamp on the hearth before she went to her own room. Sitting up to watch was hard work, and Hannah Graves kept a little stimulant where she could drink unobserved. To do her justice, she seldom took much, and nodded in the arm-chair beside the sick-bed pretty faithfully. But on this night she was troubled with an uneasy conscience and exceeded her usual allowance, falling into a deep sleep in her own room, where she had only intended to change her dress for a loose wrapper.

Earlier in the evening, before the early darkness of a December night had closed in, there had been a suppliant at the door, whose low, sweet voice had vainly pleaded for admission. The granddaughter who had run away with the artist had heard from a farmer, who went weekly to the city, of her grandmother's illness, and had hoped for one word of forgiveness.

The farmer was a kindly man, who had before carried tidings from the cottage to the city "flat," where Marcus Thornton and his young wife lived, as poor people in great cities so often live, struggling bravely for daily bread, but sweetening the toil by strong mutual love.

Some time in the future the little wife was sure the paintings, that were to her like dreams of fairyland, would bring to her husband wealth and fame. She trusted him utterly, believing his genius unequaled in the wide world's array of artists. And while she waited for that genius to be recognized she was well content to take in sewing, to save and economize what he earned by the occasional sale of a small picture or the filling of an order to decorate some rich man's panels or walls. They were often compelled to dine on porridge, but they ate it cheerfully, and furnished the sauce by building grand castles in the air, as they handled their pewter spoons.

There was no thought of her grandmother's six thousand dollars in Bertha Thornton's mind as she thankfully accepted the farmer's offer to take her home to see the old lady before she died. Just one word of forgiveness was all she craved, for she knew she had been undutiful and ungrateful when she left her home in secret to follow her lover's fortunes. She was not aware that Hannah Graves had quietly burned, unopened, the many letters she had written begging forgiveness, but that they were all unanswered convinced her that her grandmother was still angry.

She was a timid little woman, easily led, easily frightened, and Hannah Graves had kept her outside the door without difficulty, where the farmer left her to drive to his own home.

She begged in vain to see her grandmother, her sweet voice raised in her earnestness till it must have penetrated to the sick-room, from which she was so resolutely shut out.

As the door closed upon her, and she heard the heavy bolt drawn, it flashed upon her for the first time that she had made no provision for her night's shelter. It was winter weather, but not intensely cold, and her dress was warm, but it was not a pleasant prospect to think of wandering about all night till she could take the city train early in the morning.

She shivered as she drew her shawl closer and listened to the sounds indoors that told her how carefully every door and window was being barred against her. The porch was deep and sheltered from the wind, and when she wearied of walking up and down she crouched in a corner to rest. Just over her head was the window of her grandmother's room, and Hannah, setting this window a crack open for the night, let out the sound of her own harsh voice. Just a murmur of her grandmother's faint utterance reached Bertha as she listened intently, but what Hannah said came to her clearly and distinctly. It convinced her that the story she had told of the old lady's continued anger was untrue, and the threat that the sight of her would have fatal results another fiction.

"She wants me! I am sure she will forgive me!" Bertha thought, as the faint accents reached her, conveying no words, but pleading in every tone. "I will see her!"

Again she listened intently, until she was sure by the silence that the invalid was alone. She was young, and light, and country bred. It was no great feat to scramble by the twisted vines on the porch pillars to its roof, and gain the window. Very cautiously the sash was raised, the muslin curtain pushed aside, and by the dim light Bertha could see that the only occupant of the room was the old woman on the bed, who murmured incessantly:

"Oh, Bertha! I was too hard, dear child! Come to your old grannie before she dies!"

Softly still, for Hannah might be near, Bertha crept over the window-sill into the room, and to the door. This she locked, whispering to herself:

"I will speak to grannie, and if anybody tries to put me out she must first break the door in."

But there was no sound in any other part of the house as she drew near the invalid, whose large, eager eyes had by that time discovered her.

"Bertha! You have come, Bertha!"

"Yes, grannie, dear, dear grannie," said Bertha, caressing her tenderly, "I am here."

"But you must not stay. Hannah will kill you. She will think you want the money."

"Oh, grannie, never mind money now. Only say you forgive me for leaving you."

"With all my heart, dear child. God bless you ever, and bless the man you love if he is good to you."

"He is, grannie, the kindest, best husband in the world. He shall come to you to-morrow."

"Yes, dear! yes! But now listen. Go to the clothes press and pull out the lower drawer. Quick! Now," as Bertha obeyed, "do you see on the floor, underneath where the drawer was, a package, sewed up in strong muslin? Bring that to me, and put the drawer back."

Bertha obeyed, and stood again beside the bed.

"Put it in your bosom. Button your dress over it. So!" said her grandmother, eagerly watching her follow her instructions. "Don't tell Hannah. Don't tell anybody but your husband. Promise me!"

"I promise, grannie."

"It is my savings for years; saved for you before I made that cruel will. It is yours, yours, darling. Hannah will have the cottage and every thing else, because I have not taken the will away from Mr. Brown. Bertha, go away, dear, now. Go. But come to-morrow with your husband to protect you. Go, dear. Hannah may come. Good-night. Good-night. God bless you, Bertha."

Out again in the night air, reluctant as she was to go, Bertha sped away to the railway station, two miles away. She had unlocked the door and drawn the window down before she left the house, and hurried on, only anxious to gain her home and bring her husband to receive the blessing already bestowed on herself.

There was a train at daybreak, and the station was warm and light, but the hours dragged slowly, until she was on her way to the city.

The day-dawn wakened Hannah from her heavy sleep, and, conscience-stricken, she hurried to her aunt. Nothing, to her eyes, had been disturbed in the room, no confusion told of the midnight visitor, but the form on the bed was rigid and pulseless, and no voice answered her frightened call.

It was too late for any spoken words of forgiveness when Marcus Thornton stood with his wife beside the still, cold form, but Bertha knew that she was pardoned, and she kept her promise made to the dead.

Hannah Graves lives in the cottage she inherited, and has periodical attacks of searching for the six thousand dollars in bonds, but she has never found them, although she truthfully declares "there's not one inch of the cottage that has not been ransacked."—Anna Sheilds, in N. Y. Ledger.

Fog as a Cosmetic.

As a cosmetic it seems foggy weather is not to be despised. A young woman in an elevated car was overheard the other morning giving the following point to a friend with her: "Oh, do you know," she said, "these moist, foggy winters are splendid for the complexion? Our doctor told me so, and I go out regularly in every fog without a veil."

George Lovegrove, a nephew of Asa Russell, who is traveling for the Stafford's Ink Co., spent the Sabbath with friends in the village.

There were several of the young people attended the entertainment given at Macon Grange Hall, Saturday evening, and report a very pleasant time.

The article in last week's issue, announcing the possibility of securing Miss Jessie Patton, of Chicago, to give a term of elocution lessons, has for certain reasons been indefinitely postponed.

The meat market on the south side of West street, run by Harrington & Lawton, was dissolved last week by Mr. Harrington buying Mr. Lawton's interest. He will continue the business alone and respectfully solicits his proportion of patronage.

The annual donation will be held at the Church on Wednesday evening of next week, March 12th. The ladies are respectfully asked to furnish the necessary eatables, such as are generally provided. A general invitation is extended to all to come and enjoy a pleasant evening.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank the neighbors and friends who so willingly and kindly assisted us during our mother's last illness.

MACON MUSIC.

The W. C. T. U. will hold their next meeting at the home of M. V. Sickly, Friday afternoon, March 7th.

Gip Arner, of Ridgeway, was in town Saturday afternoon and all night. At least the lights were burning all night.

Mrs. Benjamin, of Portland, will give a parliamentary drill Tuesday afternoon, March 11, at the M. E. Church. She will also deliver a temperance lecture in the evening.

That buzzing that the News correspondent has been hearing in the air is what has been baffling us to tell what was his disease. We supposed it was the grip until the 13th of Feb., in the News, he confessed his disease to be the postoffice on the brain, that has been pulling him down to a premature grave. In connection with this we think he had an ax to grind, and being unable to grind it he has been pounding away with the old dull ax, hitting here and there, and everyone who comes in his way gets a chip. We advise him to have his hair clipped, and put a good big mustard plaster right on the top of his head, and lay himself away for a few weeks, and we think the buzzing in the air will cease, in regard to the postoffice. The man who is pinched the hardest is the first to squeal.

ONSTED ODDS.

It is now a spring month but we are having a little winter.

The revival meetings that were held last week will be continued this week.

Uncle Samuel White has sold one of his farms to his nephew, young Sam'l White.

L. Austin received the other day a consignment of boots and shoes direct from Boston.

The scholars of the Onsted school are preparing for public literary exercises for the near future.

Frank Daniels of North Dakota, stepped from the train the other day for a visit among friends here.

The great reaper with his silvered cimeter pointed with that unyielding law of change which mocks all efforts of loving friends, all hopes, all fears, has taken from our midst Mrs. William Aldrich, who departed this life Feb, 18th, 1890, at the age of eighty years, eleven months and twenty-six days. About twenty years ago, by an accident, she had both limbs broken and sustained severe spinal injuries, from which she never wholly recovered, and sad to relate, a few days before her death she slipped and struck her left side upon the end of an upright board, injuring herself very seriously, causing her death a few days after. It seemed that she was destined to suffer from injuries The departed was born in Peru, Bennington Co., Vermont, February 22d, 1809. Her maiden name was Roxana Killam, and at the age of 16 she moved with her parents to Mexico, Oswego Co., N. Y., and was married Sept. 9th, 1830, and in 1837 came with her husband, to Michigan and settled in Cambridge, Lenawee Co., where she has lived ever since, and on the same farm with the exception of the first two years. She was the mother of five children, two of whom have preceded her to the other shore. The deceased was known far and wide for her friendliness and neighborly conduct to all, and always lent a willing and helping hand to any one that stood in need, and in administering to the sick of her neighborhood none could surpass her. Her demise cast a gloom over the entire community in which she had resided for so long a time, and a husband, three children, sixteen grand and sixteen great-grand children mourn the loss of wife, mother and grand parent. The last sad rites were conducted by Rev. J. M. Getchell of Tecumseh, assisted by Rev. Wooden of this place, at the Onsted church, Feb. 20th, and the remains were consigned to their last resting place in the cemetery near by. Thus closes a useful and active life on earth. A.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Uncle Daniels is slowly improving.

The roads are once more quite passable.

Mrs. Pitcher met with quite an accident last week. As she supposed, she sprained her ankle, but now fears are entertained that the ankle bone is broken.

Uncle Joseph Camburn, the oldest resident of Franklin, died at his home last Saturday night. The funeral services were held Tuesday, Rev. Palmer officiating.

The play last Thursday and Friday evenings was a decided success. The house was crowded both nights and the sum realized was nearly $50. It is to be repeated next Friday evening, March 7th. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Mrs. Deming, mother of Wilbur Deming, passed away last Thursday evening. She was in apparently good health through the day, but at night came the summons to bid farewell to earth and loved ones. The deceased was born in 1812, making her 78 years of age. Thus another home is left without a mother and we are left to say,—

"A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
That never can be filled.

"God in His wisdom hath recalled
The boon His love had given;
And though the body moulders here,
The soul is safe in Heaven."

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Jas. Still, of Weston, visited at D. Still's last week.

Miss Fannie Kelley spent part of last week at Adrian.

H. E. Parshall made a short call at the station Saturday.

Emma Miller called on her sister, Mrs. H. H. Osgood, Saturday.

Chester Clark has had a slight attack of pneumonia but is around again.

Jas. Sutherland and family have gone to Ypsilanti to spend a few days with relatives and friends.

Mr. Hugh Campbell was quite poorly last week but is better at the present writing. His son Hugh, of Adrian, came up to see him Monday.

Ellis McIntyre returned home on Friday from New York, where he has spent the greater part of the winter He reports colder weather and more snow than We have here.

RAISIN RACKET.

T. I. Sutton thinks spring has come. He therefore proceedeth to the stream to swim but gets a cool reception.

March has come in like a lion and we hope that it will go out like a lamb.

Hartley Stretch is moving, with his sister, Mrs. Salkeld, on her farm south of Tecumseh.

A gloom was cast over the Seminary Thursday, when word was received that Miss May Kellogg, who graduated last year, was very low with pneumonia, following the grip. At present they have some hopes of her recovery.

The lecture given by Judge Lane Wednesday evening on Contracts was very instructive. He said he did not expect to make any lawyers by the lectures, but he hoped they might keep some one out of trouble and after they got into trouble they might know how to get out. He explained the drawing up of contracts,—who could make contracts, etc.,—and to what extent a contract is legal in the sight of the common law. His next lecture will be given Wednesday evening, March 11, at 7 o'clock.

DEVILS LAKE DOINGS.

Jud Sanford is moving into his own house.

Better late than never. It looks now as if the big ice house is going to be filled yet this winter—or spring, rather.

Miss Ruth Stillson has gone to Eaton county to make it her home, if she likes it there.

Miss Anna Jenkins, of Addison, closes a very successful term of school here this week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Bell, of Rome were guests of F. Wood and wife Monday night. They were on their way to attend the funeral of his nephew, William Bell of Jerome.

The pastor of the F. B. Church of Woodstock, T. C. Lawrence, brought a Japanese young man with him last Sunday from Hillsdale, to talk to the people on the subject of religion in Japan.

Mrs. Frank Wood returned from her visit to her father, Alva Raymond of Raisin, Friday, and reports that he is improving slowly, but it is feared that he will never recover the use of his left hand and arm.

DEATH OF COL. D. S. CURTIS.

The recent death of Col. D. S. Curtis, in this city, has caused a pang of grief and lament in the heart of the writer of this, who has known him intimately for nearly forty years, and also from many friends in Washington, to whom he had become endeared by friendly association in the various reforms and societies to which he had become attached.

The Michigan State Association, of which he was a loyal member, will miss him. The temperance societies with which he was identified, will miss him. The industrial societies and the cause of labor reform generally, the cause of universal peace, and arbitration of international disputes, will miss him, and we add, most every humanitary movement will regret his taking off.

Forty years ago he published and edited a paper called The Countryman, an anti-slavery paper, in Perry, N. Y. He was a nervous and rapid writer, and always active and prompt in the performance of every duty. He wrote and published, as editor, correspondent and author, through an unresting, active life. Besides, he was a gallant soldier during the late war.

He was nearly, if not quite, 75 years of age when he deceased, and had always lived a temperate life and enjoyed good health until his last sickness, which lasted but a few days. He was buried at Arlington, where so many of the union soldiers lie.

Col. Curtis was an impulsive, generous hearted man, always on the qui vive and never at rest. We have only space to add, Requiescat in pace.

The above tribute is taken from the National View, of Washington, D. C He resided in Tecumseh a few months, many years ago, and the ties of friendship then formed have never been broken. During his service in the Departments at Washington as clerk, his summer vacation of one month was always spent in Tecumseh and vicinity, and his friends have always regarded his annual visits with pleasure. That he was a faithful public servant is evidenced by the fact that he held this place as clerk in the Treasury Department during all the mutations of politics for the past twenty years. His Michigan acquaintances will deeply sympathize with his wife in her sore bereavement.

For the cure of the inflammation and congestion called "a cold in the head" there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else, it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious developement of the symptoms while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh, after all other modes of treatment have failed.

THE GOLDEN STATE.

LOS GATOS, Feb. 3, 1890.

We have had a severe winter for California. Snow fell ten inches deep at one time, and frost chilled the air nightly when it did not rain.

An unprecedented amount of rain fell. The mountains yielded considerable under the moisture of five feet of rain. Slides were numerous. One made an object of our sawmill, which is situated at the base of a steep mountain side 500 feet high. Two men labored vigilantly all one dark, rainy night to save the mill. Our "dugway" road fell off for five to six rods, about 100 feet, leaving two feet wide next the bank, and requiring three men two days to dig the bank back and render it passable.

These roads are terrific to strangers. A merchant came up with Mr. Sharp to transact some business, bringing an extra horse to drive back alone, but after seeing the dangers of the way, said he would not drive back alone for $50, so Mr. Sharp drove him back to the city for $5.

The last storm shut us in until we began to curtail our rations. The way was open February 1st so that two horses could haul up 250 pounds February 4th. I am writing this morning in view of the beautiful side of "Cosy Nook." The golden beams of the sun are producing an enrapturing sight. High up are a number of huge rocks that look grave, with faces downward, as if waiting an opportunity to roll down on the plateau below, where one of them lies now, dropped there by the last earthquake, that stirred the internal regions of this mountainous border.

The continued sunshine looks encouraging for starting the mill. When it gets under way we expect it will turn out $300 to $400 worth of boxes per month, for grapes, apples, cherries, pears, apricots and, most of all, trays for sun-drying prunes. The mill is deep down in a lonely and almost inaccessible place, but surrounded by redwood and fir trees, containing material worth thousands of dollars, if only it can be got out.

I am inuring myself to manual labor. I trimmed apple trees yesterday until near sunset. Tell inquiring friends that California still agrees with my health and hopes.

Feb. 9th.—The impassable roads prevented attandance on divine service at the "Beautiful Little City," so I rode on horseback, in company with Mr. Sharp and wife, to see the numerous family of Mr. VanLoan, distant about three miles, right past the mountainous end of my beautiful tract of land. We followed a "dugway," rendered very rough by sharp cornered stones, deep furrows cut by the torrents of rain which had followed the track, and some small slides, that had nearly blocked the way. In some places the road went to the head of a gulch and came back nearly on the opposite side, with a yawning gap between. All the way the hill seemed to become steeper and more terribly forbidding. Mr. V's house is built about half-way up the mountain. A fountain of water pours down at one side of the house, making the earth generally moist and "soggy" about the house and barns Perhaps this was the source of the typhoid fever of which one of his most promising sons died last fall.

The weather has been pleasant the past ten days. Most of that time Mr. Sharp and men have been engaged in repairing the dilapidated road to the mill. Hope to start the mill Monday.

The TECUMSEH HERALD comes as regularly as it can with interruptions of storms etc. My health is still good.

BRITTON BUDGET.

MABEL M. UNDERWOOD.

It was sad when death came on Saturday night, at eleven o'clock, to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Underwood, and chose for its victim their only child. Mabel M. Underwood was no more at the age of three years, eleven months and nine days. It was that fatal disease, diptheria, that caused the death of the darling child. Sabbath, in the afternoon, we laid her precious remains to rest in the Ridgeway cemetery.

LODINA BEACH.

The deceased's birthplace, Vienna, N. Y., died Feb. 18, 1890, at her daughter's home. Mrs. John Seger's, of eastern Ridgeway, aged 68 years, 11 months and 8 days. Funeral services conducted from the Free Methodist Church by Elder James Wright, of Britton, assisted by the pastor. She leaves one son, Sylvester Beach, of Grand Island, Nebraska, and two daughters, Mrs. John Seger and Mrs. John Outterbout, all of whom were present; also the only surviving brothers, Frank and Chauncey Dibble of Ridgeway.

Speaker Reed has his admirers now, that is true. Gov. Foraker had his admirers six months ago.

An exchange says: The backbone of winter must be broken. Wrong again. The present winter has never had any backbone at all.

The failure of New York to secure the World's Fair will relegate the small fry politicians of that state to retirement unless the business interests of the state have lost their manhood.

An exchange says: Senator Blair may be tersely described as a man of good intentions, with an unfortunate habit of setting his mouth in motion and then going away and letting it run on at its own pleasure.

The last Republican speaker of the House was J. W. Keifer. The people were so effectually surfeited by one session of Republican rule that the next Congress had 191 Democrats to 119 Republicans. History may repeat itself.

And all of this Canada ice is sneaking into this country free of tax! The weather clerk played a trick on us. Who ever thought the home market on ice would be short? If there were a proper tariff on this article, we would be obliged to build ice factories, and these would give employment to a large number of men, and competition with foreign pauper labor would be shut out. Ice factories in the south have a right to ..... protection.

An anxious New York parent writes the Tribune to enquire where to send his son to college. The trouble with this parent is that he is a high protectionist, and he can't find a first class college where his ideas of political economy are inculcated. He was going to send him to Columbia, but the selection of Seth Low, whom this parent looks upon as a free trader, has put a veto on this intention. At present the parent is groping in outer darkness, and the pity of it is the Tribune isn't able to furnish him with the information he desires. —Boston Herald.

The new rules of the House of Representatives constitute a startling innovation on the parliamentary practice of the House during a century past. Under the operation of these rules the majority, the committees appointed by the majority, and the Speaker of the House, will be clothed with absolute power to advance or obstruct any legislation whatever that may be proposed in the House. If the Republican majority shall be satisfied with such an arrangement, there is no apparent reason why the minority should not acquiesce. What is sauce this year for the Republican goose may in the nox: Congress be sauce for the Democratic gander. —Philadelphia Record.

The iron and steel men of New England, several hundred in number, have sent a petition to Congress in which they say:

In view of the approaching revision of the tariff laws, we unite in the request that you insist upon the incorporation of the following provisions in any revised tariff law that may be enacted:

1. That iron ore, coal and coke shall be put on the free list, as they were before the war.

2. That the duty on pig iron and scrap iron and scrap steel which prevailed immediately before the war be restored.

We presume that nine tenths of these petitioners voted for Harrison in the fall of 1888. Were they playing boy then, or have their eyes been opened since?

On Monday night just before the Smith-Jackson case was decided, Mr. Houk, of Tennessee, met Mr. Smith and said "Smith, I am very anxious to have you sworn in and I want to have you sworn in right. I am going to swear you in myself. Hold up your right hand." Mr. Smith obeyed and Mr. Houk said "You do solemnly swear that you will uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States so far as it does not conflict with general parliamentary law; that you will obey the rules of the House of Representatives so far as they do not conflict with the rulings of the Speaker, and that you will vote for the Republican contestant in election cases without regard to the facts, so help you Reed."

CHICAGO WINS THE PRIZE.

Although the final bill for the World's Fair of 1892 is not yet passed, still the contest for the location is practically closed and the Windy City of the West has won the prize. The project of holding a Columbus Fair in 1892 was first broached by St. Louis and was advocated by the press of that city for some time before other places picked it up. New York fell into the movement rather tardily and with her usual Knickerbocker slowness. Chicago soon saw the grand possibilities of the enterprise and sailed in with characteristic energy and pluck. Washington then grasped the idea that a big fair ought to be held at the National Capital, especially if a big appropriation could be coaxed out of Congress. The issue having been joined by these four cities for the location of the fair, the contest grew hotter and hotter until the final vote was taken in the House last week, which resulted in the choice of Chicago.

* * *

Judged in the light of merit alone the proper location would depend somewhat on the character of the show contemplated. If the exhibition was to be international in scope, it would seem as though New York, being the largest city on the Western Continent, and a seaboard city, would be the most appropriate site. If the government were to take the enterprise under its protecting care, then Washington would be the better point. If a National exhibition was in view, then St. Louis or Chicago, being more centrally located, would seem to be better adapted for the site.

* * *

New York, Chicago and St. Louis each put up a guarantee fund of $5,000,000. As the contest warmed up the two former cities pledged themselves to raise the additional balance of ten millions necessary, without asking for government aid. This eliminated Washington and St. Louis from the fight and narrowed it down to a hand-to-hand contest between the metropolis of the seaboard and the metropolis of the interior, and it was a very pretty contest too. Outside of the business influence of Chicago there is no question but what the general sentiment of the people favored New York. It possesses the population, the wealth, the cosmopolitan features, the attractions of its own, the commercial advantages, for a great international fair, surpassed by no city in the world, save London alone. But, on the other hand, Chicago is much nearer the center of population in the United States, and represents, above all other cities in America, that Western energy and pluck which have made her the marvel of the present century.

* * *

Looking back over the field now, the causes which turned the scale in Chicago's favor are easily seen. New York first got into a row over the location of the site. The selection of Central Park stirred up a hornet's nest at the outset. Then Boss Platt's attempt to inject politics into the concern gave New York a serious setback. In the meantime Chicago was thoroughly united and was forging ahead with her accustomed "git thar gait." Every Congressman in both parties, residing within Chicago's proper territory, was loyal to Chicago's interests, while many eastern members, disgusted over New York's exhibition of peanut politics, turned their votes against Gotham and in favor of the Young Giant of the West.

* * *

But Chicago having fairly won the prize, all controversy should now cease. Give Chicago a chance. The whole country, North, South, East and West, is interested in making the fair of 1892 a grand success. Nothing that energy, zeal and enterprise can do will be left undone on the part of Chicago herself. She is entitled to the hearty co-operation of all sections. In this western center, the fair may not be as strictly international as it would have been at New York, but it will be more distinctively American and national. And, after all, is it not the American people who should celebrate the discovery of the New World? Let it be a great American Fair, illustrating the enterprise, energy and development of the American states, and showing to the nations of the old world what free institutions have done for the intellectual advancement of the race and the business emancipation of the masses. It will mark a new era in shaping the course of commerce and trade in this country. Westward the star of empire takes its way" will be now emphatically truer than ever. Chicago has a task of appalling magnitude before her, but she will be fully equal to the emergency. The City, at the close of the exhibition in 1892, will be the second city of the Union, and by the year 1900 she will be one of the largest and richest interior cities of the world. The people should help those who help themselves. Give Chicago a chance.

There is danger in impure blood. There is safety in taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier. 100 doses one dollar.

ABOUT FLAX GROWING.

AN INDUSTRY THAT HAS NOT FLOURISHED IN AMERICA.

It Has Been Known Since the Earliest Times and the Plant Is Cultivated Everywhere—Why It Has Met Comparative Failure in the United States.

There is hardly a thing that grows which requires more labor to make it useful to man than flax. From the time the seed is sown until the finished linen, linseed oil, or oil cake, is put upon the market, every process—and they are many and complex—calls for slow, patient manual labor. Machinery enters here and there, to be sure, but it has no such important place in the industry as it has had in cotton, for instance, since the invention of the gin, or in the making of woolen fabrics, or leather articles.

In spite, however, of the toil involved in cultivating flax and making cloth from it, and the very considerable knowledge required to conduct the operations, the industry is universal today, and is more ancient than history itself. The linen wrappings found on Egyptian mummies were made of flax, and even in barbarous countries the nature and value of the plant is recognized.

Flax is apparently of tropical origin, but it flourishes to the best purpose in temperate climes. In the tropics the seeds are richer and therefore more productive of oil, but the best fabric is obtained from northern cultivation. The best product comes from Holland and Belgium; but this is not so much due to superior quality of soil as to the extraordinary care exercised by the people in handling the crop. Next to this flax in quality is the Russian product, though the Irish crop may be said to be on about the same level. Irish linen certainly is famous enough to justify this supposition. In Egypt the ancient industry received a new start about twenty years ago through the influence of English capitalists, and by the same initiative it has come to be an important feature of agriculture in New Zealand.

The earliest settlers in New York brought seed with them from the Netherlands, and it was introduced into the Massachusetts colony in 1629 by statutory order. In 1790 there were manufactories in Salem and Springfield for turning the plant into sail cloth. In several other colonies about the middle of the Seventeenth century bounties were granted for flax cultivation by act of parliament.

As population has extended westward flax has followed, so that today some of the most important of the fields and mills of this industry are west of the Mississippi. At the same time the magnitude of the industry has not increased in any proportion comparable to the population or area of the country. Every device of inventors to improve the work, every suggestion of scientists to shorten the long processes of preparing the fiber for the mill, and every measure of the legislators to stimulate cultivation, have failed to push it to the fore.

Of course the annual product, taken in gross, is something immense, measured by thousands of tons or millions of bushels, and this amount is greater today than it was fifty years ago, and of course there are many important factories and farms devoted to it. But it is a striking fact that in America a great proportion of the fields first devoted to the growing of flax have been turned to other crops. The industry is continually striking into new soil, and the old fields are either abandoned or devoted to other purposes.

This is not due to the quality of the soil. Any good soil, well drained and thoroughly plowed and harrowed, will serve for the growth of flax. Sandy loams, where there is a good and regular rainfall in the spring, are better than any other lands, but there is an abundance of this kind of soil in America and no lack of natural opportunities for excellent products.

The secret of the slow development of the industry, or rather of its limited scope, lies in the high cost of manual labor. The crop cannot be reaped, like wheat and barley, by machinery, but must be patiently and carefully plucked up by the roots by hand. It also requires careful weeding when the plant is about three inches high. After the crop is gathered the seeds have to be separated from the stalk, a process that may be accomplished by a threshing machine, but in many parts of the world, where the best fabric is obtained, it is done by hand and a "rippling comb," a crude affair with iron teeth, through which the stalks are drawn, a handful at a time.

It is said that four men with these combs can separate the seeds from an acre crop in one day. Then the stalks must be steeped until fermentation takes place. This is one of the longest processes, and one upon which inventors have expended a great deal of labor. The best authorities seem to agree that the most desirable results are obtained from the slowest process, as the introduction of chemicals, etc., to hasten fermentation affects the inner fiber injuriously. A good many things follow after this before the outside husk of the stalk is removed and the inner fiber separated from the core and made ready for the spinner.

All this involves a vast amount of labor in which there is a minimum of economy in the handling of quantity at a given time. Almost all of the product is of value, the seeds making oil and oil cake, and even the water in which the stalks are steeped is of great service. It is found to contain nine-tenths of the nutritious matter of the plant, and when poured out upon the field helps greatly in restoring the soil.

Nevertheless, so great is the labor involved that flax cultivation in this country cannot be regarded as a profitable industry. It has had nearly three centuries of trial and has been fostered by bounties and tariff until it should have demonstrated its strength long since. The fact is our soils can be put to more profitable uses.

Meantime, to enable some growers to obtain prices from the people high enough to enable them to remain in the business, a duty of 7 to 11 per cent. is imposed on flax in various raw stages, and 33 to 40 per cent. on manufactured articles. The truth about this tax, as in so many other cases, is that it fails of its purpose entirely. It does not foster the industry as it pretends to do. The people pay more for their goods, thread, handkerchiefs, wearing apparel, etc., in order to keep alive a business that history has shown is not naturally profitable here. If the duty was abolished the prices would go down, the consumers would benefit and nobody would suffer, for the fields now devoted to flax raising would be turned over to more profitable lines of work.

A striking feature of the industry, and one that has caused much trouble, is the poisonous effects of the fumes arising from the steeping process, and the deleterious influences of the water used. The water may be turned to good use, as above indicated, but this is not always or wholly done; and nothing can live in any stream which serves to carry the water away. So great was the destruction of fish in the Ulster streams of Ireland from this cause that, years ago, the manufactures were forbidden by law from disposing of the water by the way of rivers or brooks. Nevertheless the evil has not been wholly removed and hundreds of fish are killed annually even now by this agency.

With that care for minutiæ which distinguishes Europeans in their industries, the Belgians and Dutch add to their resources by sowing carrots with flax, thus reaping a double crop, and in many cases they get two crops of flax a year from the same field. In districts where flax is grown extensively in those countries there are said to be no paupers whatever, for the entire working population is engaged in summer in caring for and harvesting the crop, and in winter in preparing it for use at the mills.

ORIGIN OF THE TARIFF.

A Measure Admittedly Intended to Benefit the Rich.

When the war of the rebellion was well under way and the government was in dire need of money, taxes were laid on all sorts of domestic products as well as on incomes. This system to a great degree drew the money needed for the prosecution of the war from the resources of men who had accumulated fortunes of more or less magnitude. Everything was stamped, and every transaction in business turned something into the use of the government. This was a general hardship, of course, but the effects were not directly felt by workingmen. Those who did feel the force of the direct tax were highly disgruntled, and they applied to congress for relief. Their application was accompanied by a tariff bill designed and openly admitted to enable those who had paid internal revenue taxes to be reimbursed.

That is—and this was also frankly admitted, even put forward as an argument in favor of the proposed measure—the rich people who had paid taxes wanted some kind of a scheme to be put in operation by which they could get their money back from the people at large. It was not that they wanted to protect or foster industry. The tariff was needed so that foreign products could not enter this market without their price being greatly increased above the normal value. That would, and did, enable the rich manufacturers, dealers and others to add to the prices of domestic articles.

In that way they were enabled to make the people at large repay them for their taxes in the course of a few years; and as the war tariff has been continued ever since, with few changes, it follows that those taxes have been returned to the original payer many times over. The pretense that the tariff benefits the workingman was made only when the need of it for government necessities had disappeared.

Then the domestic manufacturers, having realized the inestimable benefits to protection as far as their own pockets were concerned, sought for any and every pretext for hanging on to the plan that enabled them to make extraordinary profits, extracting a plain bonus from the earnings of labor.

Benefits to Foreign Labor from the Tariff.

It is a funny thing that this tariff system, so much vaunted as a bulwark to native workmen, encourages and furnishes a living to foreigners. A cursory glance at our industries is enough to prove this. Who work in the great ready made clothing shops of the principal cities? Some Americans, perhaps, but is not the vast majority made up of Poles and Bohemians? Who does not know that of late years, that is, since the war, when the tariff system was instituted, Canadians have overrun New England towns and secured places in the factories? The overwhelming presence of underpaid, miserable Hungarians in the Pennsylvania mining regions is notorious. And so it goes. Every important protected industry has a vast proportion of foreigners in its employ.

How about the unprotected industries, farming, masonry, the ordinary trades connected with housebuilding? In these the major part of the workmen are American citizens, and, better still, natives.

Furthermore, it does not follow that the workmen in "protected" industries get the highest wages or live most comfortably. The reverse is the case. The greatest prosperity among laborers is found among those whose industries are not protected.

The president of the Lead trust says in his recent report that "the trustees of this trust believe they are engaged in a perfectly legal and proper enterprise." The Lead trust is fortified by a protective duty of two and three cents a pound on lead, which means about 65 per cent. ad valorem.

New York city has another trust. The match trust has gotten control of all the cracker baking establishments in the city and neighboring towns, and have thus formed a trust within a trust.

Epoch

The transition from long, lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is greatfully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of this Great Alterative and Tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of Kidneys, Liver or Stomach, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at

Well and Happy.

I take pleasure in submitting the following statement of facts that you may know the great benefit that has resulted from the use of your Specific in the case of my little daughter, now ten years of age, had a severe attack of scarlet fever, which left her with a shattered constitution. Among other evidences of impaired nutrition was what the doctors called softening of the bones. In her fifth year she happened to a slight accident which resulted in the dislocation of the hip joint, and from the irritation thus set up, terrible abscesses, despite the best medical treatment that could be obtained, remained for three years, discharging continously. At this time, through the influence of friends, I put her on your S. S. S. When this treatment was commenced the abscess was very large, having six perforations, but discharging through them all. During this treatment several spiculae of bone came out, and by the time she had finished her fifth bottle the abscess had entirely healed, her appetite and general health had been restored; in short, she was well and happy, and so continues.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." "I was caught in a python's folds and saw fierce eyes glaring down into mine. If that tremendous coil were tightened around me, I knew that I might at once check my luggage for the undiscovered bourne. In this crisis of my fate I saw the great python's tail in close proximity to his mouth. I grasped the snake's tail and pushed a yard or two down his yawning jaws. Serpents seldom bite their prey; they lubricate it and suck it down. With such a long and cold-blooded creature, I calculated that it would take over a half a minute before the sensations of his tail could be conveyed to his head, and render him aware that he was committing suicide."

THE WIZARD BEATEN.

"GENTLEMAN GEORGE" TOO MUCH FOR CHAMPION SCHAEFER.

The Former By a Wonderful Manipulation of the Cue Takes the World's Championship—He Makes a Run of 135—The Odds Were Laid in Schaefer's Favor.

NEW YORK, March 3.—The last regular game of the big billiard tournament, attracted an immense crowd of people to Chickering hall. The players were "Wizard" Schaefer and "Gentleman George" Slosson. The betting was heavy, with Schaefer slightly the favorite, though most of the money had been laid at even odds. The house was very enthusiastic, and every brilliant play was greeted with deafening applause. Maurice Daly was chosen referee and Rudolf Schofield acted as marker. Slosson won the bank on a close margin and selected the white ball. He made two easy ones and then missed a long carom bank. Schaefer missed on a similar shot, and, to many present, it seemed as though the giants were unusually weak.

In the second inning Slosson started a run that opened the eyes of everyone, and caused the old timers to cheer. He opened with an across-the table bank that seemed almost impossible, and from that moment his cue seemed to be a fairy's wand. He caught the balls on the lower rail, within the balk, and by the most masterly kind of billiards managed to keep the balls well in hand, and succeeded in manipulating them for beautiful positions. On the ninety-eighth shot he caught them on the balk line and made a dainty run until Scofield called "100." Then he deliberately broke them so as to get them together in the corner, and then in order to maintain them he was compelled to make a most difficult masse, which was greeted with tremendous applause. His one hundred and thirty-first was a followed to make a kiss, and he did it most daintily. His one hundred and thirty-second was a long carrom cushion to the corner and his 135th was a short cushion carrom at the lower end. It almost missed on a feather touch. The balls rolled badly for Jake at the start, but he soon struck his gait and took a hand in the point getting. He ran 34 in as many seconds, it seemed, and presently got them where he wanted them—right on the line at the head of the table. There he kept them, caressing them tenderly until he turned 100. Then he got out in the center of the table where he made a long masse which completely won the house. He continued until he had gathered in 109 and then he fell on a seemingly easy carom. This left Jake but 30 points behind the New Yorker, and his backers' hopes were on the top wave again. But Slosson pulled too steady an oar for the Wizard and gradually increased his lead.

Neither one of the men, champions of the world as they are, played as well as they should after the third inning. At the end of the tenth inning the audience showed signs of disappointment and the men braced up a little, Jake scoring 45 in the eleventh. Small play continued and from the 20th to the 22d inning there was not a good shot made. In the 23rd, however, the "gentleman" awakened and made a run of 59. Then Shaefer used up four minutes' time by freezing the balls. It took Referee Daly just that long to give his decision. The enthusiasm was all gone at the end of the 25th and several of the spectators inquired "What's the matter, Jake?" and "What's the matter, George?" but they never made answer and continued the game. Slosson did a little better work when he tried again, pulling out just 25 points and his friends applauded. Schaffer followed with a run of 38. Once again Slosson counted 25 and Schaefer ran 28. Another run of nothing for both followed, and then Slosson counted 16. Schaefer's friends now gave up hope of the Wizard coming forward with one of his phenomenal runs and winning the game. Slosson was only 27 points from victory and 147 ahead of Jake. The Wizard looked despondent and seemed to have lost his nerve. He only counted 7 when he again got at the balls, making his score 313. Then Slosson began shooting and never stopped until he ran out. He had beaten the champion of the world and his friends sent up a cheer that was heard down to Sixth avenue. Jake grasped his opponents hand and warmly congratulating him. Following is the score by innings:

Slosson—2, 135, 2, 0, 6, 17, 20, 3, 14, 48, 3, 8, 11, 1, 29, 10, 10, 2, 1, 15, 0, 1, 1, 5, 9, 0, 2, 25, 0, 16, 47. Total, 500.

Schaefer—0, 2, 109, 0, 0, 17, 17, 5, 0, 4, 45, 2, 1, 13, 1, 4, 4, 0, 5, 2, 5, 3, 0, 3, 0, 3, 33, 28, 0, 7. Total, 313.

Highest runs—Slosson 135 and 59; Schaefer 109 and 45. Averages—Slosson, 16 14 31; Schaefer, 10 13-30. Time, 2 hours and 17 minutes.

The tie between Daly, Ives and Catton will be played off as soon as a suitable hall can be engaged.

The entire tournament has been a success in every particular. After the game there was a jollification meeting at Slosson's billiard hall. The remaining half of the tournament will be played in Chicago, beginning April 5.

At the matinee, William N. Catton defeated Maurice Daly, 500—471.

Sunday Skating Race.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., March 3.—Alex. Paulsen and Hugh J. McCormick skated a ten mile race at White Bear lake for $400 a side and the world's championship medal, owned by Paulsen.

The track was two laps to the mile. McCormick caught Paulsen very early in the race, and dogged him until the last lap, when he sparted and won the race by about one-third of a mile. Time, 37:09. About 3,000 people were present. There was little betting, as McCormick was thought to have a sure thing.

Cameron Mine Fire.

SHAMOKEN, PA., March 3.—The fire in the Cameron mine is beyond control. It will take a week to accomplish the work of boring from the level above the fire, walling up the slopes and flooding the mine necessary to extinguish the fire, and it is feared that meanwhile the flames may eat their way into other chambers.

Highest Water Ever Known.

LANCASTER, KY., March 3.—A special from Buckeye says the Kentucky river is higher by many feet than ever known before. At the mouth of Point Lickman many houses are under water, and several have been swept away. A warehouse and storehouse belonging to Mr. Miles Saunders were swept down the river yesterday. Another late special from Camp Nelson quotes the river on the decline.

Snow and the Cold at Savannah.

SAVANNAH, GA., March 3.—A light snow fell here in the morning, the first snowfall for many years. Ice formed and vegetation generally is blighted. The damage to truck gardens can not yet be estimated.

BASE BALL BONMOTS.

The Great League Meeting Today at Cleveland—The Arrivals.

CLEVELAND, March 3.—The delegates to the National League meeting in this city today will be royally entertained. The best parlors in the Weddell house have been engaged for the visitors, and every possible effort will be made to provide them with not only the comforts but also the luxuries of life.

The following gentlemen have engaged quarters at the hotels: From New York, President Day and Secretary Appleton; from Boston, Messrs. Soden and Conant; from Washington, President Nick Young and Walker Hewitt; from Philadelphia, John I. Rogers and A. J. Reach; from Brooklyn, President C. H. Byrne and Secretary Abell; from Pittsburg, Messrs. Minck and Scandrett; from Cincinnati, A. Stern and Harry Stern; from Indianapolis, Messrs. Brush and Martin; from Chicago, A. G. Spalding and James Hart.

Cleveland's interests will be looked after by President Robison, Secretary Hawley and Manager Gus Schmelz. The schedule committee will meet at noon today and devote the day to work. The delegates will meet at noon Tuesday and will immediately take up the question of an eight club league.

Governor Fifer's Proclamation.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., March 3.—Governor Fifer has issued a proclamation, to go into effect March 15, defining the district from which it shall be unlawful to ship cattle into Illinois between March 1 and November 1 of each year except under the state live stock commissioner's regulations, the object being to prevent the introduction of splenic or Texas fever into Illinois. These proscribed district includes Indian Territory, that part of Texas lying south and east of the counties of Palmer, Castro Swisher, Briscoe, Hall and Childress, and the states of Arkansas, Louisiana, Tennessee, North and South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Florida. The proclamation also outlines the character of the regulations under which cattle may be imported into the state, and the quarantine period of ninety days under which they be retained if brought in regardless of the terms of the proclamation.

Weltering in His Own Blood.

PITTSBURG, PA., March 3.—A Corry, Pa., special to the Times says: Samuel S. Mason, a well known sporting man and formerly a club house proprietor of Pittsburg, attempted suicide in a Pullman sleeping car on the Western New York and Pennsylvania railway when within a few miles of Corry. When discovered he was weltering in blood that had flown from twelve or more wounds inflicted upon various parts of his person by a small pen knife. He was taken to a hotel in Corry and physicians summoned. The doctors state that the only dangerous wound is a deep cut across the abdomen. Mason sent for a clergyman and stated that he had been greatly worried in financial matters, and that he knew nothing of what had happened until he regained consciousness at the hotel.

Thought To Have Perished In the Cold.

GREEN BAY, WIS., March 3.—Will French, a traveling salesman for Selz, Schwad & Co., of Chicago, left Marinette for Sturgeon Bay Thursday afternoon at three o'clock in company with Charles O'Garren, a driver. The course lays across Green Bay in a direction south by east. On the afternoon and night of Thursday a fierce blizzard prevailed, the snow falling in a blinding cloud, and the wind blowing a gale. Up to yesterday nothing had been heard from them and it is feared that they got lost while crossing the bay and perished. A search party left Marinette Friday night but was compelled to return after going three miles. Yesterday three parties were out after the missing men.

New Smelting Trust.

CHICAGO, March 3.—The Herald says that with the exception of five companies all the refining and smelting companies of the United States have formed a trust with a capital of $25,000,000, of which $15,000,000 is to be common stock and the remaining $10,000,000 preferred stock. The common stock is to be used for the payment of forced properties that go into the new organization, and the preferred stock for the purpose of ore and such personal property as it may be necessary to have. The chief object, it is said, is to place their interest beyond the absolute control of lead trust.

The Vice President at New Orleans.

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 3.—Vice President Morton and party arrived here Sunday morning. Mayor Bryan and a committee of the city council and the Vanderbilt benevolent association met them at the station and conducted to the Charleston hotel. After breakfast Mr. Morton attended St. Michael's church and was driven about the city. During the day and evening the vice president received a number of callers. Today the party will be taken around the harbor in a revenue cutter and will leave for Florida in the afternoon.

Fatal Railroad Crash.

CHICAGO, March 3.—A Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul fast mail train collided with the rear end of a freight at Oakwood, Wis., yesterday morning, which was running ahead of them. The engineer reversed the engine, but too late, and the engine crashed into the caboose. Engineer Carroll, fireman and the rear brakeman were all terribly cut about the head and shoulders, and Carroll had his ribs broken. They were taken to a farm house near by. It is feared they can not recover. The damage to the trains exceed thirty thousand dollars.

HIGHLY SENSATIONAL.

A Preacher's Darling Asks to be Released From Her Husband.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA., March 3. Papers have been filed in the divorce proceedings of Mrs. Ida Smith against her husband, Rev. James Smith. Smith is one of the leading Baptist ministers of the state and has been in the ministry over 30 years. His wife is young and handsome. From the nature of the evidence to be presented the trial will be highly sensational.

Fatal Michigan Wreck.

ITHACA, MICH., March 3.—A collision between two freight trains here on the Toledo & Ann Arbor road resulted in the killing of conductor Enright, fireman Farrell, of Owosso, and fatally injuring engineer Reading. Two other trainmen were badly hurt.

Sunday Amusements in a Law Dive.

COLUMBUS, O., March 3.—At ten o'clock last night Gus Perkins and B. S. Reed got into a racked in Myer's saloon, corner of Pearl alley and Town street, when Reed hit Perkins over the head with a beer glass inflicting dangerous wounds. Both printers. Reed arrested.

Ex-Congressman Dead.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Charles L. Mitchell, of New Haven, ex-representative of the second district Connecticut, died here yesterday. He was largely interested in silver plating and brittania industries in Meriden.

CONGRESSIONAL CHAFF.

Forecast of the Senate and House's Work for This Week.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The Senate will likely resume the consideration of the Blair Educational bill today. It has gone over so many times now that Mr. Blair is inclined to push it to a vote before long if possible. He has adquiesced in the various postponements, it is understood, because he found it necessary to obtain reinforcements for the bill, which would in all likelihood have been defeated if a vote had been taken upon it a week ago. Mr. Blair believes now that the bill will pass the Senate. It remains unfinished business, to be taken up every day at 2 o'clock until disposed of. Senator Hale has given notice that when the Blair bill is disposed of he will ask the Senate to take up his bill for the increase of the naval establishment, and Mr. Sherman has given notice that he will urge the further consideration of his bill to prevent trusts. There is sure to be antagonism between various pending measures when the Blair bill is out of the way. It is not regarded as altogether likely that it will be brought to a vote this week.

The dependent pension bill which was discussed Friday, has lost its position and can be taken up only by a vote of the Senate during the morning hour. It may be considered further during the week. Mr. Frye has given notice that he will call up the Pacific railroad funding bill Tuesday and demand its consideration at that time. It is not likely that the floor will be yielded to him as the measure in which he is so much interested will have to be debated at great length before it can be disposed of. Mr. Frye will probably have to give notice of some other day when he will call the bill up and to ask that it be made a special order for that day.

The probabilities are favorable to a rather interesting week in the House. Monday will be individual suspension day, which is set apart for the recognition of members who have bills they desire to have passed without lengthy consideration. An effort may be made by the Republicans however, to bring up the Featherston-Cate Arkansas contested election case, but should this be done it is by no means certain that the effort will be successful. Tuesday and Wednesday will be devoted to consideration and passage of public building bills, and on Thursday the committee on appropriations will probably call up the pension appropriation bill. Friday will be private bill day, and for Saturday no programme has been talked about.

QUERY AS TO A QUORUM.

How the Democrats May Take the Pendleton Case to Court.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—In pursuance of the statement made by Mr. Carlisle recently that the unseating of Mr. Pendleton, of West Virginia, will come up in the courts, Mr. Pendleton says: "The action in turning me out was clearly unconstitutional. A member is unseated by the House, and the quorum consists of 166 members, not 162. There are two ways and two places in which the question of constitutionality can be brought up. Suit can either be brought in the Supreme Court or the Court of Claims. The proceedings can be quo warranto in nature and based on a call to the speaker to show cause why he prevents me from exercising the privileges of a member. A suit for salary can also be entered. In either event, the question for settlement will be whether the speaker has a right to declare a member unseated without a quorum voting."

The Democrats say they will not bring suit until Mr. Atkinson votes on some bill which becomes a law and then they will make the point that it is unconstitutional. The Republican managers are perfectly satisfied to make a test case of the matter. They claim they could have had a quorum voting when Mr. Pendleton was unseated, but in order to decide the question definitely, they allowed Mr. Atkinson to take his seat on 162 votes.

BEHRING SEA CONTROVERSY.

An Amicable Adjustment of the Trouble Anticipated.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Despite statements to the contrary there is considerable agitation in American-British diplomatic circles growing out of the Behring Sea controversy. Although there have been no conferences at the state department, it is not an unusual sight for the British minister's equipage to be seen standing in front of Secretary Blaine's residence, opposite Lafayette Square. Minister Charles Emory Smith, who has recently been appointed minister to Russia, is also a frequent visitor at the big red house, and it may be a coincidence, but it is usually at the same time that Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Julian Pauncefote are present. Among the arrivals at the Arlington last night was W. L. Putnam, of Portland, Maine, who took a prominent part as commissioner on the part of the United States in the discussion of the fisheries question a year or so ago. It is understood that Mr. Putnam will also be invited to attend the conferences at the Blaine house, and an amicable solution of the difficulty is confidently predicted.

CANADIAN INDEPENDENCE.

A League Formed to Bring It About By the Year 1892.

NEW YORK, March 3.—A Montreal special says: A league has been formed to bring about the independence of Canada in 1892. All the American powers are to be asked to exert their moral influence, and, if it needs be, concerted action, to free the country from the last vestige of European rule on the continent. The league will have united with it all the Liberal clubs in the country. American universities are to be invited to co-operate, as well as political bodies who have for their object the bringing about of the final triumph of democratic institutions throughout the world. The league will be under the control of a supreme council, whose actions will be kept secret.

This new departure, coming after recent actions of Liberal clubs in declaring for independence, causes much comment here. J. X. Perrault and the "Young Liberals" are at the head of the movement.

A SERIOUS QUARREL

Reported to Have Occurred Between the Emperor and Bismarck.

BERLIN, March 3.—A serious scene occurred between the Emperor and Prince Bismarck. The latter protested against unofficial influences, and especially alluding to Privy Councilor Hinzpeter, the Emperor's tutor. The Chancellor is reported to have said that his majesty must choose between Councilor Hinzpeter and Chancellor Bismarck.

Young Abe's Condition.

LONDON, March 3.—Young Abraham Lincoln is steadily recovering from the effects of the latest operation, and the serious phases of his case are diminishing. While all danger is not yet passed, the prospect is more encouraging than at any time since the illness became alarming.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind. testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at

DR. RANSOM'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human framework, every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

RAISING CATTLE FOR BEEF.

I have been consulting the live-stock statistics of the last U. S. census—the latest reliable data we have for the whole country. In our comparison let the Mississippi River be the dividing line. It is the boundary line of all contiguous states, except Minnesota and Louisiana. It runs through both of these and so, to equalize matters I placed Louisiana east, and Minnesota west of the River. We then have 37 states and the Dist. of Columbia in the eastern division, and 19 states and territories in the western division. For further comparison I have subdivided the eastern division into four sections and the western into three. The 1st. section in the east comprises the New England States. We find there 746,656 cows and 756,796 oxen and other cattle,—a total of 1,503,452. You will notice that there are almost as many cows as beef cattle. The 2d. section we will designate as the Middle Atlantic, embracing New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and District of Columbia. This section contains 2,995,589 cows and 2,760,542 other cattle, a total of 5,756,131, and in it there are more cows than all other cattle, nearly one half of which are in the single state of New York.

Sec. 3 contains nine southern states: North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky. The statistics call for 2,021,118 cows and 3,943 892 other cattle, a total of 5,965,010 Very nearly the same total as in the 2d. section, but a marked difference is noticeable in the proportion of beef cattle, there being nearly twice as many as there are cows.

We come nearer home now. The 4th section comprises Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois. Here we have 2,900,852 cows, and 4,637,188 other cattle, a total of 7,638,040. Although comprising only five states, there are more cattle in this section than in any other, either in the eastern or western divisions, in 1880. Illinois has the largest number in this section—2,384,322; Michigan the smallest number—891,631. But if Michigan's aggregate is the smallest she comes to the front on work oxen, having almost as many as the other four states.

This completes the eastern division, which aggregates 20,852,633 cows and beef cattle, with which to confront the great west.

We cross the River and come to the border tier, comprising Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri and Arkansas. We will call this the old west. It contains 2,040,544 cows, and 4,019,717 other cattle, a total of 6,060,261.

In the 2d. western section we will group Kansas, Nebraska, Texas, California and Oregon. Here we find 1,455,323 cows and 5 919,438 other cattle,—a total of 7,374,761. Texas leads the list with 4,084,605, and Oregon "tails" it with 41 342. It is the largest section in the western division, but it is outnumbered over 200,000 by the same number of states in the section which embraces Michigan.

We conclude with section 3, which we will designate the "new west." It takes in Arizona, Colorado, Dakota, Idaho, Nevada, Montana, New Mexico, Utah, Washington and Wyoming. Here there were 193,038 cows and 1,443,818 other cattle—almost ten beef cattle to one cow. The total is 1,636,856—making a grand total in the western division of 15,071,878, to offset almost 21 millions east of the Mississippi in 1880.

There has, however, been some increase in most parts of the country, and a large increase in the section embracing the "new west," since these statistics were completed. This we will attempt to estimate. Let us say there was a gain of 10 per cent. east of the Mississippi, and in the "old west." We will credit the 2d. western section with a gain of 15 per cent., and the "new west," comprising Arizona, Colorado, Dakota, Idaho, Nevada, Montana, New Mexico, Utah, Washington and Wyoming, we will credit with prodigious increase. We will estimate that each of these states and territories now has five times as many cattle as were there in 1880. This would be 8,184,280, or more than there in any district when the last census was taken. This would bring up the aggregate west of the Mississippi to 23,331,542, and east of the river we would have almost as many, or 22,937,896. From this basis I conclude that when Michigan must cease to grow beef cattle, New England and the Middle Atlantic States will be even worse off than we are. The eastern Southern States will be as badly off as we, and the old west nearly the same. If we must stop they also must, and that would cut off the supply of 17,729,947 beef cattle and leave only 14 026,442 in the country, exclusive of cows.

So in my opinion the time has not yet come for Michigan farmers to send all their male calves to the shambles But the time has come, perhaps, for us not to raise as many of them as we have been doing in the past. Old John Jacob Astor used to say: "Cut short all losses and let the profits run on." With present prices confronting us it would now seem to be good policy for us to curtail production for a time. It is a good opportunity to cut short the loss incidental to present prices; a splendid time to weed out all the weaklings and grow only the best specimens; an admirable chance to enforce the doctrine of "the survival of the fittest." This will enable you to better care for a diminished number of animals of increased individual worth, and it doesn't cost so much to grow the best specimens as it does to keep the poorer ones.

Having acknowledged the discouraging outlook, let us inquire as to the cause of the condition which confronts us.

Unquestionably combinations and corners, selfishly manipulated by millionaire speculators and packers, are in some measure responsible for it. Legislation aimed at the suppression of injurious monopolies and trusts has been attempted in our own State and elsewhere, it is true, without much success so far, but if there be constitutional legal remedy it will doubtless soon be found and applied. But the main cause, after all, is an over-supply from the western ranges. Cattle enthusiasts, encouraged by the money made in the business prior to '83-'84, organized many new companies and engaged in the business extensively and with a certain degree of recklessness. The stocking of these new ranges further increased the demand, and unnaturally stimulated prices. This in turn impelled those who had already made money to further enlarge their business. Very soon this increased production resulted in over-supply. Prices quickly dropped lower and lower. Many of the new firms became embarrassed and hastened to close out their business. Others failed and their stock thrown upon the market further demoralized it, just as any bankrupt stock, thrown upon the market, rapidly demoralizes legitimate business in that line. But, says some one, even under a healthy condition of affairs, these western ranchmen can grow beef cattle, and place them in the eastern markets, at less cost than Michigan farmers can. We answer, yes, somewhat; but taking into consideration their chances of loss from lack of shelter in severe storms, in infectious diseases, short feed from drouth, or destruction by prairie fires, the advantage is not so much in their favor as many think. And in return for all these risks, and the lighter rate of interest on money there prevailing, these western men demand larger profits than we expect. They, then, are no better pleased with existing conditions than we are. In consequence of this, a largely attended convention of cattle owners from many of the western states assembled early this month at Fort Worth, Texas. Its object was to devise measures of relief, and consider the statistical position of cattle, as compared with the demand for beef. Among other things recommended to this convention was a restoration of the tariff on hides and other products of live-stock, on the ground that it is equally as fair to have a tariff on the hide and hair of an ox, as it is to have it on the wool of a sheep.

Without question, there is equal discouragement east and west, and not without reason. But don't abandon cattle altogether. There may be nothing better close at hand; for before you can change your business a reaction is likely to come. The unexpected is always happening. There are ups and downs in every line of business. Three or four years ago you were ready to abandon sheep. In getting out of the business many almost gave away their flocks, only to regret it a year or two later. Already we have seen the opposite extreme, and this year sheep have been our best stock. Last year swine were good, paying property, and this year among the poorest. History repeats itself. When there is good money to be made in any business that line is sure to be crowded, and for a time overdone. Soon the market becomes depressed, there is a panic, and then you find a mob of disappointed persons, more eager to abandon that business than they were to get into it. This in turn brings about another change, which heralds the return of a healthier condition of business. Then the man who has steadily adhered to it through evil and good report is sure to meet his reward. It may be well to diminish our herds, but let us keep them in good quality. Let us make them better if we can, in the hope that they will all be wanted, and fair prices prevail at no distant day.

The Spring Medicine.

The popularity which Hood's Sarsaparilla has gained as a spring medicine is wonderful. It possesses just those elements of health-given, blood-purifying and appetite restoring which everybody seems to need at this season. Do not continue in a dull, tired, unsatisfactory condition when you may be so much benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood and makes the weak strong.

THE VILLAGE ELECTION.

The corporation election which took place last Monday was rather a tame affair. There were two tickets in the field, the regular corporation ticket and a prohibition one, but as the prohibs did not expect to elect theirs, there was no real contest. They concluded however to stand up and be counted. Their ticket polled from 66 to 70 votes, and the regular ticket gathered in 215 on the average. The ticket chosen is composed of excellent men, to whom no citizen of the village could have any serious objection. Every man on the ticket has served the village in an official capacity before and to good acceptance. The management of village affairs during the past year has given general satisfaction, and there seemed to be no special reason for any change. The public improvement most needed at present is the paving of Chicago street and we think the incoming Council ought to make some provision for that work during the coming summer. Below is the full ticket elected on Monday.

HIGH SCHOOL HAPPENINGS.

For various reasons the Happenings have been omitted for the past few weeks. If nothing prevents they will be put in every week from now until the close of the year.

The geometry class took final examination Wednesday. They begin solid geometry, Thursday.

Misses Alice Garlinghouse and Etta Coddington went to Adrian this morning.

The flag was seen floating over our building last Thursday, it being Longfellow's birthday; also, on Monday, election day.

Marvin Hayden was home from Grand Rapids over Sunday. He gave us a short call and we are glad he is doing well.

A number of the young people surprised Bertha and Edna Bryan last Thursday evening. They expect to leave Tecumseh soon, and we will miss them very much from our circle.

The last meeting of the Lyceum will be held next week Friday, March 14. It is expected that it will be the best meeting we have had, and we hope many will come in and hear the debate. The question will be stated in the happenings next week.

SPECIAL SCHOOL MEETING.

There was a small turnout at the adjourned school meeting, held last Monday night, for the purpose of adopting a heating and ventilating apparatus for the East branch. After the meeting was called to order and the business stated by the President, Dr. North, Chairman of the committee on buildings, reported the condition of the present arrangement in the building as wholly inadequate both in its heating and ventilating capacity. A motion was then made by Dr. Jenkins to authorize the board to put in the East branch a new heating and ventilating apparatus, within the present year, at a cost not to exceed $1600, was adopted. On motion of C. F. Field, the meeting proceeded to ballot, by which the board was authorized to give bonds to defray the expense of putting in the new system. While the polls were open the merits and faults of the Smead and Hess systems were discussed, both being represented by their agent. The matter was not decided, however, being left to the board.

THE FARMERS' UNION.

The union met at Alonzo Biddle's Friday evening, Feb. 28. On account of bad roads the attendance was small, only a part of the literary exercises were carried out and the question was left over until next meeting, which will be held at Mr. T. Welliver's, Friday evening, March 14th, with the following program:

Music—Ina Blood.
Reading—Mrs. W. F. Raymond.
Rec.—Fern DePuy.
Music—Eunice Davidson.
Dec.—John Boice.
Rec.—Bertha Smeltzer.
Chip Basket—Joe Eaton.
Music—John Cadmus, Jr., Jared VanVleet, Thos. Florence.
Question:—Has the legislation of the past twenty-five years been for the interest of the farmers. Led by B. F DePuy, followed by Alex. Richard, W. F. Raymond and others.

When a man is ill he should send for a doctor at once; but when he has a cough or a sore throat he needs only Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. 25 cents.

Now that Wm. H. Sherwood has set an example to the musical world by coming to Chicago to take a place at the head of the piano department of the Chicago Conservatory, this city will assume a new position. Instead of a field for recruiting students, it will be a centre of attraction for all pianists. The change is already shown by the number of people from New York and Boston who have already entered as students of the Conservatory, and is a good omen for the art future of this city.—Chicago Times.

OBITUARY.

We clip the following from the Western Spirit, published at Paola, Kansas. The deceased was a resident of Tecumseh several years ago, having carried on the jewelry business in the store of J. D. Robbins:

"Mr. Isaac M Richmond died at his home in this city on Friday, January 24th of the grippe followed by lung fever. He was sick but a week. The deceased was a highly respected resident of Paola who located here in April, 1883, and engaged in the jewelry business.

Mr. Richmond was born in Otsego county, N. Y., in 1831, and was therefore in his 59th year. From his native State he went to Michigan and from there to Colorado. In 1881 he located in Leavenworth, and later on came to Paola. Burial services were held on the 25th inst., interment being in the Paola cemetery."

Teacher's Excursion to St. Paul.

For the annual meeting of the National Educational Association to be held at St. Paul, Minn., July 1890, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co. will sell reduced rate excursion tickets from Chicago and all other points on its 5,700 miles of thoroughly equipped road in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota and South Dakota; and all the railroads in the United States will sell excursion tickets to St. Paul and return for this occasion via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway. M. & St. St. Paul Ry., Griswold St., Detroit, M.

Nearly one year ago, the Juvenile Dramatic Society under the management of Theo. P. Wood, made its first appearance before a Tecumseh audience in that glorious old temperance drama, Ten Nights in a Bar Room, and were greeted with a full house. When the curtain fell on the final scene, the universal verdict was that it was a grand success. Now the society, having strengthened and reorganized its company by the selection of some excellent amateur talent and having succeeded in securing the services of Mr. Wood as general manager, will present another of the series of temperance plays to our people in the very near future. From the fact that Mr. Wood is an indefatigable worker who will spare no pains to make the next entertainment equal if not superior to the last, it is safe to say to our people that a rich treat awaits them.

"MY STORY OF THE WAR."

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore's Famous Book.

We regard this splendid book as a wholly unique work, for it presents the womanly, or what may very appropriately be termed the heavenly side of the war, and this has never hitherto been written.

But the illustrations! An able critic recently said: "This is the most richly embellished work ever published in America." We endorse this opinion There are splendid steel-plate portraits of famous nurses of Union soldiers, and many plates illustrating hospital scenes and thrilling incidents in a woman's army life. No newspaper description can do these costly plates justice. They must be seen to be appreciated. There are also splendid fac simile plates of famous old battle flags, from photographs and paintings made from the original flags, printed in sixteen colors from one hundred and twenty-eight engraved stones. The story of each flag is told, with pathetic incidents attending the death of color bearers who died under their folds.

A MONTHLY REVIEW OF LIVING SUBJECTS

By the Foremost Writers in the World.

THE FORUM has won the highest place reached by any periodical; for it publishes articles by more authoritative writers and by more workers along instructive lines of activity than any other publication. It contains eleven studies of great subjects every month. It is impartial, giving hearings alike to each side. It is financially independent, and it belongs to no sect or party or "interest." It is never sensational, but it aims always to be instructive.

The FORUM is of great value to that part of my college work which deals with practical politics and street questions. Two sets are hardly enough for daily use by students.—Prof. ALFRED BUSHNELL HART, of Harvard.

I consider THE FORUM as furnishing the most intelligent and sympathetic audience that a thoughtful writer can find to address in any land.—Prof. ALEXANDER WINCHELL, of the University of Michigan.

THE FORUM continues to hold its place as the foremost of our magazines, for the variety, the value, and the weight of its contributions.—THE NEW YORK TIMES.

☞ There has come forward no problem of grave importance since THE FORUM was established that has not been discussed in its pages by masters of the subject. Announcements of forthcoming articles can seldom be made long in advance, for THE FORUM's discussions are always of problems of present concern. Every such problem that the year 1890 will bring forward will be discussed, whether in politics, or religion, or social science, or practical affairs. The January number will contain a reply by ex-Speaker J. G. CARLISLE to Senator Cullom's recent article on "How the Tariff Affects the Farmer."

ALBERT J. SLAIGHT, Executor.

Mrs. Delos LeBaron, of Toledo, is visiting friends in Tecumseh.

Miss Corinne Sheldon, of Sterling, is visiting her mother in Tecumseh.

Mrs. Abbie Fisher left yesterday morning for a week's visit at Lafayette, Ind.

J. A. Munger has obtained a situation at Jackson and went there Monday.

Save up your spare pennies to patronize our home Dramatic troupe on the evening of Monday, March 17.

The Prof. Sherwood Recital will positively take place next Saturday evening. Let us give the distinguished pianist a rousing house.

Clark and Washington, fish dealers, having left town, J. H. Clark will henceforth expose the finny tribe for sale at his shop on Railroad Street.

News was received yesterday by telegram of the death, at Eureka Springs, Arkansas, of Mrs. Jane Vincent, wife of Rev. J. Vincent of this place. Funeral services are to be held Saturday morning at half past ten at the house.

Little Trixie was played to one of Tecumseh's large? audiences last Saturday evening. The company was fully up to the average of company companies that usually visit the town. Their specialtes were good and their entire rendition of the play very creditable. They deserved a better house.

Uncle Joe Camburn, one of the oldest residents of Franklin township died last Saturday at the advanced age of eighty four years. He moved into Franklin in the fall of 1832, and has lived on the farm where he died ever since He was the father of twelve children, eight of whom survive him. The funeral services were held on Tuesday last and were largely attended. A more fitting tribute will appear hereafter.

John Tallman has received a letter from an old school boy friend, who is now living at Brookhaven, Miss. Among other things he says: "The darkies are thick down here. I should like to take you to town on some busy day. Nearly all the farmers drive ox wagons with from one to four yoke of oxen. These, together with the swarm of darkies and the men on horseback, make a queer sight to a northerner. Tell your father that this country ought to suit him, as here you find genuine democrats in plenty. It is a strict prohibition country also; the nearest saloon I know of is about fifty miles away."

Surprise parties are all the rage now in East Franklin. As Wm. Spalding and Ernest Wisner are soon to return to their western homes their young friends are improving the time making parties for them. Monday night, March 3d, about thirty of Wm. Spalding's young friends assembled at Jos. Spalding's, bringing their baskets laden with the goodies such as usually accompany an East Franklin party. The evening wrs spent in games and dancing and all had a pleasant time. The party was a complete surprise to Will. The same crowd stormed G. W. Allen's residence Wednesday evening, March 5th, to surpri Miss Rena Allen.

Wm B. Hoeg's home on Shawnee street was the scene of a happy gathering on Friday evening, Feb. 21st. It was the fortieth anniversary of his marriage and about 65 invited guests assembled to assist i celebrating the event. During the many years of their residence in Tecumseh Mr. Hoeg has enjoyed good health, and his wife, although an invalid, has always maintained a cheerful disposition and kept up her interest in church and social affairs. It was a mutual pleasure to both themselves and their friends to commemorate together he day that bound their h rts as one. A large number of beautiful gifts were presented by the attendants, and an evening of unalloyed delight was spent by all. May Mr. and Mrs. Hoeg live to see many returns of their wedding day.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MARCH 6, '90.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Prof. Sherwood, Saturday evening.

Sam James, of Detroit, was in town over Sunday.

J. H. McCone, of Toledo, has been spending a few days in Tecumseh.

An occasional victim of the grip is reported but the epidemic has about run its course.

Marvin Hayden, who is taking a course at Welton's Commercial College, Grand Rapids, is spending a few days at home.

E. H. Rankin, formerly manager of the Tecumseh Lumber Co., was in town last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Comfort have received a precious addition to their family circle, a little article weighing nearly nine pounds, and a girl.

One of the latest victims of La grippe is old Mrs. C. Woodward. The old lady has suffered severely for the past week and is still in a critical condition.

A very pleasant surprise was given to Misses Bertha and Edna Bryan by their friends last Thursday evening. Dancing and music were indulged in until a late hour.

The two nights engagement of the Theo P. Wood Dramatic Society will come off on Monday, March 17 and Saturday March 22d. The plays to be presented are the Drunkard and Ten Nights in a Bar Room.

The annual meeting for the election of officers of the W. C. T. U. will be held at their rooms on Friday, March 14, at 3 o'clock. A full attendance of members is desired, and the membership dues should be paid as soon after the election of officers as possible.

We know of no other native pianist who could play such a program so well as Mr. Sherwood. It seems that Mr. Sherwood's playing has more power to sway and move the listener than ever before. It is evident that his capacity as a virtuoso is to-day of the very highest.—Boston Travl'r.

Chas. E. Barry has got fairly started in his new location, at the D. W. Clark old stand. We dropped in to see him the other day and found him installed over a very neat grocery store. His arrangement in the cellar for keeping butter fresh and sweet is especially good. He starts out under favorable conditions to secure a good trade.

Mrs. D. W. Clark has received a very touching letter of sympathy from Carlisle A. Sharp, who was in Mr. Clark's employ about three years. In his brief tribute to the memory of the deceased he says: "He was the poor man's friend and often helped the poor when they knew not how to remunerate him. His kindness will always be remembered by those who knew him best."

We scarcely know where to begin or where to leave off the praises of this really phenominal virtuoso. Mr. Sherwood's touch is something marvelous. He produces a sound which is positive but not harsh; resonant, but sweet; round and swelling, yet liquidly sympathetic. We cannot name a pianist, at home or abroad, who brings out of the collusion of wood and wire a more musical sound.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Mrs. A. S. Benjamin, of Portland, Mich. will give a parliamentary drill at the G. A. R. hall on Friday afternoon and evening, March 7. Afternoon meeting will begin at 2:30, evening meeting at 7:30. The meeting is intended for the benefit of the W. C. T. U., G. A. R. and W. R. C. No one excluded who attends with a view of receiving actual benefit. Collection at each meeting.

A brother of President Harrison's private secretary, A. J. Halford, has written for the March number of the Philadelphia Ladies Home Journal, an article on "Mrs. Harrison's Daily Life in the White House," prepared with the consent and assistance of Mrs. Harrison. A new portrait of the lady of the White House, especially taken for this article, and a view of the up stairs family rooms of the Executive Mansion are among the illustrations which will accompany Mr. Halford's first magazine effort

Mr. C. E. Wentworth was at the Lilley House three days last week with a large n[illegible] of views and exhibits from Sheffield. he y is located at the head of navigation on the Tennessee river in the midst of the iron regions of north Alabama. In 1884 the site was occupied by the camp of prospecters. It is now a city of several thousand inhabitants with three railroads, five blast furnaces and a number of other industrial establishments. It is destined to become within a few years one of the chief iron centres of the south. Mr. Wentwo h is traveling through the country at the expense of the city, purposely to advertise the advantages of Sheffield. It is a fine illustration brought right home to us of the manner in which business is booming in the new South.

The Drunkard, March 17th.

Herbert Southworth is in Jackson this week.

Ten nights in a bar room, March 22nd.

Mrs. Wm. H. Mather is reported to be quite ill.

Yesterday morning was the coldes morning of the season thus far.

Remember the Prof. Sherwood recital next Saturday evening.

Indications now point to a large attendance at the Sherwood recital on Saturday evening.

The flag upon the Central School Building was unfurled last Monday in honor of the corporation election.

Sena Hosmer returned last week from a four week's visit with friends at Charlotte and Grand Rapids.

Winter weather put in its appearance promptly on the first day of spring.

We print an interesting communication this week from Rev. Peter Sharp of Los Gatos, California.

Miss Bertha Bryan left for Kansas this week, intending to spend the coming summer with her brother.

E. L. Wells of Oakley Mich was shaking hands with his Tecumseh friends last Monday

One of the best family residences in Tecumseh will be sold for two-thirds of its cost if taken soon. For particulars enquire at this office.

The Sherwood Recital next Saturday evening will be a musical treat of rare merit. Such an opportunity seldom comes to our citizens and they should improve it by giving Prof. Sherwood a full house.

Michael Wilson left a sample of his new maple sugar at this office last week. If any man in these parts knows how to make prime maple sugar, Michael Wilson is that man.

The Theo P. Wood Dramatic Society will give that old sterling play "The Drunkard" at our Opera House on Monday evening March the 17th. Let us all turn out and give the boys a good lift.

Mrs O. B. Finch's committee will entertain the Ladies Social at the Baptist Church this (Thursday) evening from five to eight o'clock. Supper ten cents as usual. All are invited.

As it was election day last Monday the saloons were closed. It was sad to witness the sad disappointment pictured upon some men's faces as they would step up to a saloon door, and finding it locked, walk pensively away.

The Patrons of Industry have organized a Lodge in Tecumseh with about sixty members. The first regular meeting will be held at Armory Hall on Thursday evening next, March 13th.

Mr. C. J. Hendershot of Denver, who is making a visit with his old Macon friends, gave us a call last Saturday. He is well pleased with the west and thinks Denver is bound to be a big city.

The Epworth League of the M. E. Church, will give a public entertainment in the Church parlors Monday evening March 10th. A fine musical and literary program will be given. Let all come and bring their friends with them.

Wm. J. Emens and wife of Philadelphia are spending a few days with Mrs. Sarah Edwards and Mrs. Phebe Hunt. Mrs. Emens is a sister of Mr. Edwards, now deceased, and her husband is a prominent produce commission merchant in Philadelphia.

There will be a meeting at the public hall in Hollaway on Tuesday eve, the 11th. at 7 o clock p. m. for the purpose of organizing a Club, the object of which shall be to gain information and discuss questions pertaining to the present system of taxation in this country.

On account of bad roads and weather there was a small attendance of the Farmer's Social Club at J. H. Schreders February 28th. The Club adjourned to meet at F. C. Rector's Tuesday March 11th, instead of Friday March 7th. The program and question previously published.

Walter Heck has moved back to his old quarters over Wright's Drug Store and will keep right on taking pictures the same as before. He has concluded to drive a single team hereafter and his friends will find him prepared to execute all work in his line with neatness and dispatch.

In the list of gifts of the Hendershot—Deldine wedding printed last week, among the donors of an extension table is the name of Isaac Hendershot. It should be Isaiah Hendershot. It was a blunder of the proof reader in thus robbing Isaiah of the credit he was entitled to.

M. P. Brown has bought out Walter Heck and will again run his own photograph rooms. Mr. Brown had some notion of going west this spring, but he has concluded to stay right here and fight it out on this line, and his decision is wise, no doubt. He will not relinquish his insurance or music business, but these two branches can be carried on without interfering with his picture business. He is preparing for a big summer's trade.

The roads are getting better since the freeze-up.

The thermometer nearly touched zero this morning.

The Mackinaw is adding 500 new freight cars to its rolling stock.

There are now 3000 Patrons of Industry in the County of Lenawee.

Slate making for the coming township election is already in progress.

Everybody in Hudson is asked to get in line for a clothes pin] social. What next?

Tickets for the Sherwood Recital are on sale at Adamson Bros. and at Anderson & Co's.

The ice crop has come at last. Beautiful clear ice is now being cut on the Brownville pond.

Prof. Sherwood will furnish a Chickering Grand Piano of his own for the Concert next Saturday evening.

Marshall Thos. R. Kyle has purchased a new stallion from parties in Colon. His name is Gov. Hayes, and he is a thorough bred trotter.

J. D. Shull has some historical curiosities in the shape of land warrants, which contain the signature of John Quincy Adams and Andrew Jackson.

The Jackson train will be held here next Saturday evening to accommodate those from Clinton and Manchester who may wish to attend the Sherwood recital.

Miny Hughes arrived at home one day last week as suddenly as he had disappeared, and his parents are relieved of much anxiety over the return of the prodigal son.

The project of erecting a number of large ice houses around Devil's Lake has been abandoned for this season, although the lumber is upon the ground, and the foundations in readiness.

There is two much truancy in Hudson, and the matter is to be taken in hand by the proper authorities. Urchins of school age had better go to school, or the truant officer will get them—Hudson Gazette.

Oscar Woodbeck, a young son of Jacob Woodbeck shot himself through the hand this morning. It was another case of "Didn't know it was loaded," while fooling with a revolver. Dr. Woodward dressed the wound.

Rev. E. P. Smallidge of Ovid, will supply the Baptist pulpit next Sabbath March 9th. morning and evening. Mr. Smallidge comes strongly recommended as a young man of more than ordinary ability as a speaker.

Miss Mary Anderson and the members of her music class, are entitled to much credit for procuring Prof. Sherwood, the celebrated pianist, and they should be liberately rewarded, by giving Prof. Sherwood a full house.

L. W. Coquillard of Ypsilanti has taken a position in the HERALD job rooms. He comes well recommended and we think he will fill the bill. Our office force is now fully reorganized, and we are prepared to turn out all the work that comes, promptly and in good style.

S. A. James & Co. is the title of a new Detroit firm in which Tecumseh people ought to feel an interest. They will deal in gloves and caps at wholesale. Sam and Alf are the members, one of whom will manage the home end of the business and the other will travel.

HUMAN NATURE.

If you are interested in the study of HUMAN NATURE and Character, and the improvement of yourself and others in any way, we would like to call your attention to the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL AND SCIENCE OF HEALTH, a well-known magazine which has been published for fifty years, and is devoted to all that will improve men Mentally, Morally, or Physically. It is the only magazine of its kind published in this country, and in every way the most important.

The specialty of PORTRAITS of distinguished, or notorious persons, with studies of their character and sketches of their lives, which has always been a marked and attractive feature of the JOURNAL, will still lead the host of good things prepared for the reader.

No one can study themselves or others and not be greatly benefited by the results, and therefore no one can afford NOT to read the JOURNAL. A knowledge of HUMAN NATURE would enable us to understand ourselves and others and to avoid many of the disappointments in life.

TERMS.—Monthly at $3 a year, or 20 cents a Number. To each new subscriber is given either the PHRENOLOGICAL BUST or NEW PHRENOLOGICAL CHART Premium. When the premiums are sent, 15 cents extra must be received with each subscription to pay postage on the JOURNAL and the expense of boxing and packing the Bust, which will be sent by express, or No. 2, a smaller size, or the Chart Premium, will be sent by mail, postpaid. Send 10 cents for specimen Numbers, Premium List, Posters, Catalogue of books, etc. Address

DROWNED!

One Hundred and Sixty-Four Lives Lost.

FOUNDERING OF THE QUETTA ON THE SEA.

Latest From the German Reballoting—Russia's Great Mistake—Young Abraham Lincoln Slowly Sinking—Great Snow Storm in South England.

LONDON, March 3.—A dispatch from Brisbane, via the Straits, says the steamship Quetta, which recently foundered at sea on her voyage from Cooktown, Queensland, for London, had on board 280 persons. Of these 116 were saved, including the captain and other officers of the ship.

The Ill-Fated Quetta.

NEW YORK, March 3.—The steamer Quetta, which struck a rock and sank in the Torron strait, belonged to the British Indian Associated Steamers Company, of Glasgow, which controls a large number of passenger steamers plying between English, Australian and Indian ports. She arrived at Brisbane from London February 5th, and thence proceeded to Cookstown, whence she sailed for London February 27th. She was 2,254 tons net, had six bulk-head compartments, was 380 feet long by 40 feet wide, and had a high rating with the Lloyds. She was built at Dombarton in 1881 by the Denny Brothers.

Reichstag Elections.

BERLIN, March 3.—Up to last evening the official returns of the re-ballots show that 9 Conservatives, 2 Imperials, 17 National Liberals, 22 Freisinnigs, 13 Socialists, 3 Guelphs, and 6 Democrats have been elected.

The Czar's Predicament.

LONDON, March 3.—The Russian government now recognizes its mistake in making a demand for indemnity upon Bulgaria at the request of that principality for recognition of its independence. This is one of the swords which Russia has held over Bulgaria since the empress' troops were dominant in Bulgaria, ostensibly engaged in restoring order, but really intending to remain there permanently if the slightest pretext could be found for such action. It was, of course, presumed that Bulgaria was unable to pay even a considerable portion of the sum demanded, hence the rather peremptory tone of Russia's requisition. To the astonishment of the Czar's government, however, Bulgaria has intimated her perfect willingness to pay, much to Russia's disgust and to the disappointment and regret of the many Russian agents whose recent machinations in the Balkan states have all been in the direction of precipitating a Russian invasion of Bulgaria, as the result of her failure to comply with Russia's demand.

M. Eiffel, the celebrated French engineer, has arrived in London. The chief object of his visit is to confer with Sir Edward Watkin regarding the proposed tower to be constructed in England on the lines of M. Eiffel's Paris tower, though larger.

Although Master Lincoln apparently maintains his strength his physicians say he is slowly sinking, and expressed their fears that the end is not far off. He experiences little or no pain and is uniformly cheerful.

A fierce snow storm, accompanied by high winds, is prevailing in the South of England and on the English channel. Several shipwrecks have already been reported, in one of which three men were drowned.

Young Lincoln's Condition.

LONDON, March 3.—The condition of Master Abraham Lincoln remains unchanged. He is very feeble, but in most respects not noticeably more so than he was in the morning.

JAMES LAWRENSON DYING.

The Oldest Postal Employe in the United States—Seventy-one Years in Uncle Sam's Employ.

BALTIMORE, March 3.—Mr. James Lawrenson is ill with pneumonia and dying at his residence in this city, No. 1415 Lafayette avenue. Mr. Lawrenson is the oldest postal employe in the United States, both in point of years and service. He is 87 years of age, having been born in Bristol, England, March 22, 1803. He came to America when four years old. He is now in the seventy-first year of his postal service. His first position was a clerkship in the Baltimore postoffice, which he held for two years, when he was appointed private secretary to the then postmaster general, and he has been in the general office ever since. He has continued his residence in Baltimore, however, going to and coming from Washington daily. Mr. Lawrenson is a notary public, and nearly all the swearing that has been officially permitted in the postoffice department has been done under his personal supervision. He has administered the oath of office to every postmaster general—twenty-five of them—since the first term of Andrew Jackson, in 1829.

ALLEGED HYPNOTISM,

By Which a Wife's Affections Are Alienated—and His Child Also Taken From Him.

ST. LOUIS, March 3.—Ulysses W. Ungar brought suit here in the Circuit Court against S. G. Johnson for $10,000 for alienating his wife's affections. Eugene H. Johnson is made co-defendant. The petition filed in Court states that the defendants entered Ungar's house during his temporary absence, hypnotized his wife, and took her and the plaintiff's child away with them, and that they have ever since restrained her of her liberty and refused to let him see her.

Fought Twenty-Two Rounds.

NEW ORLEANS, March 3.—Tommy Ward, of Cincinnati, and Charles Wilson, the "English Kid," fought at the West end with five ounce gloves, to a finish, Queensberry rules, for a purse of $400. Twenty-two rounds were fought, when the police put a stop to the sparring, and the referee decided the match a draw. The purse was divided.

Had His Nerve With Him.

VALLEY FALLS, KAS., March 3.—A bold bank robbery occurred here last evening. A masked man entered Hicks & Gephart's bank about 5 o'clock, held up the cashier with two revolvers and robbed the bank. President Gephart is absent. The robber escaped, though the town turned out five minutes after the robbery in hot pursuit.

The Eight Hour System.

CHICAGO, March 3.—The union carpenters of Chicago will not wait until May 1 to begin the fight for eight hours a day. They have sent the ultimatum to the builders' and traders' exchange and carpenters' and builders' association demanding 40 cents per hour and eight hours per day, to go into effect April 7.

THE GREAT PHYSICIAN.

LESSON X, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 9.

Text of the Lesson, Luke iv, 33, 44—Commit Verses 38, 39—Golden Text, Matt. viii, 16—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.)

33. "And in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice." After being rejected by His own townsmen of Nazareth, He came to Capernaum and taught in the synagogue on the Sabbath days. The first part of our lesson is the record of an incident that occurred while He was thus teaching one day. Then, as now, all kinds of people went to church, some with one object, some another, and then, as now, Satan went also among them. As far as we can learn from the Scriptures there is but one devil properly so called, the leader of all wicked spirits, whose other names are Satan, the old serpent, the dragon, the god of this world, the prince of the power of the air, the father of lies, etc. (Rev. xx, 2; II Cor. iv, 4; Eph. ii, 2; John viii, 44); but he seems to have associated with him innumerable other wicked spirits, properly called demons, and so translated in the R. V. margin; and the great business of the devil and his demons is to enter into and possess and control people for their destruction. A man possessed by one of these demons was in the synagogue on this particular Sabbath day while Jesus was teaching.

34. "Let us alone; what have we to do with Thee, Thou Jesus of Nazareth? Art Thou come to destroy us?" Thus the demon in the man cried out as Jesus was teaching.

"I know Thee who Thou art; the Holy One of God." On one occasion when certain men who knew not Jesus tried to cast out demons, the demons cried out: "Jesus I know, and Paul I know, but who are ye?" And the man with the demons leaped on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded (Acts xix, 15, 16). The devil and his angels do not know Jesus for their good in any way, but they know Him as the Son of God, the Holy One, the Christ, and they fear Him, and they know and fear those who are truly His, as Paul was.

35. "And Jesus rebuked him, saying: Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And * * * he came out of him, and hurt him not." He addressed the demon in the man, and His word compelled the evil spirit to leave the man, and he was healed. "He cast out the spirits with His word" (Matt. viii, 16). There is no doubt that the devil and his angels possess people today, and through them say and do the fearful things of which we hear and read and which we see with our own eyes.

36. "What a word is this! for with authority and power He commanded the unclean spirits, and they come out." The last verse of the last lesson (vs. 32) says that "His word was with power;" the source of the power is given us in Acts x, 38, where we are told that "God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power; who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil, for God was with Him." We have His word, we have His spirit, God is with us. And if we were only willing to be filled with the Holy Spirit, we would not only be ourselves delivered from all unclean spirits, but we would be blessed in leading others to the Great Deliverer.

37. "And the fame of Him went out into every place of the country round about." His name is as ointment poured forth.

38. "And. He arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house."

39. "He stood over her, and rebuked the fever, and it left her; and immediately she arose and ministered unto them." A little before He had rebuked the unclean spirit, and now he rebukes the burning in this woman's body, and as quickly as the spirit fled from the man, so this great fever flees before the same Almighty Word; and the woman is instantly well; so well that she is able to minister unto them, and she does it at once.

40. "And He laid His hands on every one of them and healed them." Tidings from the synagogue and from Simon's home soon spread through the city, and people sick with all kinds of diseases are brought unto Him, every one of whom is sent away healed.

41. "And devils came out of many, * * * and He, rebuking them, suffered them not to speak, for they knew that He was Christ." How many happy homes there were in Capernaum that night; people now perfectly well who had long been sick and had suffered much; people now about on the streets and at their work who had not been seen there for many a day; people now meek and gentle to whom you could not speak before without being insulted; and all because Jesus had come. His word and His hand did it all, and He still lives, and is accessible to all who truly seek Him.

42. "And when it was day, He departed, and went into a desert place." Mark says that He rose a great while before day and went away to pray (Mark i, 35). How unlike a so-called minister's Monday. What hungering for communion with His Father, what abstraction from the things of earth! But this is the secret of power. A hold upon God, a clinging to God, a waiting upon Him alone, a whole hearted reliance upon Him, a living in His sight, a witnessing unto Him that He may be glorified, a studying to show ourselves approved unto Him, seeing no one but Jesus only This is for us the way of power.

"And the people sought Him, and came unto Him, and stayed Him, that He should not depart from them." What a contrast to the conduct of the people of Nazareth! But were these people seeking Him for His own sake or for the blessings to be received at His hands? A more practical question is, "Do you seek Him, dear reader, on the day after the Sabbath as well as on the Sabbath? "And why do you seek Him? Is it for His gifts, some blessing from Him, or is it to know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings?

43. "And he said unto them, I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also; for therefore am I sent." The R. V. says, "I must preach the good tidings of the kingdom of God." Matthew adds that He preached the gospel of the kingdom and healed all manner of sickness and all manner of disease. Such also were His instructions to His disciples (Matt. iv, 23; x, 7, 8). As He went only to Israel, and sent His disciples only to Israel (Matt. xv, 24; x, 6), these good tidings of the kingdom of God must have reference to a kingdom which Israel knew about and expected, a kingdom foretold by their prophets. And so it was, for the kingdom preached as then at hand was none other than the kingdom promised to David, and more fully revealed by the prophets (II Sam. vii, 12, 13; Isa. ix, 7; Jer. xxiii, 5, 6, etc.). But Israel received not her King, and the kingdom then at hand is postponed till His return.

44. "And He preached in the synagogues of Galilee." Matthew says that He went about all Galilee. The commission to all His followers now is to "Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature;" and if any believer is content simply with his own salvation and indifferent to the great command, what is he but willfully and selfishly disobedient, and how can he be filled with the Spirit or have fellowship with the Father and the Son?

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January, A. D. 1884, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife, of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan, of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A. D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages, on page 591, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 17th day of May, A. D. 1885, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 20th day of January, A. D., 1890, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in Liber 118 of Mortgages, on page 659; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-one and 12-100 Dollars ($1751.12) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that, by virtue of said power of sale, and the statutes of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now, as aforesaid, due and owing on said mortgage, together with interest to accrue thereon, and the costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Thirty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the 21st day of April, A. D. 1890, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5) town five (5) south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

Dated Jan. 28d, 1890.

"WHEN is a hen and not a chicky." Things should be called by their right names. The many prevalent deaths from Kidney disorders are kept from public attention because physicians state that death results from Rheumatism, Heart Failure, Dropsy, sometimes Consumption, General Debility, etc. In fact, kidney disease has few Symptoms of its Own, and therefore assumes the form of Other diseases, and to avoid a scare the doctors attribute the death to the effect. Could they certainly cure the real cause they would never cover up its ravages under false names. TECUMSEH, MARCH 6, 1890.

CLEOPATRA.

Being an Account of the Fall and Vengeance of Harmachis, the Royal Egyptian.

"Charmion," I said, "the end is at hand. Antony is fled!"

"It is well," she answered; "I am aweary."

And there on the golden bed sat Cleopatra.

"Speak, man!" she cried.

"Antony has fled; his forces are fled; Cæsar draws near. To Cleopatra the great Antony sends greetings and farewell. Greeting to Cleopatra who hath betrayed him, and farewell."

"It is a lie!" she screamed; "I betrayed him not! Thou Olympus, go swiftly to Antony and answer thus: 'To Antony, Cleopatra, who hath not betrayed him, sends greetings and farewell. Cleopatra is no more.'"

And so I went, following out my purpose. In the Alabaster Hall I found Antony pacing to and fro, tossing his hands toward the heaven, and with him Eros, for of all his servants Eros alone remained by this fallen man.

"Lord Antony," I said, "Egypt bids thee farewell. Egypt is dead by her own hand."

"Dead! dead!" he whispered, "and is Egypt dead! and that form of glory now food for worms? Oh, what a woman was this! E'en now my heart goes out toward her. And shall she outdo me at the last, I who have been so great; shall I become so small that a woman can o'ertop my courage and pass where I fear to follow? Eros, thou hast loved me from a boy—mindest thou how I found thee starving in the desert, and made thee rich, giving thee place and wealth? Come, now, pay me back. Draw that sword thou wearest and make an end of the woes of Antony."

"Oh, sire," cried the Greek, "I can not! How can I take away the life of god-like Antony?"

"Answer me not, Eros; but in the last extreme of fate this I charge thee. Do thou my bidding, or begone and leave me quite alone! No more will I see thy face, thou unfaithful servant!"

Then Eros drew his sword and Antony knelt down before him and bared his breast, turning his eyes to heaven. But Eros, crying: "I can not! oh, I can not!" plunged the sword to his own heart and fell dead.

Antony rose and gazed upon him. "Why, Eros, that was nobly done," he said. "Greater art thou than I, yet I have learned thy lesson!" and he knelt down and kissed him.

Then, rising of a sudden, he drew the sword from the heart of Eros, plunged it into his bowels and fell, groaning, on the couch.

"O thou Olympus!" he cried, "this pain is more than I can bear! Make an end of me, Olympus!"

But pity stirred me, and this thing I could not do.

Therefore I drew the sword from his vitals, stanched the flow of blood, and, calling to those who came crowding in to see Antony die, I bade them summon Atoua from my house at the palace gates. Presently she came, bringing with her simples and life-giving draughts. And these I gave to Antony, and bade Atoua go with such speed as her old limbs might to Cleopatra, in the tomb, and tell her of the state of Antony.

So she went, and after awhile returned saying that the Queen yet lived and summoned Antony to die even in her arms. And with her came Diomedes. And when Antony heard, his ebbing strength came back, for he was fain to look upon Cleopatra's face again. So I called to the slaves—who peeped and peered through curtains and from behind pillars to see this great man die—and together, with much toil, we bore him thence till we came to the foot of the Mausoleum.

But Cleopatra, being afraid of treachery, would no more throw wide the door; so she let down a rope from the window, and we made it fast beneath the arms of Antony. Then did Cleopatra, who the while wept most bitterly, together with Charmion and Iras, the Greek, pull on the rope with all their strength, while we lifted from below till the dying Antony swung in the air, groaning heavily, and the blood dropped from his gaping wound. Twice he nearly fell to earth; but Cleopatra, striving with the strength of love and despair, held him till at length she drew him through the window-place, while all who saw the dreadful sight wept bitterly, and beat their breasts—all save myself and Charmion.

When he was in, once more the rope was let down, and with some aid from Charmion, I climbed into the tomb, drawing up the rope after me. There I found Antony, laid upon the golden bed of Cleopatra; and she, her breast bare, her face all stained with tears, and her hair streaming wild about him, knelt at his side and kissed him, wiping the blood from his wounds with her robes and hair. And let all my shame be written: as I stood and watched her the old love awoke once more within me, and mad jealousy raged in my heart, because—though I could destroy these twain—their love I could not destroy.

"O Antony! my sweet, my husband and my God!" she moaned. "Cruel Antony, hast thou the heart to die and leave me to my lonely shame? Swiftly will I follow thee to the grave. Antony, awake! awake!"

He lifted up his head and called for wine, which I gave him, mixing therein a draught that might allay his pain, for it was great. And when he had drunk he bade Cleopatra lie down on the bed beside him, and put her arms about him, and this she did. Then was Antony once more a man; for forgetting his own misery and pain, he counseled her as to her own safety; but to this talk she would not listen. "The hour is short," she said; "let us speak of this great love of ours that has been so long and may yet endure beyond the coasts of Death. Mindest thou that night when first thou didst put thine arms about me and call me 'Love?' Oh! happy, happy night! Having known that night, 'tis well to have lived—even to this bitter end!"

"Ay, Egypt, I mind it well and dwell upon its memory, though from that hour hath fortune fled from me—lost in my depth of love for thee, thou Beautiful. I mind it," he gasped; "then didst thou drink the pearl in wanton play, and then did that astrologer of thine call out his hour—'The hour of the falling of the curse of Menkara.' Through all the after days those words have haunted me, and now at the last yet do they ring within my ears."

"Long is he dead, my love," she whispered.

"If he be dead, then am I near him. What meant he,"

"He is dead, the accursed man!—no more of him! Oh, turn and kiss me, for thy face grows white. The end is near!"

He kissed her on the lips, and for a little while so they stayed, to the moment of death, like lovers newly wed babbling their passions in each other's ears. Even to my jealous heart a strange and awful thing it was to see.

Presently I saw the Change of Death gather on his face. His head fell back.

"Farewell, Egypt; farewell!—I die!"

She lifted herself upon her hands, gazed wildly on his ashen face, and then with a great cry, she sank back swooning.

But Antony yet lived, though the power of speech had left him. Then I drew near, and kneeling, made pretense to minister unto him. And as I ministered I whispered in his ear.

"Antony," I whispered. "Cleopatra was my love before she passed from me to thee. I am Harmachis, that astrologer who stood behind thy couch at Tarsus; and I have been the chief minister of thy ruin. Die, Antony! the curse of Menka-ra hath fallen!"

He raised himself, and stared upon my face. He could not speak, but gibbering, he pointed at me. Then with a groan his mighty spirit fled.

Thus did I accomplish my revenge upon Roman Antony, the world-loser.

Thereafter, then, we recovered Cleopatra from her swoon, for not yet was I minded that she should die. And taking the body of Antony, Cæsar permitting, I and Atoua caused it to be most skillfully embalmed after our Egyptian fashion, covering the face with a mask of gold fashioned like to the features of Antony. Also I wrote upon his breast his name and titles, and painted his name and the name of his father within his inner coffin, and drew the form of the holy Nout folding her wings about him.

Then with great pomp Cleopatra laid him in that sepulcher which had been made ready, and in a sarcophagus of alabaster. Now, this sarcophagus was fashioned so large that place was left therein for a second coffin, for Cleopatra was fain to lie by Antony at the last.

These things then happened. And but a little while after I learnt tidings from one Cornelius Dolabella, a noble Roman who waited upon Cæsar, and moved by the beauty that swayed the souls of all who looked upon her, had pity for the woes of Cleopatra. He bade me warn her—for, as her physician, it was allowed me to pass in and out of the tomb where she dwelt—that in three days she would be sent away to Rome, together with her children, that she might walk in the triumph of Cæsar. Accordingly I went in, and found her sitting, as now she always sat, plunged in a half stupor, and before her that blood-stained robe wherewith she had stanched the wounds of Antony. For on this she would continually feast her eyes.

"See how faint they grow, Olympus," she said, lifting her sad face and pointing to the rusty stains, "and he so lately dead! Why, Gratitude could not fade more fast. What is now thy news? Evil tidings is writ large in those dark eyes of thine, which ever bring back to me something that still slips my mind."

"Ill is the news, O Queen," I answered. "This have I from the lips of Dolabella, who hath it straight from Cæsar's Secretary. On the third day from now will Cæsar send thee and the Prince Ptolemy and Alexander and the Princess Cleopatra to Rome, there to feast the eyes of the Roman mob, and be led in triumph to that Capitol where thou didst swear to set thy throne."

"Never, never!" she cried, springing to her feet. "Never will I walk in chains in Cæsar's triumph! What must I do? Charmion, tell me what I can do!"

And Charmion, rising, stood before her, looking at her through the long lashes of her downcast eyes.

"Lady, thou canst die," she said quietly.

"Ay, of a truth I had forgotten; I can die. Olympus, hast thou the drug?"

"Nay; but if the Queen wills it, by to-morrow morn it shall be brewed—a drug so swift and strong that not the Gods themselves can hold him who drinks it back from sleep."

"Let it be made ready, thou master of death!"

I bowed, and withdrew myself; and all that night I and old Atoua labored at the distilling of the deadly draught. At length it was done, and Atoua poured it into a crystal phial, and held it to the light of the fire; for white it was as the purest water.

"La, La!" she sang, in her shrill voice; "a draught for a Queen! When fifty drops of that water of my brewing have passed those red lips of hers, thou wilt, indeed, be avenged of Cleopatra. O, Harmachis! Oh, that I could be there to see thy Ruin ruined! La, La! it would be sweet to see."

"Vengeance is an arrow that ofttimes falls upon the archer's head," I answered, bethinking me of Charmion's saying.

CHAPTER XXXI.

LAST SUPPER OF CLEOPATRA; SONG OF CHARMION; DRINKING OF THE DRAUGHT OF DEATH; REVEALING OF HARMACHIS; SUMMONING OF THE SPIRITS BY HARMACHIS; AND FINALLY THE DEATH OF CLEOPATRA.

ON THE morrow Cleopatra, having besought leave of Cæsar, visited the tomb of Antony, crying that the Gods of Egypt had deserted her. And when she had kissed the coffin and covered it with lotus flowers, she came back, bathed, anointed herself, put on her most splendid robes, and, together with Iras, Charmion and myself, she supped. Now, as she supped, her spirit flared up wildly, even as the sky lights up at sunset; and once more she laughed and sparkled as in bygone years, telling us tales of suppers which she and Antony had eaten of. Never, indeed, did I see her look more beauteous than on that last fatal night of vengeance. And thus her mind drew on to that supper at Tarsus, when she drank the pearl.

"Strange," she said, "strange that at the last the mind of Antony should have turned back to that night among all the nights, and to the saying of Harmachis. Charmion, thou dost remember Harmachis, the Egyptian?"

"Surely, O Queen," she answered slowly.

"And who, then, was Harmachis?" I asked; for I was fain to know if she sorrowed o'er my memory.

"I will tell thee. 'Tis a strange tale, and now that all is done it may well be told. This Harmachis was of the ancient race of the Pharaohs, and having, indeed, been in secret crowned at Abydos, was sent hither to Alexandria to carry out a great plot that had been formed against the rule of us Royal Lagids. He came and gained entrance to the palace as my astrologer, for he was very learned in all magic—much as thou art, Olympus—and a man beautiful to see. Now, this was his plot—that he should slay me and be named Pharaoh. In truth, it was a strong one, for he had many friends in Egypt and I few. And on that very night when he should carry out his purpose, yea, at the very hour, came Charmion yonder and told the plot to me, saying that she had chanced upon its clew. But in after days—though naught have I said thereon to thee, Charmion—I misdoubted me much of that tale of thine; for, by the Gods! at this hour I do believe that thou didst love Harmachis, and because he scorned thee thou didst betray him, and for that cause also thou hast all thy days remained a maid, which is a thing unnatural. Come, Charmion, tell us; for naught it matters now at the end."

Charmion shivered and made answer: "It is true, O Queen; I also was of the plot, and because Harmachis scorned me I betrayed him, and because of my great love for him have I remained unwed." And she glanced up at me and caught my eyes, then let the modest lashes vail her own.

"So! I thought it. Strange are the ways of women! But little cause, methinks, had that Harmachis to thank thee for thy love; what sayest thou, Olympus? Ah, and so thou also wast a traitor, Charmion! How dangerous are the paths which Monarchs tread! Well, I forgive thee, for faithfully hast thou served me since that hour.

"But to my tale. Harmachis I dared not slay, lest his great party should rise in fury and cast me from the throne. And now mark the issue. Though he must murder me, in secret this Harmachis loved me, and something thereof I guessed. A little, for the sake of his beauty and his wit, had I striven to draw him to me; and for the love of man Cleopatra never strove in vain. Therefore when, with the dagger in his robe, he came to slay me, I matched my charms against his will, and need I tell you, being men and women, how I won? Oh, never can I forget the look in the eyes of that fallen man, that forsworn priest, that discrowned king, when, lost in the poppied draught, I saw him sink into that shameful sleep whence no more might he wake with honor! And, thereafter—till, in the end, I wearied of him, and his sad, learned mind, for his guilty soul forbade him to be gay—a little did I come to care for him, though not to love. But he, he who loved me, clung to me as a drunkard to the cup which ruins him. Deeming that I should wed him, he betrayed to me the secret of the hidden wealth of the pyramid Her—for at the time I much needed treasure—and together we dared the terrors of the tomb and drew it forth, even from dead Pharaoh's breast. See, this emerald was a part thereof!" and she pointed to the great scarabæus that she had drawn from the holy heart of Menka-ra. "And because of what was written in the tomb, and of that Thing which we saw in the tomb; ah, past upon it! why does its memory haunt me now?—and also because of policy, for I would fain have won the love of the Egyptians, I was minded to marry this Harmachis and declare his place and lineage to the world; aye, and by his aid hold Egypt from the Roman. For Dellius had then come to call me to Antony, and after much thought I determined to send him back with sharp words. But on that very morning, as I tired me for the Court, came Charmion yonder, and this I told her, for I would see how the matter fell upon her mind. Now mark, Olympus, the power of jealousy, that little wedge which yet hath strength to rend the tree of empire, that secret sword which can fashion the fate of kings! This she could in nowise bear—(deny it, Charmion, if thou canst, for now it is clear to me!)—that the man she loved should be given to me as husband, me, whom he loved! And therefore, with more skill and wit than I can tell, she reasoned with me, showing that I should by no means do this thing, but journey unto Antony; and for that, Charmion, I thank thee, now that all is come and gone. And by a very little, her words weighed down my scale of judgment against Harmachis, and to Antony I went. Thus it is that through the jealous spleen of yonder fair Charmion, and the passion of a man whereon I played as on a lyre, all these things have come to pass. For this cause doth Octavian sit a King in Alexandria; for this cause is Antony discrowned and dead; and for this cause must, I, too, die, to-night! Ah! Charmion! Charmion! thou hast much to answer for; thou hast changed the story of the world; and yet, even now, I would not have it otherwise!"

She paused awhile, covering her eyes with her hand; and, looking, I saw great tears upon the cheek of Charmion.

"And of this Harmachis?" I asked. "Where is he now, O Queen?"

"Where is he? In Amenti, forsooth, making his peace with Isis, perchance. At Tarsus I saw Antony and loved him; and from that moment I loathed the sight of the Egyptian, and swore to make an end of him; for a lover done with should be a lover dead. And, being jealous, he spoke some words of evil omen, even at the Feast of the Pearl; and on the same night would I have slain him, but before the deed was done he was gone."

"And whither was he gone?"

"Nay; that know not I. Brennus, he who led my guard, and last year sailed North to join his own people, Brennus swore he saw him float to the skies; but in this matter I misdoubted me of Brennus, for methinks he loved the man. Nay, he sank off Cyprus and was drowned; perchance Charmion can tell us how!"

"Naught can I tell thee, O Queen; Harmachis is lost."

"And well lost, Charmion, for he was an evil man to play with; aye, though I bettered him I say it! Well, he served my purpose; but I loved him not, and even now I fear him; though, thanks be to God, as thou sayest, he is lost, and can no more be found."

But I, listening, put forth my strength, and, by the arts I have, cast the shadow of my Spirit upon the Spirit of Cleopatra, so that she felt the presence of the lost Harmachis.

"Nay, what is it?" she said. "By Serapis! I grow afraid! It seems to me that I feel Harmachis here! His memory o'erwhelms me like a flood of waters, and he this ten years dead! Oh! at such a time it is unholy!"

"Nay, O Queen," I answered. "If he be dead then he is everywhere, and well at such a time, the time of thy own death, may his Spirit draw near to welcome thine at its going."

"Speak not thus, Olympus. No more would I see Harmachis; the count between us is too heavy, and in another world than this more evenly, perchance, should we be matched. Ah, the terror passes! I was but unnerved. Well, the knave's story hath served to while away that heaviest of our hours, the hour which ends in death. Sing to me, Charmion, sing, for thy voice is very sweet, and fain would I soothe my soul to sleep. The memory of that Harmachis hath wrung me strangely! Sing, then, the last song that I shall hear from those tuneful lips of thine, the last of so many songs."

"Tis a sad hour for song, O Queen!" said Charmion; but, nevertheless, she took her harp and sang, and thus she sang, very soft and low, the song of the Syrian Meleager:

"Tears for my lady dead,
Heliodore!
Salt tears and strange to shed,
Over and o'er.

"Go tears and low lament,
Fare from her tomb;
Wend where my lady went,
Down through the gloom.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, with its varied and excellent contents, is a library in itself.

It was indeed a happy thought to print an entire novel in each number.

Not a short novelette, but a long story such as you are used to get in book form and pay from one dollar to one dollar and a half for.

Not only that, but with each number you get an abundance of other contributions, which gives you a good magazine besides the novel.

The ringing blows which have been struck on the gateway of popular favor, have resounded throughout the entire land, and to-day Lippincott's Magazine stands in the front rank of monthly publications, and is the most widely-read-and-talked-of publication of its kind in the world. The Business Carnival held last Friday evening has been the principal topic of conversation for the past two weeks. It has been upon every pair of lips and in everyone's thoughts. The ladies of the Congregational Church, who hit upon the idea of a carnival to replenish the church treasury, struck the right chord. All went into it with a will and it created no small amount of good-natured rivalry to see which firm could produce the most magnificent effect. The ingenuity and inventive skill displayed, combined with a lavish expenditure of money for costly fabrics and decorations, showed very plainly that the three score fair young ladies, who took part, represented live business houses, for which Clinton has always been noted. With the exception of the space reserved for the grand march, the Town Hall was filled with a waiting, expectant audience. At precisely eight o'clock the merry marchers, led by Chas. Thompson and Miss Lina Jones, entered the room and proceeded to do the grand march to the music by Rogers' Orchestra. No royal court ever saw a more splendid sight. The ladies were appropriately dressed and nearly all bore banners of a bright and showy nature, having the firm's name it represented stamped thereon. As they moved in circles, counter-marched and went throug the many difficult figures of the march, the sparkling of jewels, the jingling of bells and ornaments, the soft rattle of silken robes, and not least, because last, the charms of queenly forms and faces, all combined to make it a sight never to be forgotten.

The march continued for nearly half an hour and when the music was hushed, and the grand pageant left the room, it was like waking from a dream that had been crowned with fairy visions and enchanting airs. The spectators were allowed but a few minutes to think of the gorgeous sight that had flitted accross their visions, when the beating of a drum announced the second specular event of the eve, a broom brigade. The drill was finely executed by twelve young ladies and was conducted by W. R. Muir. Though they had but little practice before hand, they went through all the military tactics with the ease and accuracy of veterans. When the company left the floor under a double quick they were applauded to the echo. The last part of the entertainment was by no means less interesting. The chairs were replaced in the open space and were immediately filled by those who could not, until now gain access to the hall. A program, composed of recitations, vocal and instrumental music followed, and terminated a brilliantly successful entertainment.

The ladies who planned it and the men who responded so generously, also the fair representatives, all come in for a goodly share of the honor of making the Carnival such a success. The net proceeds could not have been far from $50.

Five Cubic Miles of Rainfall Swell the Rivers

And Threaten Lowlands Along Their Course.

A GENERAL RISE EXPECTED UP TO MARCH 7.

Interesting Special River Bulletin Issued by the Signal Service at Washington—A Rise of Nine Feet Expected at Cario—The Ohio Booming at Cincinnati—Thirty Foot Rise at Chatanooga.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The signal office issued the following special bulletin:

It is estimated that the Ohio river at Cairo will rise nine feet between the present date March 2nd, and March 7th, making the stage of the water at the latter date, at that place, about 51.5 feet. The stage of water at Cairo today is 42.2 feet and has risen 8 feet in the past five days. This stage of water, if it occurs, as it seems highly probable, will nearly equal some of the highest stages of water that have ever occurred at Cairo, namely, the stage of 51.4 on February 28th, 1882; 52.2, February 27th, 1883; 51.5, February 22nd, 1884.

This forecast is based on the recent great rises in the rivers of the Ohio valley. At Cincinnati the stage of water, which is at its highest today, is 57 feet, and has risen 15 feet in the last five days. At Chattanooga the stage of water is 40 feet, and has risen 30 feet in five days. At Nashville the stage of water is 47 feet, and has risen 34 feet in six days. At Nashville and Chattanooga there may be some slight rises still to come. The stage of water at St. Louis is 8.5 feet, and has been stationary.

The high water of February 28, 1882, at Cairo, was preceded by a fifty-nine foot stage at Cincinnati on February 21, a fifteen foot stage at Chattanooga, thirty-eight feet at Nashville and twenty-eight feet at St. Louis. At the latter place there was a rise of seventeen feet in the few days previous.

The high water of February 27, 1883, at Cairo, was preceded by a sixty-six foot stage at Cincinnati on February 15, thirteen feet at Chattanooga, forty-one feet at Nashville, and ten feet at St. Louis, the latter place having a rise of five feet the few days previous. The high water of February 22, 1884, at Cairo, was preceded by a seventy-one foot stage at Cincinnati, February 14, thirty-one feet at Chattanooga, forty-six feet at Nashville, and fourteen feet at St. Louis.

There is an area of country of 108,000 square miles, the drainage water from which passes Cairo, but does not pass St. Louis, Cincinnati, Nashville or Chattanooga.

The empirical rule by which the rise of of nine feet at Cairo is computed is based on the principal rises that have occurred in the past seventeen years. This rule is not apt to be in error more than two feet depending on the greater or less rainfall in the 108,000 square area. The water going by Cincinnati drains from an area of 78,000 squire miles. The excessively high stages of water at Cincinnati, in 1883 and 1884 are more than compensated for this year by the greater rainfall in the country below Cincinnati. The rainfall the past week in area above Cincinnati, Nashville and Chattanooga has been about five cubic miles. For the whole Ohio valley it has been nearly eleven cubic miles. In 1882 for the whole month of February, it was about twenty-two cubic miles for the whole Ohio valley. In the Vicksburg drainage area below Cairo and Little Rock, equal 71,000 square miles, there has been a rainfall of 3.5 cubic miles, the past week.

The rainfall from February 22, 8 a. m., to March 1, 8 a. m., occurring principally from the 24th to the 27th, have been, at Knoxville 6 inches, Chattanooga 4.4 inches, Nashville 5.2 inches, Memphis 4 inches, Cairo 4.3 inches, Columbus 3.4 inches, Indianapolis 3.3 inches, Louisville 2.9 inches, Little Rock 2.7 inches, Vicksburg 2 inches.

At Vicksburg the stage of the river is 46.3 and at Little Rock 19 feet. For a 52 stage at Cairo, February 28, 1882, and 25 feet at Little Rock, the subsequent highest water at Vicksburg, March 20, was 48.8 feet.

For a fifty-two stage at Cairo, February 22, 1884, and 22 feet at Little Rock, the subsequent highest water, at Vicksburg, March 25, was 49 feet. It seems likely therefore that by March 14 the river at Vicksburg will rise to a height of 49 feet, unless by that time a great deal of water has run into the St. Francis and Yazoo bottoms. These predictions are subject to some uncertainty on account of any rainfalls that may occur before March 7. Any further rainfall will tend to make the water higher. It is not likely, however, that there will be any considerable rainfall, as the temperature throughout the country is low, and apt to remain so for several days. Lack of rainfall and river stations renders more accurate forecasts impossible.

SEIZED WITH HYDROPHOBIA

After Twenty-Four Years Since He Was Bitten By a Dog.

ERIE, PENN., March 3.—John Wilson, a young farmer living near Erie, is the victim of hydrophobia. He lies in convulsions and the case is well marked. Twenty-four years ago he was bitten through the thumb by a dog. A few weeks ago he felt a numbness in his hand, and as soon as it had reached his shoulder he was seized by the rabies. Neighbors held him fast with buckskin covered hands. During the lucid intervals the poor fellow begs piteously to be smothered and put out of his misery. He is a single man and 28 years old.

FIFTH DEATH BY DIPHTHERIA

In the Family of Hon. J. C. McGregor, Ohio House Recording Clerk.

ZANESVILLE, O., March 3.—Mrs. McGregor, wife of J. C. McGregor, reading clerk of the Ohio House, has died of diphtheria. This is the fifth death in the family, four children and the mother dying within twelve days. The father and several children are also down. The father is not expected to live.

Both Turned Up Nearly Dead.

GREEN BAY, WIS., March 3.—William French and his driver arrived at this place at noon in an exhausted condition. They spent two nights at Green Bay, one on Squaw Island and the other on the ice.

A Turner Hall Burned.

OSHKOSH, WIS., March 3.—The North Side turner hall was completely destroyed by fire at four o'clock in the morning. Loss $16,000; insurance $8,600. Cause unknown.

REWARD OF MERIT.

So ye've whaled yer teacher, Bill?
Needed it the wussest kind,
That ar' white-faced, stuck-up dood,
Thinkin' ev'ry body's blind—
Cept his self—an' he knows 't all,
Argied right afore my eyes
That this yearth o' our'n ain't flat—
Sun don't move ter set nor rise!

Said the sum I done wa'n't right,
'N', Bill, I'll tell ye once ergin,
Yer ole daddy aint no slouch,
W'en it comes ter figgerin',
Could n't beat a spec o' sense
Through his mulish, thick-skulled head,
'T last I said I'd wollop him,
Glad ye've did the job instead.

Hope ye done it up in shape—
Thun—der—a—tion! Wher's yer eye?
Gone? An' teeth knocked out? An' say,
Bill, now durn ye, doncher lie,
How'd ye git them doggoned thumps
On yer back? What! Went an' run?
Rob, you fetch my raw-hide here
'F that's the trick the coward's done.
Licked! an' run from that ar' dood
Half his size! Wal, durn my skin,
'F I don't trounce the lubber heels
Hope ter never breathe ergin.

Tell yer teacher wot I've did,
Rob, an' ax him here ter tea.
Feller with his sort o' grit
'S jest the kind I like ter see.
Tell him now the yearth is round,
'N' 'bout the sun, I 'low he's right,
'N' any fool what don't ergree
'S got both him an' me ter fight;
'N' mind ye, Rob, 'bout that ar' sum,
'T say I've 'skivered my merstake,
'N' he'll allus find my latch-string out,
M' fist wide open fer his shake.

FIDDLER JOE.

Pathetic Story of His Life in the Michigan Pineries.

I stood by the one little square window of which good Parson Griggs' log-cabin boasted, gazing dreamily out across the clearing, which seemed like a diminutive island in an ocean of pine. A heavy snow-storm had mantled every visible object with white, and the crystal flakes were still slowly sifting down, although the sun was driving wedges of gold through the myriad rifts that divided the somber clouds overhead.

"It's clarin' up," remarked the parson, as he knocked the ashes out of his pipe and placed it upon the rude mantel above the fire-place. "I reckon," he continued, "thet ef we're goin' to try an' hev' any fun with the deer to-day, we'd better turn loose the purps an' git to trackin'."

He was a curious character, was the parson, and a man of many callings. Hunter, trapper, river driver, farmer and preacher, he was as genuine a product of Northern Michigan as the sturdy pines that hedged his forest home. True, his illiteracy may have somewhat circumscribed his usefulness as a minister of the gospel, but his hearers, for the most part, were not disposed to be hypercritical, and his weekly meetings at the big log school-house over on section eight were well attended. He possessed a homely wit, a ready command of language, and a fund of shrewd, practical common sense, which in a great measure atoned for his deficiencies in the matter of education, and he was very popular with his backwoods congregation.

"He hain't no college-bred pulpit-mauler," said one of his admirers to me on one occasion, "an' he don't use such purty language as some I've heerd, but when he gits warmed up with the spirit an' goes to showin' up the blamed dirt an' meanness that most of us kerries in our hearts he makes me feel meaner 'n a yaller dog—durn me ef he don't."

But whatever may have been the parson's merits or demerits as a preacher, he was certainly a most excellent hunter, and every year late in the shooting season I left my business and sought the pineries for a two-weeks' hunt with my eccentric friend. On the day of which I speak we had been kept in the house several hours by the driving storm, and we hailed the prospect of pleasant weather with much satisfaction.

"This is a mighty big fall o' snow for November," said the parson, as he slipped a handful of cartridges into his Winchester, "an' it'll be a great day for trackin'. I wouldn't wonder ef—"

At this point he was interrupted by the loud baying of one of his hounds, and a moment later there came a rap at the door. The visitor, without waiting for an invitation, strode into the cabin, and divesting himself of a big fur cap which had covered the larger share of his face, revealed the familiar features of Big John, a woodsman from one of the neighboring camps and a well-known character in those parts.

"I've come down," said Big John, as he shook the snow from his "Mackinaw," "to git ye to go up to Colburn's camp, an' I'm mighty glad I found yer to home, parson. Fiddler Joe got all smashed up this mornin' an' he wants to see yer bad."

"How did it happen?" I asked.

"I warn't thar," said Big John, "but the boys said as how two blame fools from Saginaw as was hangin' around the camp got in the way of a fallin' tree, an' Joe rushed in to push them back an' got pinched himself."

"Is he bad hurt?" asked the parson.

"He's got his summons an' thar ain't no gettin' 'round it. I'm mighty dubious that he won't hold out till we git thar," and the big fellow brushed something from his face that did not resemble snow, and turning abruptly away walked to the window and stood looking out in silence until we got ready to start.

Fiddler Joe was a great friend of ours—indeed, he was the friend of all who knew him. Rough and uncouth in his manner, but honest, generous and true, he was a prime favorite with his fellow-craftsmen and very popular with the settlers. He was an excellent performer on the violin, and his presence was in demand at all the country dances far and wide. After a hard day's work in camp he would frequently walk several miles to gratify the wishes of some of his young friends, who considered no social gathering or entertainment complete without Joe and his fiddle. His willingness to oblige, his kindness of heart and his generosity were proverbial. If one of the boys in camp was sick it was Fiddler Joe that nursed him back to health. If a comrade was in hard luck he was always sure of Joe's sympathy and aid. It was he who breasted the mad waters of the North Branch in the dead of winter to save the crippled shore boy from drowning. It was he, too, who, when Big John came down with the small-pox in Bradford's camp, in the spring of '79, remained with him and nursed him through his illness, when every other man in the crew fled in terror at the first mention of the pestilential disease. Where he came from, or what his antecedents were, no one knew, for he never told any thing of his past life and did not like to be questioned concerning it. It was believed by his friends that he had at some time occupied a much higher station in life than his present one, and there were those who said that once, when somewhat under the influence of liquor—the only time, so far as any one knew, that he had ever yielded to any extent to the seductive influence of the flowing bowl—he had cast his rude form of speech from him as a garment, and conversed for a time in language that would have done credit to the most cultured gentleman.

An hour's walk brought us to Colburn's camp, which was something over four miles distant. The injured man was lying on a rude couch near the doorway of the sleeping camp. It needed but a glance at his pallid features to assure me that he was past all human aid. The bones of his chest had been crushed and shattered by the terrible blow he had received, and he breathed with great difficulty. He recognized us as we entered and feebly stretched forth his hand to welcome us.

"Shell I pray with you, Joe?" asked the parson.

"Yes, parson," answered Fiddler Joe, "but make it short, 'cause thar ain't much time."

Parson Griggs knelt beside the dying man and sent up a petition for the soul so soon to be launched upon the boundless ocean of eternity. When he arose the men in the room and about the door were standing with uncovered heads, and the tear of sympathy gleamed on many a cheek for years unused to such a visitor.

"How do you feel about the futur', Joe?" asked the parson. "Is all well with yer?"

"I guess it's all right, friend," replied Joe, feebly; "it kinder seems to me thet I've done more good than harm in the world, an' I reckon the balance 'll be on the right side. Ef I ain't square now thar ain't no time for me to square myself." He paused for a moment to rest and then continued: "Thar's two or three things I want to talk about. As I was tellin' the boys, I don't want no fuss made, no church funeral, no gravestuns. Jest plant me out here in the woods somewhar—at the foot of some big pine. I hain't no kin as would keer for me, dead or alive—an' I allus sleep better in the woods, anyhow."

He paused again, faint and weak from his effort to talk. Big John held a small flask of spirits to his lips and he revived.

"I want ye to say a little suthin' at the plantin', parson," he said, presently; "I don't want no sugar coatin' nor nothin' o' thet sort, but you kin jest say, an' say it truthful, too, thet I never went back on no friend—not once. Thet's why I'm here, boys—here in the pine woods—dyin' away from my kin—jest because—I stood by — a friend—when he—" and his voice sank to an indistinguishable whisper.

"Whar are your relations, Joe?" asked the parson, in husky tones, as he bent over the sufferer—"ain't thar no one ye want us to write to?"

"No," gasped Joe; "I've been—dead to them—twenty years."

A spasm of pain crossed his face, his head sank back and death forever sealed the mystery of his life.

* * * * * * *

We buried him, as he had requested, deep in the forest at the foot of an enormous pine. Over the open grave Parson Griggs paid a homely but touching tribute to the virtues of his dead friend, and then knelt in prayer beside the rude coffin.

"O, Lord," he said, "we commend to Thy mercy the sperit that went out yesterday through the gate of death into the unknown land that lays beyond. Thou knowest that our friend was not considered as bein' a prayin' man, but we who knew him best feel sure that his heart prayed when his lips made no sound. He made no profession, but we believe that Thou wilst judge him by the testimony of his acts rather than that of his mouth. Like Him they crucified, he died to save others. Like Him, too, he went through life doin' good. His ear was never deaf to the voice of trouble. He clothed the naked, fed the hungry an' visited the sick. No night was so dark, no storm so fierce, no road so rough, as to keep him from the side of the sufferin' an' the needy. He was every man's brother. Of all who hev come here to honor him thar is not one whose load he has not sometime made a little lighter. We bury here the worthless husk thet hid the golden grain of goodness. May we who stay behind larn the lessons thet his life an' death should teach. May the seeds of kindness thet he scattered all through this forest wilderness blossom in tempted souls an' bear fruit fit for Thy kingdom; an' to Thy name shell be all the glory. Amen."

Three days later, returning from a hunting excursion, the parson and I passed Fiddler Joe's grave. As we neared the spot we saw Big John standing by the tall pine which was Joe's monument. He had hewn a sort of tablet on the side of the tree and stood regarding it as we came up.

"He didn't want us to git him no gravestun, an' I thought thar ought to be suthin' more'n a tree to mark the grave of the whitest man that ever struck these parts," said John, as he hastily passed his sleeve across his eyes. "'Taint no very han'some job," he continued, apologetically, "but 'twas the best I knowed how to do."

Upon the tablet rudely carved with a pocket-knife was the following inscription:

HUMAN NATURE.

If you are interested in the study of HUMAN NATURE and Character, and the improvement of yourself and others in any way, we would like to call your attention to the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL AND SCIENCE OF HEALTH, a well-known magazine which has been published for fifty years, and is devoted to all that will improve men Mentally, Morally, or Physically. It is the only magazine of its kind published in this country, and in every way the most important.

The specialty of PORTRAITS of distinguished, or notorious persons, with studies of their character and sketches of their lives, which has always been a marked and attractive feature of the JOURNAL, will still lead the host of good things prepared for the reader.

No one can study themselves or others and not be greatly benefited by the results, and therefore no one can afford NOT to read the JOURNAL. A knowledge of HUMAN NATURE would enable us to understand ourselves and others and to avoid many of the disappointments in life.

TERMS.—Monthly at $2 a year, or 20 cents a Number. To each new subscriber is given either the PHRENOLOGICAL BUST or NEW PHRENOLOGICAL CHART Premium. When the premiums are sent, 15 cents extra must be received with each subscription to pay postage on the JOURNAL and the expense of boxing and packing the Bust, which will be sent by express, or No. 2, a smaller size, or the Chart Premium, will be sent by mail, postpaid. Send 10 cents for specimen Numbers, Premium List, Posters, Catalogue of books, etc. Address

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Prof. Daniels attended the teachers' examination at Adrian last week.

A good work horse for sale cheap. For full particulars inquire of G. C. Arner.

Daniel Allen spent a part of last week in Toledo, with his son Frank and family.

Minnie Montgomery, of Tecumseh, visited several days last week with Marcie Kelly.

Burt Lawton left Monday noon for Onsted, where he expects to work the coming season.

Several of our senior students attended the teachers' examination at Adrian last week.

James Harrison, who was reported very sick a few weeks ago, was in the the village Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Israel Schreder, of Clinton, visited his sister, Mrs. W. H. Arner and family, last week.

Kitty Clark enjoyed the hospitality of Miss Ella Jackson, of Tecumseh, from Saturday until Monday.

Ella Jackson, of Tecumseh, spent Wednesday and Thursday of last week with friends in the village.

Chas. Smith's little girl, who has been very sick during the past week, is at present writing on the gain.

Jennie Osgood filled the bill as teacher during the Professor's absence last week Thursday and Friday.

Frank Montgomery, who has been at Battle Creek for the past year, moved back to his place last week.

Mr. Sullivan, of Bristol, Ind., was in the village Wednesday morning, with the view of buying the General Supply Co.'s business.

Dr. Begel, of Holloway, occupied the pulpit on Tuesday evening of last week and presented a very convincing and beneficial discourse.

Eli Beebe, of Connecticut, is spending a few days with Mrs. Hall and family, during his stay here in the interest of the J. E. Hall estate.

Those who attended the Sherwood Piano Recital in Tecumseh Saturday evening were very much pleased and speak of him in the highest praise.

Rumor says orange blossoms are about to put forth their fragrance in the near future. The contracting parties are—well, we won't give it away.

G. P. Waring has concluded to offer his store business and building for sale, also the undertaking business. Those who want to make such an investment will now have a good opportunity.

Mrs. Lewis Miller, who has been with her daughter, Mrs. B. J. Coller, at Detroit, the past two months, during the sickness and death of her little daughter, returned to her home Wednesday of last week.

Sylvester Beach of Grand Island, Nebraska, who was called here by the death of his mother, was united in marriage on Tuesday of last week to Miss Vina Barrett. They left for his home on Thursday afternoon.

The question to be discussed by the students next Friday afternoon is as stated, Resolved—That the farmers as a class are competent to become legislators. Miss Jennie Osgood, aff; Robt. Bailey, neg., to be followed by other students.

The Library circle will give their first evening recital on Tuesday evening of next week, at the Library parlors. The poet chosen by the committee, from which selections will be furnished, is W. C. Bryant, interspersed with music.

MACON MUSIC.

There will be a pigeon shoot Saturday afternoon, March 15th.

Lyman Ames has sold his farm and will reside in Clinton the following summer.

Milton Augustus, who has been in Florida for the past three months, returned last week, bringing with him two alligators, one of which died on the road.

Zeb Fuller, our mail carrier, has sold his contract, including horse, harness and buggy, to Horace Burgess, who will carry the mail hereafter and do your errands.

Sylvester Thomas has bought a new sawing machine, expressly for sawing lumber. He intends to saw lumber in connection with his threshing, clover hulling, picket and wood sawing etc.

Augustus and Gleason, proprietors of the northside meat market, have their supply of ice secured. They struck the right time, while those waiting for thicker ice will probably go without.

"A stitch in time saves nine," and if you take Hood's Sarsaparilla now it may save months of future possible sickness.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

B. Tripp, of Britton, was in town Wednesday.

Mr. Geo. Mize contemplates moving to Tecumseh.

Webb DePuy, of Saline, spent a few days at Jas. McIntyre's last week.

Miss Millie Payre was visiting friends in this village the last of the week.

Miss Nettie Bassett, of Ridgeway, visited at F. G. Florence's over Sunday.

Della Kerr is home for a few week's vacation; her school closed on Thursday.

Mr. E. Walworth and sister, of Manchester, called on Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Sleeper Sunday.

Mr. McCleuathan has purchased the house and lot belonging to Geo. Holloway and will soon become a citizen of Holloway.

The young people's social, held at the home of James McIntyre, was very successful. Although a mere "shadow" it netted the society about nine dollars. The boys propose to be sold themselves next time, and being anxious to learn their value in the eyes of the fair sex, will furnish the refreshments.

Mrs. Ezra Hoxie, of the State of N. Y., who undertook a pleasure trip to California with her brother and his wife, has not enjoyed the journey very much. When going they were snowed in for several days, and on arriving in Sacramento her brother was taken ill and died, and now the two ladies return east with his corpse.

The winter term of school at Holloway, taught by Chas. E. Chase, closed with appropriate exercises Friday afternoon, March 7. The following is the program:

Opening Song.
Opening Address—Ella Pierce.
Reading, What is Life?—Mattie Starin.
Recitation, Grandma's Help—Bertha Macham.
Recitation—Artie Spencer.
Essay, Work—Dannie Gillies.
Recitation—Cassius Florence.
Chip Basket—Minnie Kerr.
Recitation, The Village Blacksmith, Philla Wright.
Recitation—Kate Shelley,—Mabel Graves.
Recitation—Florence Spencer.
Paper—Eva Doty.
Poem—Laura Carpenter.
Song.

At the close of the exercises Mr. W. E. Doty made some interesting remarks.

RAISIN RACKET.

Hartley Stretch is sawing wood.

Quite a number in the vicinity filled their ice houses from Southworth's pond and from the old river beds.

Wm. Payne has moved into T. I. Sutton's tenant house and is going to work for him by the month next summer.

W. E. Wilson and wife spent Sunday at A. C. Green's. Will is travelling in the interest of the Rewell ratchet mop.

Mrs. Wall Slee, who has lived in the Valley, starts for Chicago Monday to make it her permanent home, where her husband works in a willow manufacturing establishment.

Seth and Hulda Rees preached their farewell sermon at the Valley church last Sunday and Monday morning he started to New York as a delegate to the National Christian Alliance.

GREAT SIOUX RESERVATION NOW OPEN.

The fertile lands in the Great Sioux Indian Reservation, west of the Missouri river, are now opened for settlement. The President's proclamation was issued on February 10th, 1890. The natural gateway to the Southern part of the reservation is via Chamberlain, South Dakota, the present western terminus of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway. From that point to the lands beyond, homeseekers must proceed by team. All necessary outfits can be secured at reasonable prices at Chamberlain.

For the convenience of persons who may desire to inspect the new country first-class reduced rate excursion tickets, to Chamberlain and return, will be sold from Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, good to return until October 31st, 1890.

For maps and circulars, containing general and detailed information, please apply to the nearest ticket agent, or address A. V. H. Carpenter, General Passenger Agent, Milwaukee, Wis. Harry Mercer, Mich. Pass. Agt. Chi. Mil. & St. R. Ry., 90 Griswould St., Detroit, Mich.

DETROIT, MICH., May 31.

F. E. C. MEDICINE Co.—I can cheerfully recommend your F. E. C. as the "boss" medicine for kidney complaint. Two bottles have cured me and I have ordered five bottles to be sent to my wife, who is suffering from kidney trouble. ABRAM SMITH.

MACON CENTER CHIPS.

DeWitt Martin's school closed Saturday, March 1st.

Rev. Mr. Meulendyke will preach in the Reformed churches of Macon, Sunday, March 23d, as follows: Macon 10.30 a. m., South Macon 1:30 p. m. Despelder church 7 p. m.

C. W. Benedict, manager of the Tecumseh and Macon Telegraph line is putting in the instruments along the Macon Central line this week. Just wait a few days and you well hear some clicking.

The next meeting of the Macon Grange will be Friday, March 21st, at 7 o'clock p. m. In addition to the usual work the following program will be given:

Song—Grange.
Rec.—Emma Bailey.
Reading—Mrs. C. V. Skinner.
Song—Metta Miller.
Chronicles—Dan Bailey.
Essay—Harry Bailey.
Song—Josie Clarkson.
Reading—Georgia Baker.
Dec.—Robert Bailey.
Dialogue.

Question for discussion, Resolved: That it would be beneficial to the Township of Macon to own at least four good road scrapers to be used in said town. Also, to own gravel pits located in different parts of the town; and that the several districts in town shall have free use of them for the purpose of improving their roads. Further, Resolved: That it is the duty of the Township Board to purchase the one and rent or purchase the other for road improvements.

SPRINGVILLE SIFTINGS.

Arthur White spent Saturday and Sunday at home.

Alice Burton is enjoying the hospitality of Central Michigan friends.

A considerable quantity of thin ice was stored last week.

Simon Shultis is confined to his home by sickness.

Master Percy Hubbard agreeably entertained a number of his young friends Wednesday evening.

Francis Lewis and J. I. Rogers are preparing to erect large barns the present season.

The east end visiting club will be entertained by Miss Helen Queal, Wednesday evening.

The Columbia, Jackson County, Farmers' Club met at the residence of N. F. Raven, Saturday, March 8, at which time and place a Cambridge club was organized.

The Cambridge S. S. Institute will be held at the Prospect Hill church, Saturday, March 22, at 12:30 o'clock p. m. A program, including papers by Miss Clara Daniels, Rev. W. P. VanWormer and Thomas Beal, is announced for the occasion.

Monday evening, while Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ayres were musing on the events of their ten years of wedded life, they were suddenly confronted by about fifty unbidden but welcome guests, who, after a few hours of social intercourse, departed, leaving a decorated china dinner set as a token of their esteem for the host and hostess.

DEVILS LAKE DOINGS.

How nice the rain seems again after the drouth of last week.

Toledo parties came here Friday and commenced filling their ice house but the rain stopped them.

The school here has secured the services of their former teacher, Miss Anna Jenkins, for the Spring term.

Lew Bedell shipped his goods to Toledo Monday. They expect to make that city their home for some time.

Charlie Wareham and bride has moved into Mr. Bedell's house and expects to work his farm the coming season.

A number of young men from Addison, among them Prof. Tripp and John Sorby, took advantage of the beautiful weather and good skating Saturday, and came down here on the morning train and skated from this place to Manitou, where they took the train for home in the afternoon.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Mrs. John Stout, sister of William Fisher is very low.

Mrs. Thomas Smith of Tecumseh is visiting friends in Franklin.

Neal Derby shipped another carload of hogs last Monday.

Mrs. James Lansing is visiting in Tipton this week.

J. M. Burns is drawing lumber for his new residence.

The Tipton people took advantage of the good roads last Wednesday and drew lumber for the new side walks.

Bert Smith is repairing his house, with the intention of moving this spring.

Last Saturday while Wm. Fisher was working in the woods, he met with quite an accident. A limb fell, hitting him on the head. It was a narrow escape from a serious injury.

BIRTHDAY COMPANY 1890.

February twenty-fifth as usual for many years, a social company met at the farm house of Francis A. Dewey, Cambridge Junction. It was his 79th birth-day. The rooms were decorated with flags and mottos. The company numbered thirty six; the tables were bountifully spread at 2 P. M. with fertile products of Michigan, and many varieties of other climates notomitting the depths of the sea. It was an enjoyable time after the feast was over; each and all from the youngest of the family received as a present not less than a silver dollar.

A brief record shows that F. A. Dewey was born at Three Rivers, Lower Canada, Feb. 25th, 1811; when six months, old was carried over the British lines south through the Shadagee woods to Hanover, N. H, and learned the first lessons of education; he was also a scholar at Moore's Academy, Preceptor Wimple, for two years; a cadet at Capt. Patridge's Military school at Norwich, Vt., and in 1827 was a student in Capt. McKay's Military Academy, Buffalo, N. Y. In 1828 was engaged in navigating the passenger sloop Niagara, which sailed from Buffalo to Fort Erie, Canada. In 1829 was introduced to the forests of Michigan. My father's log house was built one mile west of Tecumseh village, in the wilderness at the end of the road, and last house west. Here on a tenor drum was beat the first revelee in Lenawee county. Here we learned the practical use of an axe and piling brush. In 1830-31 was stage driver from Detroit west. We oft times called at the historical log house, in Detroit, of that accomplished gentleman and eminent statesman, Gen. Lewis Cass. When that monumental log building was taken down, which was built over one hundred years ago, an esteemed friend, Mr. Waldron, had a chair made from one of the logs and sent to me as a relic of pioneer days. In 1832 was a drummer in the Black Hawk war; marched to the far west through the wilderness in pursuit of Indians; General Joseph W. Brown, Commander. Also the same year, assistaut with commissioners and Musgrove Evans, surveyor, in laying out the U. S. military road from LaPlaisance Bay, Monroe, to intersect the Chicago road at what is now Cambridge. In 1833 was looking over lands and surveying in the west part of Lenawee county and in 1834 bought opening lands on four sections for one dollar and twenty five cents an acre, bordering on a lake for about a mile; 1835 drove stage. In 1836 was married to a well educated young lady Miss Mary Ann Smith, of Woodstock, the same year built a log house on my lands over a mile from any road or neighbors; here in this romantic and beautiful solitude began clearing with the help of a yoke of oxen and truly good wife. With genuine contentment on all sides it was pleasant to look around the wild openings early in the morning; the wild turkeys gobbled, also the sand hill cranes, prairie hens and quails; out on the admired lake well supplied with fish, were ducks, loons, wild geese and swans; at midnight often heard the owls and wolves. The land proved productive for grain, grass and fruits, with cattle, horses and sheep of our own raising. Sheared at one clip of wool and sold to Charles Larzelere of Clinton, $2200 worth of wool. October 1864 bought of Hon. Sylvester Walker the Junction farm for $4,000, and my son John Dewey has the old farm. In 1876 was elected by the State Historical and Pioneer Society at Lansing a delegate to the Centennial. Our route was Detroit, Montreal, Hanover, Boston, New York, Baltimore, then two weeks at Philadelphia and one week at Washington, agreeable and entertaining time. In the war of the rebellion $1,000 was advanced to pay bounties. In conclusion, my home has been in Michigan sixty years. Our family consists of seven boys and one girl, well educated in the schools of Michigan, two graduates of colleges. In our daily record of over fifty years with children and grand-children, numbering twenty-eight, we have omitted in our bill of fare the luxurious benefits of tobacco and whiskey, and with gratitude to the Giver of all good gifts and many thanks for our cherished home in Michigan.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAR. 13

Has Tom Platt gone to meet McGinty? If not, why not?

Here is a good Democratic platform for 1892. Resolved that the tariff is a tax.

An anxious public would like to know whether this is hot winter or next winter.

Gov. Boies, the new Democrat Governor of Iowa comes out strongly in favor of ballot reform. Another convert to a much needed reform.

Chicago should erect a monument to the memory of Tom Platt. Chicago owes Platt a debt of gratitude that can never be fully repaid in this world.

Chicago has got the Fair so far as fixing the location is concerned. Now the question which is agitating Chicago is, what to do with her white elephant.

The friends of tariff reform should take courage and prepare at once for the fall elections. With reform governors already in Ohio and Iowa, everything will be possible next fall.

"It is easier to deal with a surplus than a deficiency," is Speaker Reed's motto. Under the present policy it will not be long before a deficiency will be the only surplus to deal with.

A North Carolina man has got the names of 69 of his relatives on a petition for a post office. That man understands the true method of touching the affections of this administration. He will get there sure.

Free Trade between Michigan and Ohio is a good thing. The most zealous protectionist cannot deny this assertion. Then why wouldn't free trade be an equally good thing between Michigan and Canada?

The high tariff men are in a stew because the colleges are turning out more and more free traders every year. What else ought they to expect of institutions whose province and duty are to educate and enlighten the people?

The Indiana legislature, which is Democratic, has enacted a ballot reform law, and the Republicans are to make an effort to nullify it in court. With a good ballot law in that State rigidly enforced, the "blocks of five" industry would have to pick up stakes and move to a more congenial clime.

The West Virginia lower House passed a ballot reform bill, but the Senate, which is controlled by the Republicans, killed the bill. This illustrates how the parties in that state stand upon this issue. The politicians are fighting this reform everywhere, but it is bound to come in due time.

Senator Edmund's scheme for a great National University is another visionary plan for getting rid of the surplus. The country has more high grade universities now than can be properly supported. The primary school is the true national university. We cannot have too many of these, nor can they be too liberally patronized.

The name of that distinguished statesman Senator Blair will not be perpetuated by his great Educational bill, for the measure is doomed to defeat, but it will always be preserved in human memory as that of a man who made the longest and dullest speech in the whole history of oratory. His recent speech in the Senate is undoubtedly entitled to the cake in these two respects. It took him eight days to make it, and it fills 198 closely printed columns in the Congressional Record. It was wearisome beyond everything ever before heard, even in that temple of dullness, the Senate chamber.—Chicago Herald.

The Kansas City Times says of Grover Cleveland: "Whatever may be his wish, there cannot now be any retirement for this great ex-President, whose defeat was a violence to the conscience of the nation, the very reaction of which sets in motion irresistibly the cause he stood for, but who suffered that defeat without surrendering to the victor anything save the emblems of victory; who solved statesmanship with common sense, who stripped of its disguises the greatest imposture of the age; who purified politics with honesty and invigorated it with a purpose, and who may without tiptoeing look above the heads of every public man back to Lincoln."

THE SUGAR TARIFF.

The news is given out from Washington that the Committee on Ways and Means are engaged upon a tariff bill which will soon be reported to the House. Something must be done to satisfy the demand for tariff reduction, but when the committee come to adopt a schedule they are confronted with the difficulty that all the beneficiaries of the tariff want the duties increased rather than diminished. Manufacturers want their duties kept up or increased but clamor for free raw materials. Dealers in raw materials are opposed to any reduction of duties on their products. At the same time the Republican party is pledged to uphold the protective features of the tariff. How that can be done and tariff taxation be reduced is a mystery. Thus the Committee on Ways and Means finds itself between the devil and the deep sea when they undertake the practical work of tariff revision.

* * *

The plan now suggested, and which seems likely to be adopted, is this: To repeal the internal revenue tax on tobacco, which would wipe out about thirty millions of revenue, and to cut the sugar duty one half, which would reduce the revenue about thirty millions more. This plan would simply reduce the revenue without reducing the burdens upon the taxpayers, except as regards tobacco. But as tobacco is a necessary of life, according to the high tariff dictionary, it seems highly proper, of course, to repeal the burdens now resting upon the devoted heads of the users of tobacco. The tobacco tax must go, while the tariff on woolen goods, articles of household use, farm implements, etc., must remain or be increased.

* * *

But they say, the tax on sugar is a tax on the poor man's dinner table, and we purpose cutting that one-half. This theory seems very plausible on its face. The sugar tariff is a peculiar one. It is essentially a revenue tariff with incidental protection. The statistics of the last fiscal year showed that the government received about sixty millions of revenue from sugar and the sugar growers of the United States were benefited about six millions. We give the figures approximately in round numbers. In other words, the people paid on their yearly supply of sugar about six millions for private bonuses, and sixty millions for revenue. There is excellent reason, therefore, from the standpoint of revenue, for retaining this tax. It is not taxation per se, to which revenue reformers object, but taxation which enriches a few monopolists and does not go into the coffers of the government. And yet, if the reduction of the sugar tariff is necessary to break up the sugar trust, then there would seem to be an excellent reason for the cut on sugar.

* * *

But what is the sugar trust? It is not a combination of sugar planters, or the laborers who grow raw sugar. It is a combination of sugar refiners. The present duty is laid on both raw and refined sugars. The duty on raw sugar, averaging about two cents per pound, is paid by the refiners. The refiner adds this duty to his selling price and also the duty on the refined article, and the consumer pays both duties. At least nine-tenths of the raw sugar used is imported, and this tax is wholly a revenue tax. The duty on refined sugar is about one cent per pound more than on raw, but this yields no revenue, or next to none. It amounted in 1888 to only $6000. The duty on refined sugar is practically prohibitory. It gives the sugar trust an absolute monopoly of the home market. The work of refining can be done just as cheaply in this country as abroad, and hence the difference in the duty on raw and refined sugar, amounting to about one cent per pound, is a clear gift to the sugar trust. The trust graciously accepts the gift and is not backward in collecting it either.

* * *

Now, how does this McKinley high tariff ring propose to crush the trust? By repealing the duty on raw sugar, or cutting it one-half, which is wholly a revenue duty, and retaining the tax on refined sugar which yields no revenue. The trust will thus be relieved of the tax it pays on raw sugar; the gift to the trust will be increased just that much. But as the duty on refined sugar is to remain, the trust will still monopolize the home market, and the price of sugar to the consumer will not be reduced a single farthing. The revenue which the government now receives from raw sugar would simply be transferred into the pockets of the trust, that's all. Truly this plan would be crushing the sugar trust with a vengeance. When we consider that the sugar trust replenished the Republican campaign fund of 1888 a round $100,000, the true inwardness of this peculiar method of crushing the trust becomes manifest.

Senator Blair observes that the newspapers think an account of a dog fight more important than his speech on the Educational bill. The Senator has diagnosed his speech correctly. That seems to be exactly what the newspapers think of it.

PRENATAL PROTECTION.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT THE TINNED PLATE SWINDLE.

Increased Duties Hovering in the Future. Threatened Industries Protesting—Intended Blessings of Nature Twisted Until They Become Curses.

Our high protectionist law makers have such maternal instincts that they not only furnish protection garments to infant industries which have recently seen the light of day, and to others which have grown old and hardened in their sins, but they even go further and provide a wardrobe for those not yet born.

A case in point is our unborn tinned plate industry.

Tinned plate consists of sheets of the very best grade of Bessemer and Siemens-Martin steel covered with a coating of tin. The use of this tinned plate in this country is enormous and is rapidly increasing. According to the latest treasury reports, we brought in last year 742,135,000 pounds, bearing a value of $21,726,000. The duty is one cent a pound and amounted last year to $7,421,000, which is equivalent to an ad valorem duty of about 34 per cent.

Our supply of these plates comes from Wales, where the principal factories of the world, some ninety-five in number, are located. The cost of the plates in Wales, coated with tin, polished, cut into the required sizes, packed in stout oak boxes to prevent rusting at sea, and delivered on board ship, is slightly less than three cents a pound. The cost in this country of American made steel sheets, not coated with tin, not cut into required sizes, not packed and delivered, is today four cents a pound or more. This we owe to one of our numerous highly protected trusts—an infant industry some forty years old.

The uses of the plate are many and various. There are milk pails and pans, dinner pails and pans for making bread, cakes and pies; there are colanders, graters, skimmers, strainers, tea kettles and coffee pots; there are boilers, wash basins and foot tubs; there are cans for packing vegetables, fruits, oysters, fish and cooked meats—all of these, and many more useful and necessary articles, all made of tin plate. It is thus of vital interest to some millions of men, women and children in this country that tin plate should be as cheap as possible. The canning industry of the United States has grown enormously in late years, and it only awaits cheap tin plate to develop into proportions never heard of before.

If we had cheaper tin plate we should hear less about fruits and vegetables glutting our markets every summer, and often being sold at prices ruinous to the grower. Not only would our surplus fruits and vegetables find a ready market at steadier prices, but the growth of these articles would be vastly enlarged, thousands of men, women and children would find more profitable employment as growers or as laborers in the fields and canning factories, the consumption of these canned goods would be incalculably increased, and the whole public would be benefited in every way.

But what does congress say to all that? It says that the steel trust must have its pound of flesh, which, like Shylock, it exacts from the heart of the unprotected, uncared for consumer.

But what is the steel trust doing to merit such tender consideration for its every wish? What return is it making for the 45 to 58 per cent. duties which congress levies on sheet steel to protect this thrifty infant? Like all other thrifty infants, the steel trust cries vigorously and incessantly for more. It has taken a great liking to its protection diet, and in obedience to its lusty cries congress will doubtless give it more. They already have the free block tin, which is used in coating sheet steel to produce tin plate.

But why should the trust undertake to manufacture tin plate so long as it can exact from the consumer the present exorbitant profits? Our steel magnates do not need to exert their ingenuity to make a new article, from which it might not make as high a profit as it gets now. A steel trust is a "rustler;" but it knows a good thing when it sees it.

And so we make no tin plate; but all the same the custom houses continue to collect the ad valorem duty of about $34 on every $100 worth brought in. The plea is that, though we have no infant industry of this kind, we do not know how soon one may be born, and we must take time by the forelock and be prepared for such accidents. As such a birth seems very imminent just now, owing to recent discoveries of tin mines within our borders, we must make all the better preparations for it. If 34 per cent. on tin plate, it is argued, did not hasten this birth while we had no tin mines, a larger duty will certainly do it, now that we have mines.

Hence it is now proposed to increase the duty on tin plate, which Mr. Mills, the wicked, unpatriotic Texan, proposed to put on the free list. The tin plate duty of the aborted senate bill of 1888 will apparently become the duty imposed by the forthcoming tariff bill. That would more than double the duty on the grade of tin plate which is most used with us.

Already protests are being heard from many parts of the country against this iniquitous piece of high protection folly. The Maine lobster canners, various dealers in New York, the canmakers and roofers of Baltimore and the western canners, in convention at Indianapolis, have expressed their opposition to the increase. In Baltimore a sort of indignation meeting has been held, at which earnest words were spoken against the greed of the Pennsylvania capitalists in whose interests the increase is to be made. In that city vast quantities of tin plate are used for making cans for the oyster packers and fruit canners of Maryland, there being 1,000 factories in and around Baltimore alone. At the meeting in question it was urged that if this increased duty should become a law all the smaller manufacturers of cans would be crushed out, and the business would fall into the hands of large corporations, which would become masters of this field. With competition thus cut off, these canmakers would inevitably and willingly walk in the path which the tariff tinkerers have marked out for them and form a trust to "protect" themselves.

Valuable deposits of tin ore have been discovered in this country within a few years. Mines have been found in Virginia, in Texas and in the Black Hills of South Dakota. This last named has been gobbled up by a British syndicate for $3,500,000, and its first sale of tin was recently made in the Chicago market.

Plain, honest people are not able to see why our tin mines should prove a curse to us. They do not understand why tin should be made dearer to the millions of consumers precisely at the moment when we have discovered inexhaustible tin ore, with "veins measuring more than fifty feet in width," in our own soil.

The New York Press, which was founded to advocate the most orthodox stripe of high protection, confessed inadvertently a year ago that "tinned plate can be made in this country with natural gas cheaper than with coal as fuel in England."

Why, then, this more than doubled duty on tinned plate?

In the language of Hon. John A. Kasson with reference to a different duty: "It is an attempt, against the laws of Providence, to force the people of this country to pay more for what they need than the laws of Providence would otherwise require. * * * The title of the bill should be so changed as to read: 'A bill to prevent the diffused blessings of Divine Providence from being enjoyed by the people of the United States.'"

FOR CHEAPER FRUIT.

California's Demand for Prohibitory Duties—Protests in New York and Boston.

The Foreign Fruit Exchange of New York has memorialized the ways and means committee of congress in opposition to the increase of duties on raisins, prunes and oranges which has been asked for. The exchange asks that oranges, lemons, grapes, currants, dates, figs, prunes and plums be placed on the free list, and that the duty on raisins be reduced from two cents a pound to one cent. If this cannot be granted, then the exchange asks that substantial reductions be made.

The Boston exchange has indorsed the New York schedule. At the meeting of the Boston men one importer opposed the removal of the duties on green fruits on the ground that if those duties were removed small importers with little or no capital would enter the business and would cause sharper competition and consequently diminished profits for those already in the business. From all which the consumer can see how the present tariff operates to keep the importing business in the hands of a small number of wealthy dealers, thus shutting off competition and keeping prices up.

There is so little reason at this time for increasing the duties on fruit that even The California Fruit Grower, the organ of the fruit growing interests of the Pacific slope, has entered its protest against the increase. It justly calls attention to the fact that only two states in the Union are interested in having the duties put up; and it warns the California grower that there is danger in his demand, by reason of the opposition which will be aroused in the east.

Nevertheless the California Fruit union has a memorial before the McKinley committee asking that the present duty of one cent a pound on prunes be increased to three cents. When it is considered that California prunes are of such excellent quality that they have created a high price market of their own among the richer classes, and when it is further considered that the bulk of the foreign prunes consumed by us is a low grade Turkish article, bought by the less wealthy classes, how absurd does this demand of the Californians become!

During the past three or four months California prunes have sold readily and in large quantities in New York at from 7.25 to 7.50 cents per pound, the consumer taking them in preference to French prunes costing one cent less. The Turkish prunes, used by plain, unpretentious people, are sold at from 8.50 to 8.75 cents a pound, including the one cent duty. The bulk of these foreign prunes is sold east of Chicago, and as the duty on them is already equal to the freight charges from California, it would seem that the handful of growers in that state might at least be content to leave things as they are. We imported only 43,000,000 pounds of prunes and plums last year, against 74,000,000 in 1888. Is this the time to ask for a prohibitory duty? The consumers of foreign prunes paid in duties last year $437,000; are they willing now to pay $1,300,000, or else go without their prunes?

A ten pot window glass factory is being built at Alexandria, Ind. Our glass industry is in an unusually thriving condition, but all the same the old cry for higher protection is made in Washington, and the same pitiful tale is told that the pauper made glass of Belgium is invading our markets more than ever. The number of our pots for making window glass, however, has more than doubled in ten years. Those who work in our glass factories ought not to throw stones at Belgium.

Mr. A. B. Farquhar, president of the Pennsylvania Agricultural works, at York, Pa., says the tariff is of no benefit to his industry. He sells many articles of farm machinery abroad, in competition with the whole world, in spite of the duties on the raw material. He says that the only purpose the tariff serves in his industry is to make American farmers pay higher prices for their farm machinery and implements.

A suit against the Pittsburg Glass company, engaged in the manufacture of plate glass, has brought to light the fact that the concern paid 34.75 per cent. dividends last year. With even a plum of that kind in its mouth the glass industry has not yet dropped its cry for more.

Is Consumption Incurable?

Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark, says: "Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an Incurable Consumptive. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made."

Jesse Middlewart, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption I would have died of Lung troubles. Was given up by doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. Sample bottles free.

Can Scirrhus Cancer be Cured?

This is a hard question to answer. Swift's Specific has cured thousands of cases of Skin Cancer, and there have been many cases of Scirrhus Cancer reported cured by it. We do say that S. S. S. is worth a trial in any case of cancer. We append a statement from Miss Green, of Tallapoosa, Ga.:

In 1884 I had a small lump in my left breast, which proved to be a cancer. The first remedy I tried was to have it burned off. This did not cure it, for shortly afterwards it broke out again in a much worse form. I then consulted our druggist, who advised me to try Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), and after taking about one dozen bottles, was completely cured, and my general health was greatly improved. This has been over six years ago, and my cancer has never appeared since, nor has it troubled me in any way. I can cheerfully recommend Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) to any one suffering with cancer.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

"I was caught in a python's folds and saw fiery eyes glaring down into mine. If that tremendous coil should tighten around me, I knew that I might at once give up my luggage for the undiscovered country. In this critical moment of my fate I saw the great python's tail in close proximity to his mouth. I grasped the snake's tail firmly and pushed a yard or two down his yawning jaws. Serpents seldom bite their prey; they lacerate it and crush it down. With such a long and cold-blooded creature I calculated that it would take over a half a minute before the sensations of his tail could be conveyed to his brain and render him aware that he was committing suicide."

WILHELM'S IMPROVED CREAMERY CAN

Unequalled for private Dairies of from one cow to full size Creamery. $5.00 will buy FOUR 3-GAL. CANS making a capacity of 12 gallons of milk, and will PRODUCE ALL THE CREAM FROM 4 TO 8 HOURS, in a vat, tub, or any receptacle the farmer may choose, holding water from 10 to 11 inches in depth, and at temperature from 40 to 60 degrees cold. IT MAKES A PERFECT CREAM and combines the advantage of deep setting, rapid cooling, protecting the milk from all impurities of the atmosphere which so quickly taints cream. Also preventing souring by sudden storms, from flies, insects, dust, and all bad odors, thus producing both cream and milk clean and sweet. Over 200,000 in actual use in the U. S. One setting of milk is all that is needed to prove the merit of the can. Usual size of can, 3-gal., price $5.25. A liberal discount on orders of one dozen Cans and upwards. COAL

AT REST.

Funeral of the Late Minister Geo. H. Pendleton.

BRIEF SERVICES OF THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH,

Followed by a Eulogy by Hon. Isaac N. Jordan at Music Hall—Interment at Spring Grove.

CINCINNATI, March 10.—The body of ex-Minister George H. Pendleton reached here Friday night, and was taken to Christ Protestant Episcopal church, where a company of First Regiment guards lit. The funeral exercises and interment took place Saturday.

The Chamber of Commerce adjourned until Monday to allow the members to participate in the obsequies. Legislators and governors of Ohio and Kentucky accepted invitations to attend ceremonies, and were present.

As the hour of 9:30, the time for the services neared, the monotone of muffled drums broke upon the stillness, as various participating organizations formed in the neighborhood of Christ Episcopal church on Fourth street.

Within the venerable sanctuary lay the reyered remains of George H. Pendleton, resting upon a sombre catafalque casket, strewn with lillies and palms, through which shown the colors of the nation—emblem.

At the head a shattered column with bright roses gleamed, and beside was the military guard of honor.

Soon groups of friends, asssociates of the ex-Minister men and women gray with years and honors entered, and when the carriages bearing relatives arrived the church was entirely filled. The services, brief and imposing in solemity, renderings of the sacred hymns by the choir, preceded prayer and a sermon by Revs. Gibson and Frost, and the hopeful "Jesus lover of my soul," closed the ceremony. Hereupon the pall-bearers—Messrs. Thomas Sherlock, C. W. Woolley, Theodore Cook, Isaac M. Jordan, W. S. Groesbeck, Henry Hrobasco, Eli C. Baldwin, Thomas B. Paxton, Rufus King, Isaac B. Matson, John E. Bell and William Ernst—advanced and bore the casket slowly to the doorway. As the cortege descended the steps and advanced to the waiting hearse, a gentle dirge was sounded by the First regiment band. Three companies of police formed in double line received their officers and colors bound in a mourning emblem and advanced at the head of the pageant.

Then came Governor Campbell and his brilliant staff, mounted and in full plumed uniform, led by Adjutant General Hawkins in a brilliant equipment of black and gold. Preceded by a band came the First Regiment. Immediately following was the hearse attended by the pall bearers and "the boys" of Old Woodward high school. Then came the tall, sinewy forms of the Kentucky legislature led by Governor Buckner, whose white locks floated in the wind and Lieutenant Governor Bryan towering above his conferes. The political clubs in uniforms with canes reversed, closed the cartege.

Upon the arrival of the procession at Music hall the various divisions filed into the place assigned them, the pall-bearers carrying the casket through the solemn assembly up to the main asile to the front. Fully fifteen thousand had assembled and the mighty organ filled the vast space with the notes of the marche funebre.

When the assemblage was seated Rev. D. S. Forest, of Clifton, offered prayer and the College of music choir gave the chorus of The Angels, from the oratorio of Eli. Mayor Mosby, chairman of the committee, made a few remarks, which were followed by a eulogistic oration by Isaac Jordan. Remains were then taken to Spring Grove where they were interred in the family lot.

AN EX-SULTAN DEAD.

The Late Deposed Sultan Murad V is No More.

LONDON, March 10.—The Berlin Tageblatt prints a special from Constantinople reporting the death of ex-Sultan Murad V, who succeeded his uncle, Sultan Abdul Agiz, on May 29, 1876, and was deposed in favor of his brother, the present sultan, on August 31, of the same year. Murad was educated outside the harem and, in addition to the unusual attainments he thus acquired, imbibed a disposition to institute reforms entirely at variance with the Moslem policy and traditions. His peculiar tendency soon attracted the attention of the Shiekh-Ul-Islam, who caused it to be understood, true or not, that the commander of the faithful was insane. The exhibition of a desire to introduce reforms being most convincing evidence to the mind of a Turk of the insanity of the would-be reformer, Murad was accordingly deposed after a reign of three months, and has since, it is alleged, been confined in a palace; though as nobody ever afterward laid eyes on him, it is widely believed that his death occurred almost immediately after his dethronement.

SIBERIAN ATROCITIES

To Be Denounced Today on the Banks of the Thames.

LONDON, March 10.—The meeting to express indignation and horror at the recently reported maltreatment and slaughter of political prisoners in Russia, which is to be held on the Thames embankment today promises to be an enormous affair. In accordance with the arrangements, an immense procession will march to the embankment, where stands have been erected, from which speeches will be delivered by Mr. John Morley, Prof. James Stuart, Mr. John Burns, Mr. Labouchere, Prince Kropotkine, Stepniak and others.

BISHOP BOWMAN.

Pronounces His Trial and Expulsion Revolutionary.

CHICAGO, ILL., March 10.—Bishop Bowman has returned from the east and in an interview stated that the proceedings against him were in direct violation of the law of the church, and will be treated by the general council of the church, which meets in 1891. Those who engaged in the revolutionary proceedings may, before long find themselves suspended for conspiring against the church and her officials.

MYSTERIOUS.

An Unknown Man Found with a Bullet in His Breast.

ALEXANDRIA, VA., March 10.—A man, supposed to be John Thompson Gardner, and thought to be of Philadelphia, died here yesterday. He was picked up yesterday, half unconscious, in a gulley, and taken to the city infirmary. An examination of his body revealed a pistol wound in the breast. The case is clouded in mystery.

Mrs. R. L. Wheeler Dead.

BROOKLYN, March 10.—Russell L. Wheeler, aged sixty years, president of the Hazard Powder company, is dead.

CLINGMAN STILL MISSING.

All Efforts to Find Him Unavailing—Theory That He Committed Suicide.

DAYTON, O., March 10.—The report that James Clingman, the missing agent of the United States Express company, had returned to his home was erroneous. He walked out of town and can be traced six miles north, but nothing more can be learned. Diligent search has been made through the farming region around the point where he was engaged in distilling fifteen years ago, but no clew was discovered. W. H. Whitesley, passenger agent of the C., H. & D. railway, with whom Mr. and Mrs. Clingman lived, returned with a party this evening from a two days' fruitless search, and the mystery of Clingman's whereabouts is deeper than ever.

Mr. Mitchell, the express company's speculator, who has taken charge of the office, is positive in his assertion that the office and Clingman's affairs are absolutely correct. This being regarded as true and there being no known reason for his going away, it is generally believed that his mind had become impaired from overwork, and wandering off as he did, he may have committed suicide by drowning in the Stillwater. This is all speculation, however, and his family and friends, though filled with grave anxiety, will not listen to that cry. Mrs. Clingman, at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Larue, is almost distracted by the terrible uncertainty and there seems nothing now to do but wait.

DEVILISH DAGOES

RESIST ARREST BY A PENNSYLVANIA CONSTABLE.

A Posse is Organized and in the Conflict That Ensues, Over One Hundred Shots Are Fired and Two Men Terribly Shot.

NEW-CASTLE, PA., March 10.—Constable Jacob Dindinger and two deputies went to the ranch of ten Italians at Wampum to arrest the ten for stealing coal from the Wampum coal company. The Italians, who go by numbers, refused to be taken, and the constable returned to town and organized a posse of twenty-five men. They went back and in attempting to force the Italians to go to the lock up one Italian fired a load from a shot gun into the back of Elsie Aley. The firing became general, and one Italian was shot through the lung. Over one hundred shots were fired and four Italians were arrested. The others escaped. Later the posse discovered five more Italians in a barn, and as the officers approached the Italians fired a volley, but were overpowered and locked up. Aley received the full charge of buckshot in the shoulder, but the wound is not necessarily fatal. The Italian wounded in the lung is in a critical condition. Nine Italians are still in the lockup, and the Wampum people fear that the three hundred Italian laborers will attempt to rescue them.

DEATH OF PROMINENT PEOPLE.

Obituary Sketches of Noted Personages Throughout the Country.

MARION, O., March 10.—Elder William Dowling, former pastor of the Christian (Disciple) church here, died at the Mt. Vernon Sanitarium after a long illness. He was born in this county, and devoted his life to church work, having preached here and at other points in Ohio and Indiana for a number of years. He was considered an able advocate of the primitive Gospel, and his death is very much regretted by members of that denomination. His remains will be interred in Freeport, Wood County, Ohio.

Dropped Dead at His Work.

MUNCIE, IND., March 10.—William Bassett, head sawyer at Smith & Co's. bending works, dropped dead at his post in the afternoon at 1 o'clock. He had just recovered from a severe attack of la grippe, and his death is attributed to this disease.

Matilda Ruby, Aged 123 Years.

LOUISVILLE, KY., March 10.—Matilda Ruby died at Raywick, Ky., aged 123 years. Her mother, Charlotte Shuck, died at the same place five years ago. She was the nurse of James Lambkins, who still lives at the age of eighty, and has the family Bible, in which her birth is recorded in 1767.

S. B. Wood.

TOLEDO, O., March 10.—S. B. Wood, engaged in the wholesale grocery business here since 1868, died in the morning from kidney complaint. He was interested in many of the city's manufacturing enterprises and was prominent in financial affairs. He was about sixty years of age.

Professor E. D. Bangs.

GALESBURG, ILL., March 10.—Professor Edwin D. Bangs, aged seventy-four years, died here. He was graduated from Amherst college in 1844, and taught at Princeton for ten years before coming to this state.

B. F. Randolph.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., March 10.—B. F. Randolph, president of the State Board of Riparian Commissioners, and member of the State Board of Education, died of pneumonia.

Mrs. Daniel Beckel.

DAYTON, O., March 10.—Mrs. Daniel Beckel, one of the wealthiest ladies here, and owner of the Beckel House, died suddenly, aged about 70 years.

Joseph A. Eastman.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 10.—Joseph A. Eastman, one of Rochester's oldest and best known lawyers, died in the morning.

TOOK O'DONOVAN ROSSA'S WORD

And Got Itself Into a Losing Libel Suit.

BROOKLYN, March 10.—The libel case Patrick Sarsfield Cassidy versus the Brooklyn Eagle, has awarded the plaintiff a thousand dollars damages. The suit was the outcome of a publication in the Eagle based on O'Donovan Rossa's charges that Cassidy is an English spy. On the rendering of the verdict the defendant made application for a new trial on the ground of excessive damages, which was refused.

SMOKELESS POWDER.

Successful Test of It at the Washington Navy Yard.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—A succesful test of smokeless powder was given at the navy yard here Saturday. A number of distinguished men were present, including Secretary Tracy, Commodore Folger, chief of ordnance; Assistant Naval Constructor Hichborn, and other naval officers. The powder seemed to be all claimed for it and was stronger than the ordinary powder.

A Female Maniac.

WASHVILLE, TENN., March 10.—Mrs. Charles Maylor, an actress who recently arrived in this city from St. Louis, was arrested on the streets yesterday a raving maniac. It required the combined strength of three men to take her to jail. Her father, who is said to be a wealthy citizen of Greensburg, Pa., has been notified.

DR. A. FRASER'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years.
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

TECUMSEH AND FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB

This Society met at the pleasant home of Philip Pentecost March 5th. The bright moonlight and the uncommonly fine condition of the roads enabled many to attend who otherwise would have stayed at home. Program was well rendered. "Alphabetical Rhymes," by Mrs. VanValkenburg, was especially pleasing. For the benefit of those not present we give it in full. Next meeting at Mr. Barzillai Hurry's, March 19th. Program for the evening:

Music—Mr. and Mrs. Poucher.
Rec.—Neta Osborn.
Dec.—Harry Hoag.
Music—Adah and Hettie Waldron.
Read.—Mrs. Wilson Matthews.
Dec.—Charlie Hurry.
Song—Mrs. Wm. Waldron.
Rec.—Ella Munger.
Sketches of Pioneer Life—A. K. Waldron.
Charade—Mrs. Hoag.
Music—Mr. and Mrs. Poucher.
Some of the hindrances to success in farming—Paper by Abner Wilson.

ALPHABETICAL RHYMES.

A is for Albert, fast growing gray,
Also for Anna, blithesome as May.
It stands for Aaron, of olden times,
And is the leading letter in alphabetical rhymes.

B is for Barzillai, a bible name,
But now our neighbor bears the same.
As farmer or president, or justice, all,
He attends to his work and responds to each call.

C is for Charlie, our treasurer I'm told,
Who thus gets a chance, some money to hold.
Of wonderful horses he loves to tell,
But he always starts when he hears the bell.

D is for Delle, our secretary and friend,
The duties of her office she finds are without end.
They include writing the minutes both pointed and racy,
And sending the same to editor Stacy.

E is for Ella, slow and precise;
Whatever she does is always done nice.
Also in Eva it is to be found;
She works in a hurry all the year round.

F is for Frank, who is a milkman now;
A business that pays better than holding the plow;
For if his supply falls short you needn't talk:
He can make a few gallons with water and chalk.

G is for George, our President gay,
A name much revered since Washton's day;
And for Grover, his son; it also may stand,
For he likewise was named for the chief of the land.

H is for Henry, and Hamilton too,
And this is the way they agreed to do:
While Hamilton stays to attend to the sweet,
Henry his friends in the court-room doth greet.

I is for Isabelle, better known as Fred,
So called by her father when young it is said.
There is yet another the same name doth bear:
When Charlie says Belle we know sue is there.

J is for John, and happy is he,
For he now has a son to ride on his knee:
It is also for Julia, our friend true and fair,
Whom we all know by the surname of Haire.

K is for Kate, with her bright, smiling face,
In which sorrow and sadness seem to have no place:
With her music and songs and laughter so gay,
She seems really to "drive dull care away."

L is for Laura, whose name was once Brown,
But since that was changed she has lived in our town.
It is also for Lewis, whom we know very well,
For pump fixings and windmills he keeps to sell.

M is for Munger, a knight we are told,
Honest and honorable as the knights of old.
As president of the Lyceum he fills his station
As well as the one who rules the nation.

N is for Nellie, who came from Spring Lake;
Wherever she goes many friends she will make.
We will all unite in wishing her joy,
For we learn she now has a girl and a boy.

O is for Osborn and twice it is found:
With thoroughbred stock their farms do abound.
Great sales and large profits they claim to have made,
But that is expected of men of their trade.

P is for Pentecost, and Philip they say,
A very useful man in every way.
Our houses and barns he builds with great care,
And when out of order he will quickly repair.
Also for Poucher, a man of small stature is he,
Blest with a family of children three;
At two hundred pounds each they'll tip the beam,—
Just now a good load for most any team.

Q is the next, and I've tried many times
To find some name to use in my rhymes;
But only in question can I make it appear,
And that ought to be ready, for the discussion is near.

R is for Rose, our neighbor so neat,
Very busy just now in making things sweet
She is always the same, obliging and kind,
And never afraid to speak her own mind.

S is for State, and that's star
Her light's as to see, both near and afar.
With hands ever willing and heart ever true,
Many kind deeds she finds to do.

T is for Thomas, short, stubbed and strong;
He strokes his fine mustache, while walking along.
Always jovial and jolly, he makes a great noise,
As he whistles and sings and shouts to his boys.

U is for Updyke, whom we can greet,
If we wish to purchase either fish or fresh meat;
And Martin, his brother, short, but not small,
Lives on the hill, overlooking us all.

V is VanValkenburg, whom you all know;
He deals in celery, cabbage, and onions also.
His family is large, his profits are small;
If you wish anything in his line just give him a call.

W is for Wilson, of strawberry fame,
He raises the best, he always will claim;
And also for Waldron, who lives on a hill;
Our vice-president too, whom we call Will.

X, Y and Z, the last of the list,
If left out entirely would hardly be missed;
To find them of use I've tried in vain,
So I'll put them together, all in one chain,

And now, kind friends, my rhymes are ended;
I trust that none will be offended:
But take them all in jest and mirth,
And let them pass for what they're worth.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.

Through the untiring efforts of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Sutton a pleasant surprise was given Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hanley at their home March 5th, in commemoration of the 10th anivers'y. After greeting and refreshments Commander Coddington of Beer's Post made a few brief but appropriate remarks, and in behalf of W. R. C. and W. C. T. U. presented Mrs. H. with a token of respect, then turning to Mr. Hanley presented him likewise with a similar token from the G. A. R. The following poem was read.

Ten times the sweet roses have blossomed
Since the dawn of that beautiful day,
When you two started together,
To walk over life's difficult way.
Ten years with their gleams and their brightness
Like links in love's golden chain
Your hearts binding closer together
Through all their pleasures and pain.

Ten years of shadow and sunshine;
As fleeting as the summer hours.
And, as life's blossoms you've gathered.
Some thorns have you found with the flowers.
Howe'er blue the skies o'er your pathway
Some clouds must gather, but yet,
Looking back, life's joys you remember
It's sorrows and cares you forget.

Ten years, and one little birdling
In the home nest has opened it's eyes,
In whose depths yet linger the gladness
Of Heaven's own blue sunny skies.
Ten years, and to-night we have gathered
Our offering simple to bring,
And wishes that all of your future
May be like the blossoming spring.

With no blight of hope or promise
Through all the oming years,
Until you reach the three score,
Midst smiles instead of tears.
And so you go toward life's sunset,
Toward a home that is fairer than this.
May God's angels lead you together,
Through the gates of eternal bliss.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanley wish to extend hearty thanks to all their friends, and will be glad to greet them, one and all in the future. Tom says, they may do so some more, if they wish to.

HIGH SCHOOL HAPPENINGS.

Miss Mamie Crowell went to Adrain yesterday.

The class of '90 have received their class rings, and are quite pleased with them.

Miss Bertine Brewer is detained from school on account of sickness. We hope she will soon recover.

Preparations are being made to publish a high school paper. It will be a newsy little sheet, and probably will be published until the close of the year.

Last Friday noon a number of the girls went in the basement to pop some corn and, the janitor hearing them, locked the doors; they were obliged to remain there until the kind professor came and let them out.

The last meeting of the Lyceum will be held Friday afternoon, and an extra effort is being made to have the best program that has yet been presented. The subject for discussion is, "Ought people of foreign birth to be allowed the right of suffrage?" We hope to see many at this meeting.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligation made by their firm.

DEATH OF JOSEPH CAMBURN.

Joseph Camburn has been for some years the oldest living resident of Franklin. He was born at Barnegat, N. J., March 23d. 1796, and died on his homestead March 1st. 1890. Had he survived 23 days longer he would have been 94 years of age. The father of the deceased, Levi Camburn, lived in Macedon, Wayne Co., New York. Joseph lived at home until twenty-three years old, and received such schooling as the district schools of those days afforded. In 1818 he rented a farm in Macedon, which he carried on until 1827. In the spring of 1828 he started with his wife and four children for Tecumseh. He came via lake Erie from Buffalo to Detroit. Then he purchased a yoke of oxen, loaded his few household effects upon a wagon he brought with him, and after three days travel, arrived at Tecumseh, himself wife and children having walked the entire distance. Upon arriving at Tecumseh he had just six dollars in his pocket, with a family of six to support. He first settled on eighty acres of land owned by his father-in-law, and at the expiration of two years bought it, giving a mortgage of $400 thereon to secure the purchase price. The next year he sold out for $700, paid his incumbrance and purchased 160 acres of land in Franklin on section 22, where he continued to live until the day of his death. This was in the spring of 1832. Franklin then embraced the territory of the three present towns of Franklin, Cambridge and Woodstock; there were not enough male residents in the town to fill all the township officies. In 1832 3 Mr. Camburn assisted in surveying and cutting through the LaPlaisance Bay turnpike from Tecumseh to Cambridge Junction. He was instrumental in building the first school house in the present town of Franklin in the fall of 1833. Later he was the prime mover in the erection of the Methodist church at Franklin Centre. During his residence in Macedon, Nov, 28, 1818, he married Miss Roxenia Shadduck of Palmyra, New York. His domestic life was a happy one. Twelve children blessed the union, eight of whom survive him. Mrs. Orson Knight Mrs. Henry Bowen and Joseph now live in Adrian. His eldest son George, now 70 years of age, his son Eugene and daughter Viletta now reside at Tipton. Mr. Camburn was a man of vigorous health and constitution, a kind husband and father, an enterprising citizen. He was an honored member of that sturdy band of pioneers, who battled with danger and privation to hew a home out of the wilderness. For the past few years he has been in feeble health, but he continued to live in the old homestead and passed his declining years in contentment and peace. He has lived a generation beyond his allotted time, and has seen all the associates of his younger days cross the dark valley before him. Full of years and respected by all, he now casts aside his worn out earthly garments and enters into his eternal inheritance on high.

OBITUARY.

Died, at Eureka Springs, Arkansas, on Monday, March 3d. 1890, Mrs. Jane E. Vincent, wife of Rev. James Vincent of Tecumseh, Mich.

Mrs. Vincent was born in London, England, in the year 1821, and lived with her parents until her marriage with Mr. Vincent in Oct. 1842. In early life she was converted and made a public confession of her faith in Christ. Soon she took her place as a teacher in the Sabbath school of the church with which she was connected and of which her parents were influential and consistent members. After her marriage she was active in the duties and labors that devolve on the wife of a Minister of the Gospel. She was for more than forty years a faithful wife and mother, and a wise counselor to her husband in the many trying circumstances of the Christian ministry. Favored with affectionate disposition she gained and retained the warm friendship of the people in the different parishes where her husband ministered. For more than two years she has had to endure great bodily sufferings but throughout them all has exhibited wonderful patience and resignation. Brief services were held at Eureka Springs, but the final ones were held at Tecumseh, on Saturday, March 9th, and were conducted by Rev. W. H. Babbitt, pastor of the Presbyterian church here, of which she was a valued member. Mrs. Vincent leaves to mourn her loss a husband, one son, Mr. James E. Vincent of Saginaw, and one daughter, Mrs. Fanny Wann of Detroit, besides many devoted friends who will cherish her memory.

Mrs. Sarah Warner Parker, who after a brief illness departed this life Feby. 22, '90, was born at Phelps, Ontario county, N. Y., April 14, 1825. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Warner, moved into Mich., almost 55 years ago, and thus York township has for more than half a century been the location of her residence and home. Her first marriage was with Mr. Curtis Harmon, who went on before in 1850. This relation was blessed with two daughters, one of which waited the mother's coming to the realm of light. In the Autumn of '52 become the wife of Mr. E. O. Parker, and into this home came the sunlight of five children, two of which greeted mother as her spirit passed into the immortal life. Her husband, Mr. Parker, five brothers and three sisters and four children will speak of her now as gone, as one more in the angel-land, while there she will have the company of father and mother, one brother and three sisters, and others as already mentioned. Funeral services held in the Universalist church, Mooreville, (York P. O.) Tuesday, Feb. 25th, at one o'clock, Rev. J. Mc Getchell of Tecumseh having been called to conduct them, basing them upon John XI:20. She was always strong in the faith as to God's unchanging love. Her Universalism unquestioned. She was loved by all, because in her good life she was in kindness and friendship and thus in religion a mother in Israel. On funeral day members of other churches and persons not affiliated practically with any church, said of her, she was a good woman, a good neighbor, a good christian. The odor of such a life fills more than one house, it perfumes human souls with the spirit of the Divine love, joy, victory and peace.

THE SHERWOOD RECITAL.

The piano recital, given by Wm. H. Sherwood at the Opera House on Saturday evening last, was probably the best entertainment of that character ever given in Tecumseh. The program consisted wholly of instrumental selections upon the piano, a Chickering Grand being the instrument used. We append the same in full, as given:

Mr. Sherwood is an acknowledged master upon that grandest of musical instruments, the piano. To criticise his performance on Saturday evening would be impossible. To give an adequate description of it would require the pen of a musical critic, and we confess our utter inability to fill that role acceptably. From the first number to the last the audience was charmed. We can only say, in the language of an eminent musical authority—"We scarcely know where to begin or where to leave off the praises of this really phenomenal virtuoso. Mr. Sherwood's touch is something marvellous. He produces a sound which is positive, but not harsh; resonant, but sweet; round and swelling yet liquidly sympathetic. We cannot name any pianist, either at home or abroad, who brings out of the collusion of wood and wire a more musical vibration." Between the selections he gave a few explanatory remarks upon the peculiarities of different musical authors, which enlivened the program and added much to its interest. Mr. Sherwood spoke highly of his audience. It was a musical gathering and a sympathetic one. The lovers of music in all the neighboring towns were there and Adrian sent a delegation of eighty by special train, which came up about seven o'clock and returned at the close of the concert.

In closing this imperfect report it is but justice to add that the entire credit for the entertainment should be awarded to Miss Mary Anderson. To her is due both the conception of the plan and its successful execution. Our devotees of music will cordially extend their thanks to her for affording them an opportunity to attend the Sherwood Recital.

Card of Thanks.

The undersigned would hereby express his grateful acknowledgement and appreciation of the sympathy and services which have been so kindly rendered to him by friends and neighbors, during the long sickness, and the death of his wife.

May He who in the last day, will say, concerning kindness shown, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto Me"—amply reward for all the loving attentions that have been shown. JAMES VINCENT.

We have just been admiring one of the handsomest oil-pictures of "Jacque" Roses that we have ever seen, and had it been in an art-store we should have known that a good price would be asked for it. But imagine a work of art of such intrinsic value being obtained for nothing! for that is practically the case, as it is a supplement to Demorest's Family Magazine for April. This wonderful publication has on its Easter garb, and it certainly is an attractive one. Each succeeding number appears to grow better and better, until we are forced to wonder what can be done to improve its present high standard of excellence.

The play's to be presented next week by the Theo Wood Dramatic Co. are both well cast and have been thoroughly rehearsed. People who enjoy a good amateur entertainment can attend these plays and not be disappointed.

J. M. Ingersoll's home was the scene of a pleasant surprise on Monday evening. The G. A. R. members have held a grudge against their Adjutant for some time, and they took it out on this occasion in a manner which seemed to give satisfaction to both host, hostess and guests.

Surprise parties are having a big run now. Minor Davidson and family are among the latest victims. About one hundred of his neighbors took his house by storm last Friday evening, and ran the mansion to suit themselves for about three hours. It is needless to say that the evening was heartily enjoyed by those present.

Mrs. A. McNeil celebrated her 70th birthday last week. On Friday a few of her lady friends had a tea party at her home, and on Saturday evening she had a family gathering at which all the children and grand children and a few near neighbors were present. Mrs. McNeil enjoys good health for a woman of her age, and is likely to see many more returns of her birth day anniversary.

A decided novelty in the way of a "nickel-in-the-slot" machine has just been invented by E. P. Gilliland, of Adrian. Phonographs are to be distributed in various public places. A five cent piece dropped in the slot will start the machine and it will sing a song, make a speech or deliver a recitation. New matter will be placed on the cylinder of each machine daily.

It is not too early to suggest to township committees that they have their caucus calls issued at least two weeks before township meeting, and that nominations be made early enough to allow ample time for printing the tickets. Nothing is gained by waiting until the eleventh hour. Tickets and slips will be printed neatly and cheaply at the HERALD job rooms.

The Detroit Commandary, K. T., will erect the Casino Tabernacle booth at the Detroit April flower show, and they promise a unique and imposing structure. It will represent a fortress on the island of Malta, and, like those fortifications for the last 800 years, will bear the colors of the Knights Templar. A detail from the Commandary, in ancient chain mail armor, will be constantly on guard to protect the garrison of the "helpless maidens," who will wear the Commandary colors of black and white.

Do not get the dates mixed for the two amateur performances next week, as they have been changed since the first announcement. Tuesday and Friday evenings are the dates now fixed upon.

A pleasant surprise was given Mrs. West by her friends and neighbors Thursday afternoon. They took possession of the house, and the table groaning under the provisions, a right good supper was prepared by the ladies. It was a complete surprise, being her 77th birthday.

Mrs. Sarah Edwards celebrated her 93rd birthday on Friday, February 28, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Phoebe U. Hunt. She still enjoys good health and has a remarkably good memory for a person of her age. Her friends, Mr. and Mrs. Emmens, of Philadelphia, enjoyed with her the festivities of the occasion. If we mistake not, Mrs. Edwards is the oldest living resident of Tecumseh.

Mrs. L. L. Bates received a telegram from Denver, Col., last week, announcing the shocking news of the death of her sister, Mrs. Hattie R. Chittock, formerly of Jackson. She had been there some months for her health and was improving greatly, but at last was taken with la grippe, followed by pneumonia which ended in death. She leaves a little girl 9 years old to mourn a dear mother's loss. The remains were taken east for interment, to be laid beside her mother who was taken there only three weeks ago for burial. Mr. Bates had the same sad duty to perform, three weeks ago, of taking her remains to the same place and spot. He met the remains at Jackson, Mrs. Bates accompanying him as far as that city.

The March Magazine of American History is a sparkling number. It touches a broad field of information, and its budget of varied and delightful reading is a particularly valuable addition to both current and historical literature. The leading illustrated article of the number is a wonderfully vivid picture of "Life in New York Fifty Years Ago" by the editor, whose genius in word painting combined with exact knowledge of the theme produces brilliant results. The period reproduced commences with the opening of the Erie canal, and glimpses are given through the diary of an old New Yorker for twenty-five years, of characters and affairs, of inventions, politics and panics, of clubs, fancy balls, dinners, and foreign visitors. Dickens was here, and being then regarded as the greatest living novelist, was feted and complimented beyond any other writer of his generation.

Dreadful Destitution and Despair.

MISS CLARA BARTON'S APPEAL FOR THE STARVING SETTLERS.

The Suffering and Famine Among the Northwest Pioneers—Two New Born States in the Throes of Hunger—The National Association of the Red Cross to their Rescue—6,000 People in Utter Want.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The following statement to the American people has been received by the United Press from Clara Barton, president of the National Association of the Red Cross:

"For many weeks past the Red Cross has been in receipt of letters of appeal and statements in regard to suffering and destitution existing among the pioneer settlers of North and South Dakota. These appeals have come to us from trusted co-workers, and those who speak by rule as authority on such matters. At last, they became so urgent as to be no longer ignored. Living here at the National Capital it was decided to call upon the senators and representatives in Congress from these new born states of ours.

As one result of the interviews there had, Senator L. R. Casey of North Dakota wrote to Governor John Miller informing him of the inquiries of the Red Cross. Under date of Bismarck, February 18, Governor Miller wrote thanking the Red Cross for the kindly interest evinced and stating that he had referred the matter to Hon. H. T. Helgesen, state commissioner of agriculture and labor, with instructions to give all particulars as to the wants of their people. Under date of Grand Forks, February 21, Commissioner H. T. Helgesen wrote in part as follows: 'There are probably 5,000 to 6,000 people * * * dependent, and a good many more who have provisions for themselves, but need feed for stock. * * *'

Considerable help has been received from St. Paul and Minneapolis, also from Chicago and from several states east and south, but thus far only enough to temporarily relieve the needs of the destitute, and much more will have to be solicited from time to time."

Commissioner Helgesen accompanied his letter with a paper which contains an appeal to the public, signed by the commissioner, as follows: "The suffering for want of provisions, clothing, fuel and feed for stock in several counties of North Dakota is unprecedented in the state and needs some explanation. The destitution is almost exclusively confined to the new portions of the state where the settlements date back only two, three and four years, except Nelson and Ramsey counties which have been settled about six years. Those new settlements were, like earlier settlements of most new countries, composed largely of people whose resources would have been heavily taxed to succeed and keep themselves above want with favorable season."

The story, as told by the commissioner, is that of all our new states. Good seasons at first reward them: every acre was turned over for harvest in 1888. All appeared well until August of that year, when a severe frost, a thing unknown before, killed the ripening grain and did much damage in the older and better portions of the state, but it entirely destroyed the newer sections. The hardy men did not lose their courage, but hired out to neighbors, thereby earning the money necessary for the seed and living of 1889. The unprecedented drough of last year was doubtless felt most severely of anywhere in the west in the fields and families of the newly settled portions of North and South Dakota. As Commissioner Helgesen says, a second entire failure in some sections left many people completely destitute. He adds: "While nearly the entire state suffered from drough, only seven or eight counties need much assistance. In this area are those counties where the greatest amount of assistance is needed, viz: Nelson, Ramsey, Benson, Pierce, Bottineau, Rolette and Towner. Cavelier county will also need some help, as will Eddy and McIntosh, the latter in the southern portion of the state. * * * In the counties named there are not less than 5,000 people dependent, wholly or in part, on outside help * * * and until they can raise another crop, and a still larger number will need some assistance for stock. Most of them have hay, but horses and oxen will not be able to work sufficiently to get in the spring crops unless they have grain. * * *

The supplies heretofore received are far from meeting the demand, and provisions are urgently needed. The counties are well organized and supplies are distributed through the county commissioner. The greatest care is taken to prevent the improper use of these donations. * * * All contributions, whether money or provisions or clothing, should be forwarded to said commissioner at Grand Forks, where the proper division will be made."

Commissioner Helgesen explains the condition of the state by showing that under its constitution, in taking over property and debts from the former territory, it has nearly reached the legal maximum of debt that might be incurred. It is therefore, unable as a state to raise all the money and means necessary to supply the destitute. There is no doubt from all the evidence that the people of North Dakota are doing the very best for their suffering fellow citizens. There is no doubt that the appeals already made, and publicly given, have met with warm responses from the northwest. But there is no room to doubt that very much more is needed.

The Red Cross association has satisfied itself as that. Inquiries by its general agent confirms this appeal and information as well as other statements received. There is no need with the excellent methods adapted by the state authorities, for the presence of the Red Cross in the field, but there is a duty before it, and before the people of the sister states as well. The Red Cross believes that its duty will be done if by this authorized statement it shall be the means of inducing subscriptions for the suffering people of Dakota large enough to meet all the emergencies that may arise.

There are six months of short rations, of unclothed human beings, of sleepless fields, with all their attendant privations, yet before these people. Judging from past experiences and observations it would be wiser to send money that can be used on the ground under direction of the state officials assigned to that duty than to spend it for railroad freight, in purchasing goods or other articles, or supplies that may be better or more properly obtained with cash in the hands of those who know where it is most needed. In that way there will be a double help secured as these people will thereby be aided to help themselves.

The Red Cross, therefore advises that subscriptions be sent direct to H. T. Helgesen, state commissioner of agriculture and labor, Grand Forks, North Dakota. It urges this because of the necessity, and from a sense of the obligation which all America owes to these pioneer brethern who built new commonwealths in the west.

By order of the executive committee.

CLARA BARTON,

EXPLORER STANLEY

Will Not Leave Cairo Before April—His Book Almost Complete.

LONDON, March 10.—Mr. Henry M. Stanley will not leave Cairo until the beginning of April, partly because he dreads the sudden change of climate and partly because he has made up his mind to finish his book before he becomes entangled in the dissipations of the London season. The book is so far advanced that the publishers hope it may be ready for publication on the day of Mr. Stanley's arrival in England. He will not come direct to London. He will spend a fortnight at Nice, then proceed to Brussels to pay his respects to the King of Belgium.

At Brussels he will be met by his four officers, Parke, Nelson, Stairs and Jephson all of whom have become devotedly attached to their chief, and are ready to follow him whenever he calls upon them in any fresh enterprise. Dr. Parke's colleagues admit that had it not been for the Doctor not one member of the expedition would have come out alive. Mr. Stanley's first public appearance in London will be at the Albert Hall, under the auspices of the Royal Geographical society. While a special medal will be struck for Stanley, the Royal medal of the society will be awarded to Emin Pasha.

M'AULIFFE'S CHALLENGE.

Will Meet Any Man in the World to a Finish for $10,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., March 10.—The latest sensation in sporting circles was Joe McAuliffe's challenge yesterday, accompanied by $500, in which he agrees to meet any man in the world under Queensbury rules to a finish for any sum from $1,000 to $10,000, Jim Corbett preferred. Toward the latter McAuliffe's animosity knows no limit and he makes an exception in Corbett's case when he says he will meet Jim in private or public with hard or soft gloves for anything from a pint of peanuts to $10,000.

Corbett the other day stated in a card that he would pay no attention to challenges for at least six months. Corbett left for the east last night at 8 o'clock. He was given a reception Friday night by his many friends, who presented him with a magnificent diamond pin, a diamond locket and a beautiful gold watch and chain.

WARREN COUNTY PLUNDERERS.

An Ex-Treasurer and Auditor Sent to the Penitentiary.

COLUMBUS, O., March 10.—Charles F. Coleman, the defaulting ex-treasurer, was Saturday landed behind the penitentiary walls, where he will remain for two and a half years, besides paying a fine of $25,000, or double the amount of his embezzlement.

On the same day Al Graham, the stealing ex-auditor, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to eighteen years in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $126,432.

Ex-Treasurer Dunham was acquitted of the charges against him on Friday. There are still two ex-officials to be tried, viz: M. A. Jamison and ex-Treasurer Tottens. Both of these are charged with both forgery and embezzlement. Jamison's forgery amounts to $3,000 and his embezzlement to $22,812.29, while Totten's forgery amounts to $1,218, and his embezzlement $73,213.59.

BIG SHORTAGE.

The State Treasurer of Missouri Wants to Resign.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., March 10.—State Treasurer Nowland has handed his written resignation to Governor Fance. The governor has not yet decided whether he will accept it. The question is raised whether a state officer who has been suspended can resign pending an investigation. Nowland's deficit is now said to be $32,718.55.

MINISTER LINCOLN'S HOUSE

Is Deluged With Messages of Sympathy from Everywhere.

LONDON, March 10.—The house of Minister Lincoln has been deluged with messages from all parts of England and America, and many portions of the continent. In consequence of the minister's affliction the social duties of the legation will devolve upon Secretary White for the season.

Lakeshore Accident Victims.

BUFFALO, March 10.—All the bodies of the victims of the recent wreck were taken to different undertaking rooms yesterday afternoon and prepared for removal by their friends. The body of Mrs. Baucuss will go to Rome; Mrs. Flynn's remains will be taken to Canton, Ohio; Mr. Powers to Pittsfield, Mass, and Mr. and Mrs. Stewart to Van Wert, Ohio. Porter Swain's body will be sent to a Masonic organization in New York, which will attend to its burial.

Sale of Blooded Horses.

LEXINGTON, KY., March 10.—R. S. Strader, of Lexington, Ky., has sold to A. H. Moore, of Philadelphia, the brown mare Hattie Wilkes, 8 years, by George Wilkes, dam by Alexander's Edwin Forrest, price private, but known to be in the thousands, also to T. C. Burgess, of Columbus, Ind., the bay filly Mistletoe, 2 years, by Eastlight, dam by Empire, price private.

The Missing Drummer.

CHICAGO, March 10.—The police have not as yet found any trace of Rowland Leach, the New York traveling man who disappeared so mysteriously last Sunday evening. The search for him has been conducted in every direction, but without results, and his friends seem to be more than ever satisfied that he is a victim of foul play.

Sherman Free.

TORONTO, ONT., March 10.—Wilson H. Sherman, the Buffalo grain swindler, whose extradition was sought on the charge of forgery, has been discharged, the court holding that the charge was not proven.

Can Beat Stanley.

LONDON, March 10.—Emin Pasha asserts that he can easily make the journey from Bagamoyo to the Albert Nyanza in nine months, though Stanley took a much longer time.

Off for Florida.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The Postmaster General and Mrs. Wanamaker, accompanied by Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Russell Harrison and Mrs. McKee, will go to Florida on a pleasure trip this week.

AN EARTHQUAKE

Destroyes Three Villages in Siberia.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 10.—Three villages in the government of Nutais, Siberia, have been destroyed by an earthquake.

THE DRAUGHT OF FISHES.

LESSON XI, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 16.

Text of the Lesson, Luke v, 1-11—Commit Verses 8-11—Golden Text, Luke v, 10—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

1. "The people pressed upon Him to hear the Word of God." Our last lesson left Him on His tour through Galilee preaching the Gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people (Matt. iv, 23). We now find Him again by the sea of Galilee, or, as it is in our lesson, the lake of Gennesaret, and probably at or near Capernaum, where Peter lived. Most of our Lord's public life was spent in the neighborhood of this sea.

2. "And saw two boats standing by the lake, but the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets." Two or three of these fishermen had already been with Jesus some time, had seen His miracles and heard His words, yet had not wholly left their calling to follow Him.

3. "He sat down and taught the people out of the boat." Having stepped into Simon's boat, He meekly asks him to push out a little from the land, and sitting down, He from the boat teaches the people as they stand, an eagerly attentive crowd, upon the shore.

4. "He said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep and let down your nets for a draught." Simon having kindly given the use of his boat, Jesus will now reward him for it and teach him at the same time many things. Simon had for a little season cheerfully given himself and his boat to the Master for His work, and now this gracious Lord and Master is about to give special attention to Simon's work. No one ever suffered loss by giving attention to the special work of Christ, but multitudes have been blessed for time and eternity by obeying Matt. vi, 33. If we see to His work He will see to all our needs better far than we could.

5. "Master, we have toiled all the night and have taken nothing." So replied Simon, confessing their unavailing toil and their present need.

6. "And when they had this done, they inclosed a great multitude of fishes, and their nets brake." Whether it be a great fish to swallow Jonah, or a smaller fish to bring a piece of money, or multitudes of fish to fill these nets, all are obedient to Him who created them, and who also created Adam and said unto him, "Have dominion over the fish of the sea."

7. "They came and filled both the ships, so that they began to sink." We are told in the tenth verse that James and John were partners with Simon, and finding that he had more fish than he could manage, he called his partners and they found fish enough to fill both the boats to overflowing. Our Lord Jesus loves to have empty vessels, and not a few, that he may fill them. When the woman with the pot of oil began to pour into the empty vessels the oil kept coming till every vessel was filled. When Jesus fed the thousands they did all eat and were filled.

8. "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord." This is the language of Simon Peter, as seeing this great miracle he realizes somewhat in whose presence he stands, and falls at Jesus' knees with these words. This is part of the emptying process; a deep conviction of sin as we see ourselves in God's sight. It was so with Job, Isaiah, Daniel and John (Job xlii, 5, 6; Isa. vi, 5; Dan. x, 8; Rev. i, 17), and until it becomes so with us, there is no prospect of our being much used of God. Observe that the name used all through this lesson, except in this verse, is not the new name, "Cephas," or "Peter" (John i, 42), but the old name, indicating the natural man, "Simon," and in order to service for Christ there must be the constant and persistent reckoning dead, putting off, mortifying of the old man with his deeds, and the putting on of the new, that the life of Jesus may be manifested in these mortal bodies (Rom. vi, 6, 11; viii, 13; Eph. iv, 22-24; II Cor. iv, 11).

9. "For he was astonished, and all that were with him." The Revised Version says that he was amazed. So Saul of Tarsus, when convinced of his sin on the way to Damascus, "trembling and astonished," said, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" We put forth our best efforts in most approved fashion, and labor unwearyingly for the salvation of souls and for the quickening of believers, but how often we have to confess as to the result, "nothing." In some unlikely way, and perhaps through some weak but empty vessel, the Spirit of God works, and we all stand astonished. Our wisdom is confounded, our plans upset, and it becomes gloriously manifest that this is the hand of God. If we would see the wonders of His grace, we must wait only upon Him.

10. "And Jesus said unto Simon, Fear not." When convicted of sin we fall at Jesus' feet in our helplessness and unworthiness. Then it is that we hear His "Fear not," or when we, all unworthy, are willing to be vessels for His service (Dan. x, 12, 19; Rev. i, 17; Luke i, 13, 30). It is only the willful and rebellious who have cause to fear, or the proud and hard of heart, for they shall be broken and brought down, and made to know that the Most High doeth according to His will both in heaven and on earth, and those that walk in pride He is able to abase (Dan. iv). But from the first "Fear not" in the Bible (Gen. xv, 1) down to the last in Revelation there is no place where the penitent and broken in heart are taught to fear. All is for them comfort, and peace, and joy, and strength, and prosperity in the Lord.

"From henceforth thou shalt catch men," or, as in Matt. iv, 19: "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men." Here we see the spirit of prophecy most marked; listen to Jeremiah (xvi, 16): "Behold, I will send for many fishers, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them." And again, to Ezekiel (xlvii, 10): "The fishers shall stand upon it, from Engedi even unto Eneglaim." Each passage refers to the Kingdom of Israel in its glorious future. If we would hasten that kingdom, we must follow Jesus, that He may make us skillful and successful fishers of men from among all nations, that so His marriage day may be hastened, and the time of His return for Israel's restoration.

11. "And when they had brought their ships to land, they forsook all, and followed Him." "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me." "Whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be My disciple" (Matt. xvi, 24; Luke xiv, 33). Jesus does not ask us to drop what we have without showing us something better. When Peter one day spoke of their giving up all for Him, He told them of the Throne of His Glory and the Thrones that awaited them. When Paul saw His Glory, he was able to count all earthly glory but dross. Stephen, seeing Him, thought nothing of being stoned to death. Let us only get our eyes upon the Glory of His Kingdom and the Thrones which await the overcomers, and we shall have no heart for aught else but to follow Him, and for His sake be made all things to all men that we may by all means save some (Matt. xix, 21; John xii, 26; xxi, 19-22; I Cor. ix, 23).

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January A. D. 1881, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan, of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A. D., 1881, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages, on page 591, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1883, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 30th day of January, A. D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in liber 118 of Mortgages, on page 659; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-one and 12-100 Dollars ($1751.12) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that, by virtue of said power of sale and the statutes of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now, as aforesaid, due and owing on said mortgage, together with interest to become thereon, and the costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Thirty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the 21st day of April, A. D. 1890, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5) town five (5) south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

Dated Jan. 23d, 1890.

Tecumseh Herald

TECUMSEH, MARCH 6, 1890.

CLEOPATRA.

Being an Account of the Fall and Vengeance of Harmachis, the Royal Egyptian.

"'Tis a heavy song of thine, Charmion," said the Queen. "Well, as thou saidst, 'tis a sad hour for song, and thy dirge is fitted to the hour. Sing it o'er me once again when I lie dead, Charmion. And now farewell to music and on to the end. Olympus, take yonder parchment and write what I shall say."

I took the parchment and the reed, and thus I wrote in the Roman tongue:

"Cleopatra to Octavianus. Greeting: This is the state of life. At length there comes an hour when, rather than endure those burdens that o'erwhelm us, putting off the body we would take wing into forgetfulness. Cæsar, thou hast conquered; take thou the spoils of victory. But in thy triumph Cleopatra can not walk. When all is lost, then must we go to seek the lost. Thus in the desert of despair the brave do harvest resolution. Cleopatra hath been great as Antony was great, nor, in the manner of her end, shall her fame be minished. Slaves live to endure their wrong; but Princes, treading with a firmer step, pass through the gates of Wrong into the Royal dwellings of the dead. This only doth Egypt ask of Cæsar, that he suffer her to lie in the tomb of Antony. Farewell."

This, therefore, I wrote, and having sealed it, Cleopatra bade me go find a messenger, dispatch it unto Cæsar, and then return. So I went, and at the door of the tomb I called a soldier, who was not on duty, and, giving him money, bade him take the letter unto Cæsar. Then I went back, and there in the chamber stood the three women in silence, Cleopatra clinging to the arm of Iras, and Charmion a little apart watching the twain.

"If indeed thou art minded to make an end, O Queen," I said, "short is the time, for presently will Cæsar send his servants in answer to thy letter," and I drew forth the phial of white and deadly bane and set it upon the board.

She took it in her hand and gazed thereon. "How innocent it seems!" she said; "and yet therein lies my death. 'Tis strange."

"Aye, Queen, and the death of ten other folk. No need to take so long a draught."

"I fear," she gasped. "How know I that it will slay outright! I have seen so many die by poison and scarce one hath died outright. And some! ah, I can not think on them!"

"Fear not," I said, "I am a master of my craft. Or, if thou dost fear, cast this poison forth and live. In Rome mayest thou still find happiness; aye, in Rome, where thou shalt walk in Cæsar's triumph, while the laughter of the hard-eyed Latin women shall chime down the music of thy golden chains."

"Nay, I will die. Oh, if one would but show the path."

Then did Iras loose her hand and step forward. "Give me the draught, Physician," she said. "I go to make ready for my Queen."

"'Tis well," I answered; "on thy own head be it!" and I poured from the phial into a little golden goblet.

She raised it, and low she curtsied to Cleopatra, then, coming forward, kissed her on the brow, and Charmion she also kissed. This done, tarrying not and making no prayer (for Iras was a Greek), she drank, and, putting her hand to her head, instantly fell down and died.

"Thou seest," I said, breaking in upon the silence, "it is swift."

"Aye, Olympus; thine is a master drug! Come now, I thirst; fill me the bowl, lest Iras weary in waiting at the gates!"

So I poured afresh into the goblet; but this time, making pretense to rinse the cup, I mixed a little water, for I was not minded that she should die before she knew me.

Then did the royal Cleopatra, taking the goblet in her hand, turn her lovely eyes to heaven and cry aloud:

"O ye Gods of Egypt! who have deserted me, to you no longer will I pray, for deaf are your ears unto my crying, and blind your eyes unto my griefs! Therefore I make entreaty to that one friend whom the Gods, departing, leave to helpless man. O Royal Death! sweep hither on thy cloudy pinions, whose shadow circles all the earth, and give me ear! Thou King of Kings! who, with an equal hand, bringest the fortunate head to one pillow with the slave, and by thy icy breath dost waft the bubble of our life far from these fields of Earth, draw near and save! Hide me where winds blow not and waters cease to roll! Hide me where Cæsar's legions can not march! Take me to a new dominion and crown me Queen of Sleep! I am in labor of a Soul! See, it stands new-born upon the edge of time! Now, now, go, Breath! Come, Death! Come, Antony!" And, with one glance to heaven, she drank and cast the goblet to the ground.

Then at last came the moment of my pent-up vengeance, and of the vengeance of Egypt's outraged Gods, and of the falling of the curse of Menka-ra.

"What is this?" she cried. "I grow cold, but I die not. Thou dark physician, thou hast betrayed me!"

"Peace, Cleopatra! Presently shalt thou die and know the fury of the Gods! The curse of Menka-ra hath fallen! It is finished! Look upon me, woman! Look upon this marred face, this twisted form, this living mass of sorrow! Look! look! Who am I?"

She stared upon me wildly.

"Oh! oh!" she shrieked, throwing up her arms; "at last I know thee! By the Gods thou art Harmachis! Harmachis risen from the dead!"

"Aye, Harmachis risen from the dead to drag thee down to death and agony eternal! See thou, Cleopatra: I have ruined thee as thou didst ruin me! I, working in the dark, and helped of the angry Gods, have been thy secret spring of woe! I filled thy heart with fear at Actium, I held the Egyptians from thy aid, I sapped the strength of Antony, I showed the portent of the Gods unto thy captains! By my hand at length thou diest, for I am the instrument of Vengeance! Run do I pay thee back for ruin, treachery for treachery, death for death! Come hither, Charmion, partner of my plots, who betrayed me, but, repenting, art the sharer of my triumph, come watch this fallen wanton die!"

Cleopatra heard, and sank back upon the golden bed, groaning: "And thou, too, Charmion!"

A moment so she sat, then her Imperial spirit burnt up glorious before she died.

She staggered from the bed, and, with arms outstretched, she cursed me.

"Oh, for one hour of life!" she cried; "one short hour, that therein might I make thee die in such a fashion as thou canst not dream, thou and that false paramour of thine, who betrayed both me and thee! And thou didst love him! Ah, there I have thee still! See, thou subtle, plotting priest!" and with both hands she rent back the royal robes from her bosom; "See, on this fair breast once, night by night, was thy head pillowed, and thou didst sleep wrapped in these same arms. Now, put away their memory (if thou canst!) I read it in thine eyes that mayst thou not! No torture which I bear can, in its sum, draw nigh to the rage of that deep soul of thine, rent with longings, never, never to be reached! Harmachis, thou slave of slaves, from thy triumph depths I snatch a deeper triumph; and conquered, yet I conquer! I spit upon thee, I defy thee, and dying, doom thee to the torment of thy deathless love! O Antony! I come, my Antony! I come to thine own dear arms! Soon I shall find thee, and wrapped in a love undying and divine, together will we float through all the depths of space, and lips to lips and eyes to eyes drink of desires grown more sweet with every draught! Or if I find thee not, then shall I sink in peace down the popplied ways of Sleep, and for me the breast of Night, whereon I shall be softly cradled, shall yet seem thy bosom. Antony! Oh, I die! Come, Antony, and give me peace!"

Even in my fury I quailed beneath her scorn, for home flew the arrows of her winged words. Alas! and alas! it was true. The shaft of my vengeance fell upon my own head; never had I loved her as I loved her now. My soul was rent with jealous torture, and thus I swore she should not die.

"Peace!" I cried; "what peace is there for thee? Oh! ye Holy Three, hear now my prayer. Osiris, loosen Thou the bonds of Hell, and send forth those whom I shall summon! Come, Ptolemy, poisoned of thy sister Cleopatra; come, Arsinoe, murdered in the sanctuary by thy sister

SHE LOOKED; SHE SAW THE AWFUL SHAPES.

Cleopatra; come Sepa, tortured to death of Cleopatra; come, Divine Menka-ra, whose body Cleopatra tore, and whose curse for greed she braved; come one, come all who have died at the hands of Cleopatra! Rush from the breast of Nout, and greet her who murdered you! By the link of mystic union, by the symbol of the Life, Spirits, I summon you!"

I spoke, while Charmion, affrighted, clung to my robe, and the dying Cleopatra, resting on her hands, swung slowly to and fro, gazing with vacant eyes.

Then the answer came. The casement burst asunder, and on flittering wings that great Bat entered which last I had seen hanging to the eunuch's chin in the womb of the pyramid Her. Thrice it circled round, once it hovered o'er dead Iras, then it flew to where the dying woman stood. To her it flew, on her breast it settled, clinging to that emerald which was dragged from the dead heart of Menka-ra. Thrice the black Horror screamed aloud, thrice it beat its bony wings, and lo! it was gone. Then suddenly within that chamber sprang up the Shapes of Death. There was Arsinoe, the beautiful, even as she had shrunk beneath the butcher's knife. There was young Ptolemy, his features twisted by the poisoned cup. There was the majesty of Menka-ra, crowned with the uræus crown; there was grave Sepa, his flesh all torn by the torturer's hooks; there were those poisoned slaves; and there were others without number, shadowy and dreadful to behold! who, thronging that narrow chamber, stood silently fixing their glassy eyes upon the face of her who slew them!

"Behold! Cleopatra!" I said. "Behold thy peace, and die!"

"Aye!" said Charmion. "Behold and die! thou who didst rob me of mine honor and Egypt of her king!"

She looked, she saw the awful Shapes. Her spirit, hurrying from the flesh, mayhap could hear words to which my ears were deaf. Then her face sank in with terror, her great eyes grew pale, and, shrieking, Cleopatra fell and died; passing with that dread company to her appointed place.

Thus, then, did I feed my soul with vengeance, fulfilling the justice of the Gods, and yet knew myself empty of all joy therein. For though that thing we worship doth bring us ruin, and Love being more pitiless than Death, we in turn do pay all our sorrow back; yet must we worship on, yet stretch out our arms toward our lost Desire, and pour our heart's blood upon the shrine of our discrowned God.

For Love is of the Spirit and knows not Death.

CHAPTER XXXII.

HARMION unclasped my arm, to which she had clung in terror.

"Thy vengeance, thou dark Harmachis," she said, in a hoarse voice, "is a thing hideous to behold! O lost Egypt, with all thy sins thou wast indeed a queen. Come, aid me, prince; let us stretch this poor clay upon the bed and deck it royally, so that it may give its dumb audience to the messengers of Cæsar as becomes the last of Egypt's queens."

I spoke no word in answer, for my heart was very heavy, and now that all was done, I was weary. Together, then, we lifted up the body and laid it on the golden bed. Charmion placed the uræus crown upon the ivory brow, and combed the night-dark hair that showed never a thread of silver, and for the last time shut those eyes wherein had shone all the changing glories of the sea. She folded the chill hands upon the breast whence passion's breath had fled, and straightened the bent knees beneath the broidered robe, and by the head set flowers, and there at length Cleopatra lay, more splendid now in her cold majesty of death than in her richest hour of breathing beauty. We drew back and looked on her, and on dead Iras at her feet.

"It is done," quoth Charmion; "we are avenged; and now, Harmachis, dost follow by this same road?" and she nodded towards the phial on the board.

"Nay, Charmion. I fly—I fly to a heavier death. Not thus easily may I end my space of earthly penance."

"So be it, Harmachis, and I, Harmachis—I fly also, but with swifter wings. My game is played. I, too, have made atonement. Oh! what a bitter fate is mine, to have brought misery on all I love, and, in the end, to die unloved. To thee I have stoned; to my angered Gods I have atoned; and now I go to find a way whereby I may atone to Cleopatra in that Hell where she is, and which I must share, for she loved me well, Harmachis; and, now that she is dead, methinks that, after thee, I loved her best of all. So of her cup and the cup of Iras I will surely drink."

And she took the phial, and with a steady hand poured that which was left of the poison into the goblet.

"Bethink thee, Charmion," I said; "yet mayst thou live for many years, hiding these sorrows beneath the withered days."

"Yet I may, but I will not! To live the prey of so many memories, the fount of an undying shame that night by night, as I lie sleepless, shall well afresh from my sorrow-stricken heart to live, torn by a love I can not lose. To stand alone, like some storm-twisted tree, and sighing day by day to the winds of heaven. Gaze upon the desert of my life, while I wait the lingering lightning's stroke. Nay, that will not I; Harmachis, I had died long since, but I lived on to serve thee, now no more thou needest me, and I go. Oh, fare thee well! forever fare thee well; for not again shall I look upon thy face, and where I go thou goest not; for thou dost not love me who still dost love that queenly woman thou hast hounded to the death. Her thou shalt never win, and thee I shall never win, and this is the bitter end of fate. See, Harmachis! I ask one boon before I go, and for all time become naught to thee but a memory of shame; tell me that thou dost forgive me so far as thine is to forgive, and, in token thereof, kiss me—with no lover's kiss, but kiss me on the brow, and bid me pass in peace."

And she drew near to me with arms outstretched, and pitiful, trembling lips, and gazed upon my face.

"Charmion," I answered, "we are free to act for good or evil, and yet methinks there is a fate above our fate, that, blowing from strange shores, compels our little sails of purpose, set them as we will, and drives us to destruction. I forgive thee, Charmion, as I trust in turn to be forgiven, and by this kiss, the first and the last, I seal our peace." And with my lips I touched her brow.

She spoke no more; only for a little while she stood gazing on me with sad eyes, then she lifted the goblet, and said: "Royal Harmachis, in this deadly cup I pledge thee; would that I had drunk of it ere ever I looked upon thy face, Pharaoh, who, thy sins outworn, yet shall rule in perfect peace o'er worlds I may not tread, who yet shall sway a kinglier scepter than that I robbed thee of, forever fare thee well."

She drank, cast down the cup and for a moment stood with the wide eyes of one who looks for death. Then he came, and Charmion, the Egyptian, fell prone upon the floor, dead; and for a moment I stood alone with the dead.

I crept to the side of Cleopatra, and, now that none were left to see, I sat down on the bed and laid her head upon my knee, as once before it had been laid; in that night of sacrilege beneath the everlasting pyramid. Then I kissed her chill brow and went from the house of death "avenged, but sorely smitten with despair."

"Physician," said the officer of the guard as I went through the gates, "what passes yonder in the monument? Methought I heard the sounds of death."

"Naught passes; all hath passed," I made reply, and went; and as I went in the darkness I heard the sound of voices and the running of the feet of Cæsar's messengers. Flying swiftly to my house, I found Atoua waiting at the gates. She drew me into a quiet chamber and closed the doors.

"Is it done?" she asked, and turned her wrinkled face to mine, while the lamp-light streamed white upon her snowy hair.

"Nay, why ask—I know that it is done."

"Ay, it is done and well done, old-wife; all are dead; Cleopatra, Iras, Charmion—all save myself."

The aged woman drew up her bent form and cried: "Now let me go in peace, for I have seen my desire upon thy foes and the foes of Khem—la, la! not in vain have I lived on beyond the years of man. I have seen my desire upon thy enemies—I have gathered the dews of death, and thy foe hath drunk thereof. Fallen is the brow of pride! The shame of Khem is level with the dust! Ah—would that I might have seen that wanton die!"

"Cease, woman, cease! The dead are gathered to the dead. Osiris holds them fast, and everlasting silence seals their lips. Pursue not the fallen great with insults. Up—let us fly to Abouthis, that all may be accomplished."

"Fly thou, Harmachis! — Harmachis, fly!—but I fly not. To this end only I have lingered on the earth. Now I untie the knot of life and let my spirit free! Fare thee well, prince, the pilgrimage is done! Harmachis, from a babe have I loved thee, and love thee yet! But no more in this world may I share thy griefs. I am spent. Osiris, take thou my spirit!" And her trembling knees gave way, and she sank to the ground.

I ran to her side and looked upon her. She was already dead, and I was alone upon the earth without a friend to comfort me.

Then I turned and went, no man hindering me, for all was confusion in the city, and departed from Alexandria in a vessel I had made ready. On the eighth day I landed, and, in the carrying out of my purpose traveled on fast across the fields to the holy shrines of Abouthis. And here, as I knew the worship of the gods had been lately set up again, in the temple of the divine Sethi (for Charmion had caused Cleopatra to repent of her decree of vengeance and to restore the lands that she had seized, though the treasure she restored not), and the temple having been purified, now, at the season of the feast of Isis, all the high priests of the ancient temples of Egypt were gathered together to celebrate the coming home of the gods into their holy place.

I gained the city. It was on the seventh day of the feast of Isis. Even as I came the long array wended through the well-remembered streets. I joined in the multitude that followed, and with my voice swelled the chorus of the solemn chant as we passed through the pylons into the imperishable halls. How well known were the holy words:

"Softly we tread, our measured footsteps falling
Within the sanctuary seven-fold!
Soft on the dead that liveth are we calling.
Return, Osiris, from thy kingdom cold,
Return to them that worship thee of old."

And then, when the sacred music ceased, as aforetime on the setting of the majesty of Ra—the high priest raised the statue of the living God and held it on high before the multitude. With a joyful shout of "Osiris, our hope! Osiris! Osiris!" the people tore the black wrappings from their dress, showing the white robes beneath, and, as one man, bowed before the God. Then they went to feast, each at his home; but I stayed in the court of the temple. Presently a priest of the temple drew near, and asked me of my business; and I answered him that I came from Alexandria, and would be led before the council of the high priest, for I knew that the holy priests were gathered together debating the tidings from Alexandria. Thereon the man left and the high priests, hearing that I was from Alexandria, ordered that I should be led into their presence in the second hall of columns—and so I was led in.

It was already dark, and between the great pillars lights were set, as on that night when I was crowned Pharaoh of the upper and the lower land. There, too, was the long line of dignitaries seated in their carven chairs and taking counsel together. All was the same. The same cold images of kings and Gods gazed with the same empty eyes from the everlasting walls. Ay—more! Among those gathered there were five of the very men who, as leaders of the great plot, had sat here to see me crowned, being the only conspirators who had escaped the vengeance of Cleopatra and the clutching hand of time. I took my stand on the spot where once I had been crowned, and made me ready for the last act of shame, with such bitterness of heart as can not be written.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, with its varied and excellent contents, is a library in itself.

It was indeed a happy thought to print an entire novel in each number.

Not a short novelette, but a long story such as you are used to get in book form and pay from one dollar to one dollar and a half for.

Not only that, but with each number you get an abundance of other contributions, which gives you a good magazine besides the novel.

The ringing blows which have been struck on the gateway of popular favor, have resounded throughout the entire land, and to-day Lippincott's Magazine stands in the front rank of monthly publications, and is the most widely-read-and-talked-of publication of its kind in the world. Lyman Ames, of Saline township, has sold his farm and will come to Clinton soon to live, occupying the Nimocks house.

F. A. Rogers of Detroit is visiting his brothers, Race and Jim, and will take a leading part in the minstrels Thursday night.

L. C. Reynolds, who has been clerking for M. C. Calkins, has left and will return to his home in Leslie. Clarence H. Crego, from Jackson, will take his place.

Ice was cut and hauled at a lively rate last Friday and Saturday. A large force of hands was set at work and most of the ice houses were filled with clear, hard ice.

M. Martin and E. Ogden are coming to town to live. The call for empty houses and the scarcity of them speaks well for our village. There is not at present an empty house in town.

The Misses Hattie and Louise Platt have rented M. Bartlett's building east of Bush & Lindley's store, and will put in a stock of millinery goods. We bespeak for them a liberal patronage.

M. L. Calkins, our enterprising druggist, is preparing to move his stock into the Silvers block, where he will have more room than in the place he now occupies, and will then add groceries to his stock. No doubt he will get a good share of the patronage.

Just whether some Clinton young ladies did or didn't corner a drummer at the depot and compel him to sing a song before they would release his captured "grip" may never be known, but it has led to a newspaper controversy over seven feet tall.—Adrian Press.

A "cobweb" party, given by Miss Jennie Price last Friday evening, was the event of the week. The few who participated were richly entertained. May Morey was the first to wind the tangled web assigned her, and was presented with the first prize; Carrie Huntington being the last to do so easily secured the second. Supper was served and the remainder of the evening was spent in a very pleasant way.

The Royal Hand Bell Ringers gave one of their pleasing entertainments to a crowded house last Thursday evening. It is estimated that about six hundred people listened to this second visit of these gentlemen. Two more entertainments on the course are now assured: The Charles Higgins Concert Company will be here Mar. 31st. and Miss Olive Thompson, impersonator in costume, in the near future.

The village election passed off very quietly. Though there were two tickets in the field, corporation and citizens, it was somewhat one-sided, as will be seen by the following, the whole corporation ticket being elected.

Pres.—F. D. Lancaster, 134; W. S. Kimball, 66.

Trustees—Dow Draper, 139; Will Wood, 58; F. McClure, 135; Geo. Calhoun, 56; D. Woodward, 132; Charles Corwin, 64.

Clerk—Albert F. Kishpaugh, 199; Treas.—W. D VanTuyle, 194; Assessor—Frank E. Brown, 199; St. Com.—Nelson Prentiss, 200; Constable—Geo. W. Goodrich, 196; on both tickets.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Township politics are beginning to simmer.

Congressman Allen cast his vote in favor of Chicago for the World's Fair.

The lower rooms of the new Hudson school building were occupied last Monday.

Four steam craft will ply the River Raisin between Dundee and the upriver ports.

Ten carloads of ice have been shipped from Cadillac to the Industrial Home at Adrian.

The electric light plant of Hudson is working satisfactorily and will be accepted in a few days by the Hudson company.

Kempton, of the Addison Courier, thinks this is leap year. The last issue of his paper is dated Saturday, February 29, 1890.

W. H. Cleveland, late appraiser of the port of Detroit, will again reside in Adrian, where he formerly kept a grocery store.

A fox trotted very leisurely across the road ahead of a crowd of Fairfield church goers, last Sunday. Even the minister sighed and wished he had his gun, and it wasn't Sunday.

The Times says: Hudson annually spends about $1,000 in lottery tickets, and the other day when two of her citizens drew $60, it nearly knocked the breath out of the town.

A new electric time detector has been put in the Woolen Mill. This piece of mechanism will tell exactly if the night watchman has made his regular stations.—Clinton Local.

The Addison Courier says: F. A. Saunders has put out a new and improved transmittor for local telephones, which is said to possess some very desirable advantages over those formerly used."

The bad politics of this country is the foundation—the cause—of the present hard times. Knock out the present corrupt system of political trickery and elect men to office who will legislate in the interest of the people and times will get better, not worse.—Michigan Messenger.

Andrew Taylor, of Rome township, died last week, after some weeks' illness, aged 77 years. He settled on his farm when Michigan was a territory and there had been no transfer of the title to the land since the President signed the deed to him. He was a zealous and well-informed spiritualist.

Rib grass, or lance-leaved plaintain, is becoming common in clover seed. While it is not the worst of weeds, the seeds are difficult to separate from those of the clover, and when present must injure the sale of the clover seed. The plaintain seeds are brown, so long, concave on one side, convex on the other.

Prof. Hathaway, of the Valley Seminary, was a caller at this office Monday. He is much interested in the lecture course being given by local talent and says that good results are being realized. This demonstrates what The Messenger has been advocating—that local talent set to work is often better than expensive imported talent.—Michigan Messenger.

Detroit Free Press: Lenawee is the banner cheese county of the State, and probably the banner dairy county of the United States. It makes more cheese than all the other counties in the State and makers in other counties are compelled to brand their product "Choice Lenawee County Churn." A new and large factory has just been built in Dover township near Cadmus Station.

His bonds having been duly approved by the department, J. N. Chappell received his commission for the postmastership of this village last Monday, and yesterday was in Chicago getting a new outfit of boxes. He will not officially attach P. M. to his name until the beginning of the next quarter, April 1st, and meanwhile he will learn what he can of his future duties under the guidance of the present postmaster.—Morenci Observer.

A Detroit Free Press item states that "while the ministers of the four Protestant churches in Adrian, on the four corners of Broad and Maumee streets, were last Sabbath offering up prayers for the observance of the Sabbath, load after load of ice went by the church doors on the way to the Industrial Home." Miss Scott, Superintendent of the Home, says that the item is false—no ice was drawn there at all Sunday.

On a Lake Shore train going west, Friday, was a little three-year-old child and its parents. When near Elkhart the parents dropped asleep and the child took a walk down the aisle, then out on the platform and fell to the ground while the train was going at a high rate of speed. Of course it was supposed the child was instantly killed, but when the train was stopped and backed, the baby was found standing in the middle of the track uninjured, with the exception of a slight scratch on one ear.—Hudson Gazette.

The residence of Andrew Jenne narrowly escaped cremation Saturday evening. While he was lighting a hanging lamp the chain unfastened, letting the lamp fall upon a lighted lamp setting upon a small table underneath, smashing the lamps and setting fire to the oil upon the floor. He was alone, but by active work he succeeded in smothering the flames with the use of a heavy table spread and a few buckets of water, but not until a large quantity of the carpet had been destroyed by the fire. Mr. Jenne for a number of days after was considerably broken up from his over-exertions in subduing the flames and saving the residence.—Dundee Reporter.

THE SMEAD SYSTEM.

A number of our citizens accompanied Mr. Clark, of Toledo, to witness tests made at the West Branch school building on Wednesday afternoon of this week. It was shown by the air metre that although the day was cloudy, little air moving, and so warm that but little fire was in the furnace, there was brought into the building 1920 cubic feet of fresh air every minute, or 115200 feet per hour; the amount for each of the eighty children in the building being 24 feet per minute, or 1440 feet per hour. The fresh, pure air coming into each room in 13½ minutes is equal to the entire area of the room, or in other words, the air is all changed every fourteen minutes. The mercury in the thermometer, when placed upon the floor, stood at 69° and when elevated to the ceiling, thirteen feet above, stood at 69½°, showing the circulation of air in the room. The velocity of the air in the vault, passing over the excreta, was 190 feet per minute and the volume was 760 cubic feet per minute. Among those who witnessed the test were Dr. Woodward, Prof. Wilson, M. P. Brown, C. A. Wright, S. P. Hosmer, S. W. Anderson, J. D. Shull, Geo. Heesen, C. F. Field, C. A. Slayton and several others.

When we consider the unfavorable state of the atmosphere yesterday, it seems as though everyone ought to be convinced that we not only have a model school building, but that its heating, ventilation and dry closet system are A1.

GOOD ROADS.

At the last meeting of the Washtenaw county Horticultural Society, an interesting paper was read by Junius E. Beal on the road question. We give a portion thereof below:

"Land values could be increased at least ten dollars per acre for farms connected with town by roads which would carry full loads the year round, while conservative estimates show that each farmer would save fifteen dollars' worth of time, wear and tear of wagons, harness, and horse flesh, annually. It would counteract the tendency of farmers to move into town to get the advantages of schools, lectures, etc., if their children could drive in over good roads in a few minutes, while wealthy townspeople would be induced to move out a ways to give their children the advantages of pure air, freedom, and the healthfulness of country life. All this would raise the value of farms.

"Thousands of dollars have been lost to AnnArbor merchants the past few years by impassable roads. Farmers have had produce the city needed, and which they wanted to exchange, but many have not been to town this winter. All are interested in good roads, and all ought to work together for the public good. The state should build some roads between the large cities by general taxation on the corporations, city people and farmers alike.

A state commissioner of roads and bridges should be appointed, who should be an engineer. He should visit the counties and supervise improvements, who should be appointed by the supervisors. The county officer should not be elected, for he should be an engineer (who could be county surveyor also,) and the best man would be gotten by appointment, as at times they might have to go out of the county to get a good man.

"In doing the best work, four points must be insisted upon, namely: State and county work rather than township (except for unimportant roads;) abolish working out road tax (except possibly unusual work beyond appropriations;) have one man order expenditures in the county, who would therefore be responsible for good roads and have a proper classification of roads made by the state commissioner—say into state, county and town roads.

"Counties might be divided into road districts, where one or two men would be employed the year round in looking after the drainage, filling up holes and ruts as soon as discovered, cutting weeds, etc.

"Naturally it cannot be done at once, to get good roads everywhere; but we may do as Canana has done—that is, build a part at a time. She has been at it thirty years, and now has far better roads than are dreamed of on this side.

"As an educator a stone crusher should be purchased by the city, or several townships, for $500, and a few roads built in a proper manner, which would show our people what a grand thing is a good road. It could be run by a threshing machine engine, and stones are plenty over all the county and state. We cannot stand these roads much longer, so we must get out of the rut and mend our ways."

IS IT PLEASANT TO BE OLD?

Friend, is it pleasant to be old?
No, save only that the streets of gold,
And pearly gates they grow so near,
And jasper walls so bright and clear,
That like a picture they unfold,
In this 'tis pleasant to be old.

'Tis pleasant, too, to think that life,
With all its tumult vast, and strife,
Its flimsy joys that fade so fast,
Its storms that bid us stand aghast,
And other ills are almost told;
In this 'tis pleasant to be old.

And then the aged feel that rest,
Is of blessings sweetest, best,
And sure to know that rest is near
Brings much to comfort and to cheer,
A rest above what earth could hold,
In this 'tis pleasant to be old.

'Tis pleasant that in age we stand,
With feet so near the border land,
That just beyond the sullen tide,
That's seldom very deep or wide,
We enter in the dear old fold,
In this 'tis pleasant to be old.

And when we draw so near life's verge,
And hear the sullen river surge,
And earthly sight grows faint and dim,
Our vision clearer is for Him,
Who says, the aged I uphold,
In this 'tis pleasant to be old.

And so we murmur not at all,
As age's night doth round us fall,
But upward look with faith's clear eye,
Beyond the earth, beyond the sky,
To jasper walls and streets of gold,
And there none ever do grow old.

HONOR ON THE SEA.

Why a Contemptible Trick Failed to Work.

Mr. John Percival is the head of the great firm of Percival Brothers, the owners of what, for the purposes of this story, shall be called the Grapnel Transportation Line. In shipping circles it is well known that Mr. John Percival, although in the main a kind man, is on some occasions a cruel one; yet his very cruelty is a proof of his kindness.

His idea of honor upon the sea is that, no matter how long it may take or how much it may cost, a sound ship should stand by and help to the utmost a neighbor in distress. This should be, but unfortunately it is not, the rule of every ship-owner. When Mr. John Percival finds that a captain of one of his steamers has failed to help a wrecked or disabled craft he becomes furious. It is said that he even dances about and breaks up the furniture, and that captain is summarily dismissed from the service of the Grapnel Line, together with such officers as have aided or abetted him.

The consequence of this policy on the part of Mr. John Percival is that every poor ship upon the sea which breaks its walking-beam or loses its smokestacks and masts in a storm hopes that it may fall into the hands of the Grapnel steamers.

One night Captain Alexander Derwent, of the Percival Brothers' ship Esperanza, was pacing the deck in company with the ship's surgeon, Dr. Allis, when they heard a boom in the distance.

"That's a gun," said the captain, stopping short.

It had been very stormy all of the last three days, and had begun to clear only at noon that day.

"It certainly is, and there's another," returned the surgeon. "I believe some boat has been struck hard by the storm and is firing for relief."

As he spoke a rocket could be dimly descried, going up far to the right of them.

"I'm behindhand with this gale and all," sighed the captain, "but I suppose I must stand to and help those fellows, even if it takes a week."

The ship was ordered about at once, colored lights were burned, guns were fired, and shortly after sunrise the next morning the Esperanza found herself towing along the English steamer Cambyses, of the Pendleton Freight Line. Her engine was broken, her captain said, and she had been lying for forty-eight hours unable to move.

For two days after her rescue by the Esperanza her officers appeared to be overcome with gratitude. Captain Derwent lent the disabled steamer many tools. The carpenter and engineer of the Esperanza offered also their assistance in helping to repair the engine, but this was steadily declined. The officers of the Cambyses did not think it was "worth while;" they would "tinker a little themselves as they went along, without troubling the Esperanza any more than was necessary."

For four days the Esperanza steamed slowly through the waste of waters, towing her huge charge. The Cambyses was heavily laden and retarded the progress of her friend woefully.

On the evening of the fourth day Captain Derwent and the surgeon were again walking the deck. It was not stormy, but the fog was quite dense. The few passengers had retired to their state-rooms. The crew were at their posts. Every thing was very still, except for the throbbing engine and the rolling of the waves.

"Queer lot we've got over there," said Captain Derwent, jerking his hand toward the Cambyses.

"Have they spoken you at all to-day?" asked the surgeon.

"Nary a word since early morning. I don't like their looks. Anybody would think from their manners yesterday and to-day that we were receiving a great favor from them in their allowing us to tow them. They wanted to know this morning if we couldn't go a little faster. I suppose they think we are trying to mount up a big bill for towage. If they give me any more of their 'sass' I'll cut loose from them and John Percival may say what he pleases."

"What's that?" asked Dr. Allis, stopping short in his walk. "Who's meddling with the hawsers?"

"Just so," said the captain, in a troubled and excited voice. "That's the rasping of ropes and no mistake. I—I believe," he cried, furiously, "that that —— Cambyses has cut the cables!"

They rushed aft. The cables were dragging in the brine and through the pitchy darkness and fog the lights of the Cambyses could be dimly seen and her screw heard as she steamed off in the distance.

"The curs!" yelled the captain. "They've mended their engine with our tools and things and now they think they are going to get off without paying a cent of towage! The short-sighted fools! They were never more mistaken in their lives!"

The next morning rose clear and sunny, but the ocean was unspecked by any sign of life as the captain swept the horizon with his glass. The Esperanza, with all steam crowded on, hurried toward its destination, a port which we will call Terrapin.

Four days later Captain Derwent was walking up the street of that city toward the company's office, to make his report to John Percival. He had taken a tug up the harbor, feeling that the Grapnel Company must be very anxious. The Esperanza was five days' overdue.

The captain opened the office door and smilingly saluted a clerk or two who sat there. They only half-bowed to him. The jolly officer wondered at their coolness, but pushed on without delay toward the small inner office of the head of the firm.

John Percival sat there, his massive frame bending over his desk.

"Good morning, Mr. Percival," began Captain Derwent in his loud, cheery tone, "I hurried up the bay a little in advance of the Esperanza, but—"

John Percival tossed his gray head as soon as he heard the captain's voice, and sprang to his feet, glowering at his visitor like an angry lion.

"You scoundrel!" he half reared and half hissed. "Get out of my office, or you'll leave it at the toe of my boot! How dare you show your skulking face in here? You've disgraced my line, sir! disgraced your profession! disgraced us all!"

"But—but—" began the poor captain.

"I tell you, hold your tongue!" yelled John Percival, growing angrier as he proceeded. "Haven't I heard, sir, how you passed the Cambyses in mid ocean? You heard their guns, you saw their signal, and left them to shift for themselves! You're a precious scoundrel, that's what you are, Aleck Derwent! Passing those poor fellows—"

"But—" protested the captain again, now quite as wrathy as his employer.

"Hold your tongue, I tell you!" John Percival went on, calming down not a whit. "The Cambyses got in three hours ago, and I have heard their story. Get out of my office, sir, and never let me set eyes on you again!"

He gave the muscular captain a push which sent him outside the door before he knew what he was about, slammed the door behind him, and bolted it loudly.

Captain Derwent made his way slowly out to the street. He understood the situation perfectly now, and knew that it was only a question of time before the short-sighted officers of the Cambyses should receive their deserts. But that steamer would doubtless leave as soon as she possibly could, and it was desirable to have the matter righted before she got away. Up the harbor, not ten minutes' sail away, was steaming the Esperanza, her flags all afloat and her passengers leaning over the railings.

The captain stood quietly on the dock till she came up, and then he sought the surgeon and mate, and told them of the perfidy of the Cambyses. In a few moments the story was all over the ship. Captain Derwent was very popular, and every one was indignant that John Percival should have accepted the inventions of the Cambyses without giving his own men a chance to present their side. There were eighteen passengers on board of the Esperanza, and they all declared that they "wished they could tell John Percival how the case really stood."

"The office is close by, Captain Derwent," said one of them; "it won't take but a moment. Let us all go with you. John Percival can hardly refuse to accept such overwhelming testimony as that."

"We'd thank you, captain," said the engineer, touching his hat as he appeared, rushing from his work and on fire with the exciting news — "we'd thank you if you would let us all go to Mr. Percival and back you up."

"It can't do any harm, and will clear up the matter quicker than any thing else possibly can," said the mate.

Captain Derwent laughed.

"It certainly would," he assented, and in a hubbub of enthusiasm the strange procession started, leaving the ship in charge of the cook and scullions. It seemed as though all Terrapin came out to stare at the sight as the Esperanza's crew and passengers, vastly amused at themselves, made their way toward John Percival's office. In a state of irresistible good-nature they broke open the door and swarmed every nook and corner of the larger outer room in which a dozen clerks were writing.

One of the passengers, who had been selected as the spokesman, an Italian nobleman of fine character and presence, and personally acquainted with John Percival, approached the still bolted door of the private office. It was opened at his knock.

"I have come, my dear sir," began the nobleman, bowing courteously, "to report to you the admirable fidelity of the commanding officer of the Esperanza."

The choleric old man almost jumped into the air.

"What do you mean, sir? What do you mean?" he cried, sternly.

The mass of interested faces, outside his door just then caught John Percival's eye, and he could not but listen to the true story of the Esperanza's adventure with the Cambyses. In the face of the overwhelming testimony presented there was nothing to do for the doughty old man but to believe it, and to tender a humble apology to Captain Derwent.

The officers of the Cambyses were arrested just as they were getting up steam to depart, and a letter was soon on its way to her owners, which was couched in such terms that it brought a large payment to the Grapnel Line for towage and for assistance rendered. As a portion of this money was divided among the crew of the Esperanza they felt amply repaid for their little trip to the company's office and for the insult offered to their captain, who, it is needless to say, stands higher than ever to-day in the regard of the owners of the Grapnel Line.—Kate Upson Clark, in Youth's Companion.

MARRIED.

HAMILTON—BOYD—At Tecumseh, Wednesday, March 11, by Rev. W. H. Babbitt, Wm. T. Hamilton, of Litchfield, Mich., to Miss Lena Boyd, of Tecumseh.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee.

At a session of the Probate Court, for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Thursday, the 6th day of March in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of Francis Coates, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of John Britton, Jr., surviving executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, alleging among other things that the widow of said deceased has departed this life; that the real estate devised said widow for life, excepting that specifically devised in remainder, has been disposed of in accordance with the terms of said will; that the duties of administration of the estate of said Francis Coates have been fully performed, save distribution and assignment; and that petitioner is ready to render his final administration account. And praying that said account may be allowed; that the funds remaining on hand and the real estate specifically devised, be by the order of this court distributed among and assigned to the parties entitled thereto under said will; that petitioner and the estate of Edwin B. Wood, deceased, be discharged from the administration of said trust; and for such other order and decree as to this court shall seem meet and just.

It is ordered that Tuesday, the 8th day of April next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the Heirs at Law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Prime sugar weather.

Geo. D. Arner went to Adrian Wednesday on business.

Mrs. Vina Winship, of Adrian, was at her parents' over Sunday.

Rev. J. A. Lowry made a business trip to Detroit last week Thursday.

Mrs. Ed. Freer, of Mason, is visiting her sister, Mrs. F. E. Pocklington, at present.

Eva Pocklington returned from a week's visit with friends at Detroit Saturday.

Rev. W. J. Clack, of Plymouth, visited his son Wm. Clack, the fore part of the week.

Wm. Beevers has rented the Mrs. Mary Arner property and will move in a few weeks.

Misses Anna and Edith Smith, of Macon, spent last week with their sister, Mrs. Ed. Harrison.

Mrs. G. P. Waring and daughter Ruth went to Augusta Friday to visit Agent Geo. Arher a few days.

A letter received from our friend, D. W. Smith, reports everything encouraging at Cleary's College at Ypsilanti.

Dispatcher Frank Allen and family, of Toledo, were visiting their parents in the village several days last week.

There was a large attendance at the donation held at the church here last week. The receipts amounted to $103.

T. S. VanDuser, of Detroit, Covert Miller, of Ionia, and Fred Miller, of Dundee, are home on a visit at present.

Mrs. David Boyd moved into the house formerly owned by Geo. Boss, on North street, the fore part of the week.

G. P. Waring is loading two cars with potatoes, destined for Pittsford, Pa. The potatoes are his own raising of last year.

E. W. Rappleye, W. P. Cadmus, Francis Wiggins and T. H. Temple are at Devil's Lake on a fishing expedition the present week.

The Library Circle will prepare a program for a public entertainment to be given in four weeks. Full particulars and program given in due time.

There was a good attendance at the Library circle Tuesday evening and a very pleasing program furnished. Miss Emma Bailey furnished a violin selection that was excellent.

There were upwards of a score of our citizens who attended the donation at Britton Friday evening. The Mackinaw Railroad ran special for their accommodation. It was a hand car.

Several orange groves are reported on North street. Just how soon the blossoms will be seen is a mystery With the experience that some of the gardeners have, we think it won't be out of season very long before the gardener and his vineyard are one.

There was a very good attendance at the school house Friday afternoon to hear the discussion of the question, Resolved—That the farmers as a class are competent legislators. Those taking part furnished some very good argument on both sides, but the negative seemed to be victorious in the discussion.

Clayton Smith, son of Chas. Smith, died Saturday night, after a week's sickness, of diptheria. He was a young man of good habits and thought a great deal of by all who knew him. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have the sympathy of all their friends and neighbors in their sad bereavement. The funeral services were held at the house on Monday morning and the remains laid at rest in the family lot in the village cemetery.

The orange blossoms we mentioned last week have matured. The contracting parties were W. E. Allen and Miss Fannie Hiscock. The happy couple were united in marriage on Wednesday morning of last week at the home of the bride, by Rev. J. A. Lowry. They went to Toledo on the morning train and made his brother Frank Allen and family a visit of a few days. Weare told that they will begin keeping house in a few days at Rea, where he has a situation as agent. We extend our congratulations and best wishes for their success through life. Mr. Allen was raised here and is a young man of excellent qualities. Miss Hiscock isn't as well known but bears the appearance of a fine young lady.

The Spring Medicine.

The popularity which Hood's Sarsaparilla has gained as a spring medicine is wonderful. It possesses just those elements of health-given, blood-purifying and appetite restoring which everybody seems to need at this season. Do not continue in a dull, tired, unsatisfactory condition when you may be so much benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood and makes the weak strong.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

James Eddy has been calling on old acquaintances this week.

Misses Sadie and Bertha Taylor returned home from Indiana last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Billington and children and Mrs. E. Simmons intend to start for Franklin on the 24th.

Wm. Wisner and family intend starting for McPherson, Neb., this week. Mr. W. takes out a car load of goods.

A letter from Mr. Martin Whelan states their intention of leaving Florida en route for their home about April 1st.

Mrs. E. Wilson closes her school at the Center next Thursday; the school at the brick, Miss Ella Welch teacher, closes the same day.

Miss Hattie Wisner of Athens, who made one of a party that went from that place to Franklin Parish, La., last fall writes Mrs. Ed. Wisner of Franklin, that her health is much improved. She was affected with a serious throat trouble which has nearly disappeared.

Henry Allen spent a week with Uncle Lambert Allen of Litchfield and found him in good health, but a letter received from his daughter, Mrs. Dobson, last Friday states that he has had an attack of la grippe from which it is thought he cannot recover. He is a younger brother of D. P. Allen and is the only living member of the family.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

F. G. Florence went to Detroit last Monday.

Mrs. Munch and daughter, Sundayed at Seneca.

John Wright has been quite poorly for several days.

Jacob Wright is moving his possessions to his new home east of here.

There will be preaching at the F. M. church every evening this week.

Orange Blossoms are reported on one of the extremes of the C. T. Line.

Wm. Wickwire and wife of Hudson, are visiting relatives here this week.

Bertha and Blanche Macham spent part of their vacation at Tecumseh and Clinton.

Owing to the rain and bad roads last Tuesday evening the lecture was postponed a week.

Mr. William Edmonson died at his residence in Raisin on Sunday morning, March 16th.

Three loads hogs, one load baled hay and four loads of logs have been shipped from here the past week.

Mr. Fred Kopke, J. G. Billmeyer and Mrs. J. H. Billmeyer, are all on the sick list this week. Miss Katie Spellman has had a relapse.

TIPTON TOPICS.

News scarce, and mud plenty.

Ethan Allen, now living near Sand Lake, suffered a stroke of paralysis last Saturday.

Mr. Crittenden, father of Bert and Willard Crittenden, had a stroke of paralysis last week.

C. H. Bramble, president of our Patron Association, will now have additional fees to pay since the arrival of a boy at his home.

The new sidewalks are down and they are quite an improvement to our little city. All that is needed now is the extension of these to the depot.

SIOUX RESERVATION NOW OPEN.

The fertile lands in the Great Sioux Indian Reservation, west of the Missouri river, are now opened for settlement. The President's proclamation was issued on February 10th, 1890. The natural gateway to the Southern part of the reservation is via Chamberlain, South Dakota, the present western terminus of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway. From that point to the lands beyond, homeseekers must proceed by team. All necessary outfits can be secured at reasonable prices at Chamberlain.

For the convenience of persons who may desire to inspect the new country first-class reduced rate excursion tickets, to Chamberlain and return, will be sold from Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, good to return until October 31st, 1890.

For maps and circulars, containing general and detailed information, please apply to the nearest ticket agent, or address A. V. H. Carpenter, General Passenger Agent, Milwaukee, Wis. Harry Mercer, Mich. Pass. Agt. Chi. Mil. & St. R. Ry., 90 Griswould St., Detroit, Mich.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Mrs. F. Stimpson (R. R.) writes that the two-hour amateur play (I forget the title) last Wednesday evening at the Hammond school house in Saline will be repeated this week Friday evening to accommodate those who could not get in before, for the crowd.

The new telegraph annex beats a circus "all holler." The operators followed the Professor when putting in the instruments like boys following the elephant in a street parade, and when steam was turned on—Oh my! what a racket! Before a message got under way it was met by a dozen others with, Come off! go away! quit fooling! go west!—with little swear words mixed in. The operator where the old and new lines hook together had to stand at the ground wire, with a peg in each hand to prevent side-tracking messages on the old line. "Things got hot" so that a meeting was called to adjust matters. In the mean time a "jam" had accumulated in the center of the line, so that the tail end barely wiggled, while the head was strong and vicious. The meeting arranged a list of 49 calls (with others to hear from), and discussed the "modus operandi" of sending and receiving messages, with rights of way etc. At this writing the patient is resting quietly awaiting the Professor's diagnosis.

On Thursday, Feb. 20th, at the residence of Mr. John Wonderly, a large company assembled to witness the marriage of Mr. Henry Wonderly and Miss Augusta Buelke. The ceremony was performed at two o'clock in the afternoon by Rev. Mr. Kruger and a very happy afternoon was enjoyed by all present. Below is a full list of the wedding gifts.

DEVILS LAKE DOINGS.

Miss Josiphene Pierson is improving slowly.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Spear went to Jackson to visit friends Monday.

Wedding bells ring quite frequently in this place lately. The last to get married is Miss Eliza Elsworth.

The Bently combination show held two performances at Brazee's hotel on Saturday and Monday nights. Everybody around attended both nights, except ye correspondent; it was impossible for him to get a dime with which to buy a ticket.

While A. Bedell and F. Wood were on the way to Jackson with a load of pork last Saturday, they passed a buggy containing an old gentleman and two ladies, near the railroad about two miles from town. They had only got a short distance past, when looking around saw a train run into the rig the old man was driving, killing all three of the people and injuring the horse so badly that he was shot.

LANDS THAT NEED UNDERDRAINING.

It is often a difficult question with those who have only a knowledge of the benefits of underdrainage, to determine what lands need to be underdrained, or that will be benefited to an extent so as to pay a handsome return for the money and labor expended in the work of drainage.

There are areas of land that would be better if underdrained—would grow better crops—but not enough better to pay the expense and a profit besides. In other words the land is not worth draining—lands that are not possessed of the necessary elements of fertility to justify the expense.

Mr. John H. Klippart in his work treating upon this subject says:

"Where the surface is depressed, and water is received from the surrounding lands, the necessity for drainage of some kind is obvious enough. This may be effected by open ditches; and these, perhaps, are the most economical, where the quantity of water to be disposed of is very great. But where ditches would be inconvenient, or gradually fill in by frost or the treading of cattle, or prove an eye-sore, underdraining may be substituted, and if properly done, with the effect of converting a low place or swamp into a garden, while a single open ditch up the center, which is the usual course, would have left the ground wet and cold; for if the water, in its descent from the higher ground, be but arrested at the edge of the low lands, and ditches or drains, it is compelled to traverse the low land to the center ditch, and does its mischief before it can escape. Wet and swampy lands, when thoroughly drained, are found to be among the most productive, and hence their improvement by drainage is most marked and satisfactory.

"At the foot of hills, ridges and highlands, the water is often found even in a dry time, oozing out, not perhaps at a single point, or in sufficient quantity to make a useful spring, but enough to make the land for rods or acres around, wet and cold, and worthless. In such situations a single drain, in the right place, is often sufficient to put an end to the mischief and change worthless into fertile land. But what is oftentimes, and in many places, still a greater benefit, the water which before evaporated injudiously on the surface is collected by the drain, and made available at a convenient point for stock purposes, forming an artificial spring as durable and often more useful than those formed naturally. On farms as poorly supplied with stock water as many in Ohio, the drainage and improvement of all springy places should be effected without delay.

"Sandy soils, as every one must have observed, are not always warm and dry. There is sometimes found at the foot, or it may be of two or three feet below the surface, a layer of impervious clay, through which no water can pass, but on top of which it must flow, if there be an inclination in any direction, with the effect of keeping the surface constantly damp and cold. In all parts of the state such lands may be found; they appear mellow and rich, but are always cold and weedy, and produce no valuable crop. They are much more easily and cheaply underdrained than clayey lands, because a different system may be pursued; and when drained, they soon lose all their disagreeable and unproductive qualities.

"Clayey soils transmit water downward, but slowly; and consequently, in a wet time, the surface soon becomes perfectly saturated with moisture. It is too wet for crops, too wet to till, too wet to bear the tread of animals; in short it is too wet for anything. In drying, it sets hard, and becomes more unmanageable than ever; the roots of grasses or other plants can not penetrate to any considerable depth, and clayey lands are therefore the first to suffer from excessive drought, as well as from excessive moisture; there is scarcely a season that exactly suits them, and only a limited portion of the best of seasons that they can be comfortably worked. When such lands are thoroughly drained, and at sufficient depth, the surface never becomes saturated with moisture; and in drying it never sets hard. A deeper tillage becomes possible, and is indeed required to secure the full benefits of the drainage. With the deeper tillage, the roots of plants enter the soil to a greater depth, and suffer less from drought. Clayey lands, when drained, can be worked at almost any time; they become friable in texture, cost less in their cultivation, are suited to almost any crop, and retain their fertility longer than lands of almost any other description."

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAR. 20.

Those "free trade" petitions from New England are giving the McKinley high tariff ring in Congress a good deal of trouble.

The weather of the last two weeks proves conclusively what Michigan can do in that direction when she settles down to business.

After the looters have made way with the entire surplus in the treasury, the administration will probably take measures then to have the stable doors locked.

The recent municipal elections in Iowa resulted almost without exception in large Democratic gains. The political revolution in that state has evidently come to stay.

And now Tennessee falls into line and adopts the Australian ballot system. One by one the States are wheeling around upon the reform of this much needed reform.

Chicago is buckling right to work in the World's Fair business. That the Fair will be held, and held in Chicago there is no reasonable doubt, but it may be postponed until 1893.

Senator Blair threatens to leave the Republican party if Congress fails to pass his educational bill. The Democrats are becoming quite nervous for fear he may seek admission into their ranks.

Those who oppose the Australian ballot might be reconciled to the Jersey joker. Down in that state, with their new patent ballot boxes, a man can vote a dozen tickets at once, in cases of emergency.

In case New York takes the fair off Chicago's hands, says the New York Herald, "it won't be an exposition of pumpkins and prize oxen." The pumpkin-and-oxen crowd have made old Gotham hustle, and are still in the country. They mean business, too.

Twenty thousand boomers rushed into the Cherokee strip within the space of twenty-four hours last week and staked out their claims. They have taken possession prematurely and illegally, but how can the government dislodge them? It may lead to serious complications.

The Philadelphia Record says: The tariff reform fever is spreading in the west with a rapidity that alarms the protectionist doctors. They can find no remedy for the ailment; and this is one of the chiefest reasons for packing the senate of the United States in the interest of monopoly.

Both parties have solemnly pledged themselves for the past three terms to reduce war taxation. The Democrats made the effort during Cleveland's administration but were defeated by a Republican Senate. But under the present policy the question will soon be: How can a deficit be prevented?

The Mills bill of 1888 proposed to put jute upon the free list, but Iowa voted a great majority against Mills and all his works. The whirligig of time brings in its revenges. Iowa, maddened by the extortions of the twine trust, is now unanimously demanding that jute be placed upon the free list. Iowa's hindsight is ever so much more discerning than its foresight.

A prophet is not without honor save in his own country. The London Times speaking of Chicago's victory over New York says: "It will be the text of many essays on the decay of New England and the eastern states in general," and in speaking of Chicago herself: "Only one thing is assured—their achievements will surpass all expectations, and already we hear they are hard at work justifying the choice."

The true remedy, the only remedy for the farmer, is not to seek other people's money to carry on unprofitable business, but to do all he can to make the conditions favorable for profit in his business. The first and most direct step is by his vote to aid in the repeal of the tariff taxes by which he, who must sell in the cheapest market in competition with the world, is forced to buy in the dearest market from men who are protected by law from any competition except from each other.—New York Times.

GERRYMANDERING.

The recent action of the Ohio legislature in changing the boundaries of the Congressional districts of that state, has caused a great deal of comment and some harsh criticism from the Republican press. "Gerrymandering" as it is called in political parlance has been reduced to an exact science in these days. It means, in plain terms, the fixing of the boundary lines of legislative or Congressional districts in such a manner as to give the dominant party more than their just numerical representation. Neither party is blameless in this respect. Both of them have frequently resorted to this expedient to increase their strength beyond what a fair count of the votes equitably distributed would give them. But it is somewhat amusing to witness the "holy horror" with which some Republican organs view the action of the Ohio legislature. The Republican party owes its control to-day of both the U. S. Senate and House to successful gerrymanders in the Northern States. Below we present a few statistics on this point, which are very suggestive reading.

* * *

In the State of Ohio at the last election the two parties were almost equally divided, the Democrats having a plurality of only 10,000 on the average vote, in a total pole of nearly 800,000. The state elects 21 Congressmen. If these were fairly divided between the parties the Democrats would chose eleven and the Republicans ten; whereas in fact the Republicans have sixteen members in the present House and the Democrats only five. The recent action of the Ohio legislature was taken to rectify this glaring wrong. In the next Congress, the representation from Ohio will be distributed equitably between the parties.

* * *

Mr. D. E. Williams of Columbus Ohio has compiled a table from the election returns of 1888, which shows with what neatness and dispatch the Republicans have "suppressed" a large proportion of the Democratic vote in fourteen northern States, and thus actually cheated the Democracy out of their honest majority in the present house.

In the congressional election of 1888 the following northern states cast votes for candidates for representatives of the two great political parties as follows:

State.	Republican vote.	Democratic vote.
Connecticut	74 582	74.920
California	124,816	117,729
Iowa	211,598	179,887
Illinois	370 478	348 278
Michigan	236,370	213,459
Minnesota	142,492	104,385
Massachusetts	183,892	151 855
Nebraska	108,425	80,552
New York	648,759	635,757
New Jersey	144,344	151,493
Ohio	416,054	396,455
Pennsylvania	526,091	446,633
Rhode Island	21,968	17,530
Wisconsin	176,533	155,232
Totals	3,386,399	3,074,165

* * *

The 3,386,399 republican votes elected 126 members of the Lower House, being an average of about 26,900 votes to each member. The 3,074,165 democratic votes elected only 47 members, an average of 65,400 votes to each Congressman. In these 14 states the Republicans have a member of Congress for every 26,900 votes furnished by them at the polls; while the Democrats are compelled to furnish 65,400 votes for each member on their side of the House. These states send to Congess 173 members in all. If they were divided on a numerical basis, the Democrats would have 85 members, or 38 more than at present. The Republicans would have 88 members, or 38 less than now. Divided on this basis would give the Democrats a net increase of twice 38 votes, or 76 votes, which would give them a clear majority of over 60 in the present House.

* * *

Take a few individual examples. In Michigan 213,000 Democrats chose two Congressman while 236,000 Republicans elect nine. In Illinois, although the total vote shows only about two per cent Republican majority, that party takes fourteen out of twenty Congressmen. In Iowa 180,000 Democrats are represented by one member; while 200,000 Republicans have ten members. In Minnesota 142,000 Republicans entirely suppressed 104,000 Democrats and took the whole congressional delegation. In Massachusetts 151,000 Democratic voters are represented by two members and 183,000 Republicans have ten members. The same process of gerrymandering in Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Rhode Island has suppressed a good slice of the Democratic vote in those states. In New York, altho' the Republicans are in a minority on the total vote, and although the Democrats generally carry the state ticket, yet the interior districts are so gerrymandered that the Republicans have a majority of four in the delegation.

* * *

In the light of these figures, which have been carefully compiled and can not be disputed, the outcry of the Republican press over the awful Democratic gerrymander in Ohio, is decidedly amusing, to say the least.

FRANCE'S SORE FINGERS.

BURNT BY TOO MUCH FOOLING WITH SUBSIDIES.

How They Worked—Enormous Bounties Which Resulted in Discouragingly Small Returns—An Artificial Stimulus Which Unfortunately Failed to Stimulate.

The oddest freak in the statesmanship of the time is the proposal of the high protectionists in congress to revive American shipping by means of subsidies at the same time that they continue to discourage foreign trade by means of the massive tariff wall, and pass McKinley customs bills, which treat importers as if they were enemies of the country.

If the thing they are attempting could be done at all, it would not perhaps be an unwise measure to pay millions in order to put life into our ocean commerce. The subsidy idea presents many attractions when looked at merely as a theory: but it always looks much less attractive after it has been tried.

It behooves us to be students of markets rather than of maxims, and to take the practical view gained by actual experience of our own or of others. It will be well to consider the result of the most recent and most gigantic subsidy experiment of the ten years just past.

That experiment was made by France, and France burnt her fingers.

In 1881 the French became alarmed at the decay of their shipping interests. During the previous ten years they had seen the number of new ships built in France, or bought abroad and entered as French vessels, fall off nearly one-half. They had seen their total tonnage fall off more than one hundred and fifty thousand tons in ten years. They had seen in 1879 that only 28 per cent. of the tonnage of vessels entering and leaving French ports were sailed under the three colored flag that every Frenchman loves.

All this was most humiliating. It wounded the national pride. Something must be done—if our citizens will not buy or make ships and pay the bills out of their own pockets, why we must reach deep down into the national pocket and help them to foot their bills. Perhaps, too, some of the wise men of France made use of a ready made, cheap argument that we hear from some of our so called wise men: The money will be kept in the country when we pay it to our own beloved Frenchmen, and so who is hurt? We take it in taxes and pay it to the shipmakers and shipowners, they pay it to their workmen, the workmen pay it to the butchers and grocers and other tradesmen. And so we keep the money all the time swinging round the circle, nobody hurt, and France has her fine new ships plowing all seas and enriching her people with the goods of every clime.

It was a pleasant vision, and appealed most temptingly to the bright Gallic imagination. And so the lawmakers "got together" and passed a law which should send the flag of la belle France into the harbors of all lands.

A law was passed giving bounties not only for the building but also for the sailing of vessels. All wooden ships of less than 200 tons should receive $2 a ton when built. Those above 200 tons should have $4. As iron ships are much more efficient in the contest for supremacy on the high seas these should have $12 a ton, and a further bounty of $1.20 should be paid on the machinery put into these ships; and the government must help also to pay for the renewal of boilers as they are used up—about eighty cents on every hundredweight.

So much, then, for the building. But these ships may not sail as much or on so long voyages as they ought.

Very well; then we will pay them for sailing, too. For every voyage to foreign countries we will pay our fine new ships thirty cents a ton for every 1,000 miles sailed during the first year, and after that one cent less per ton every year.

Now it does look as if the thing ought to go. We have buoyed up our ship on all sides with subsidies—she certainly will float.

Well, float she did—for a while.

Now let us look at a few figures to see how she kept on floating. In 1881 things had reached their lowest ebb; France had vessels with a total tonnage of 914,373. The next year our beautiful subsidy scheme begins to tell—there is a gain of 68,644 tons, and the government cheerfully puts its hand into its pockets and pays down $2,199,900. In 1883 another gain of 20,662 tons. That did not show up so well as was hoped. However, as the ships constructed last year have made some easy voyages, we are having navigation at least, and so government pays down this time $2,334,000.

Next year government begins to smile again; we have added 30,150 tons more to our tonnage, and there have been longer voyages than ever. Government looks more cheerful, and relieves the treasury of $2,614,000. A big sum this time, but we have added ships and have made long cruises, and we can afford to pay for such good things.

The year 1885 ends, and government calculates—tonnage this year, 33,614 less than last year. How is that? Have we not built 16,000 tons ourselves this year and bought 9,681 tons from abroad?

True; but French ships have now become too numerous. The old owners, who were making money before the day of subsidies, now complain that they cannot get cargoes, and so can declare no dividends. Hence some of these ships without subsidies must be sold, driven to the wall by subsidy fed ships, which can afford to carry freight more cheaply.

The next year the tonnage falls off 7,000 and the year following 20,000, government meanwhile paying an average subsidy of $2,000,000, for there are still long voyages, and ships are still being built and bought to gain subsidies. Our old ships are leaving us in still greater numbers in this year 1887. This year we bought and made 30,000 tons, and yet the total tonnage is 20,000 less than last year. That means that 50,000 tons have left us in a single year. And in this year 1887 our tonnage is actually less than it was in 1882. And government has paid $11,850,000 in subsidies in six years.

The French had not learned what every farmer knows, that if he doubled the number of his wagons that does not double the capacity of his barns or the number and fertility of his acres.

The tariff of France prevented any great growth of her import trade, and she was not able to sell as greatly increased quantity of her own goods unless she would take foreign goods in payment. Her ships could not create commerce, but commerce does create ships everywhere and always. Wherever there are wares to be transported ships are sure to come sooner or later, and with no long waiting, either.

A recent French writer sums up the result of this experiment of his countrymen by confessing that it had aggravated the situation, and had proved itself to be a source of mischief, not of cure.

Shipping cannot thrive where tariffs block the way.

Great Profits of the Sugar Trust.

It has been recently stated that the profits of the great sugar trust are equal to from 30 to 40 per cent. on the capital actually invested. The appraised valuation of the different concerns on entering the trust was about $15,000,000. In giving out certificates of capital to the members of the combination the capital was raised to three times that amount.

The motive of this is plain. The enormous profits of the trust, if reckoned on a capital of $50,000,000, appear less exorbitant than if reckoned on the actual capital and attract less attention and hostility from the public.

Meanwhile the head of the trust, Theodore F. Havemeyer, defends himself very logically by the principles of the protectionists in the following style: "The great cry of one of the great parties is for protection; that is, they cry for it loudly during campaigns. But when we proceed to give ourselves some protection a howl is raised. They demand protection for the industries. When an industry protects itself it is said that it is illegal."

The sugar trust is a very shrewd and daring "infant industry;" it seizes the thunder of the protectionist Jove and uses it for its own ends. The trust is thoroughly logical. If it is a good thing to have the products of American mills and factories increased in price to the consumer above their normal value, why may not different branches of industry form trusts to raise prices and thus protect themselves? They will realize larger returns on their capital, and that means protection to the American laborer; for it is one of the beautiful dogmas of our protectionist teachers that the more money the employer makes the higher the wages of the laborer will be.

Good protectionists ought really to applaud Mr. Havemeyer and his associates in the trust, and ought to hold them up to the admiration of the people.

And the consumer ought not to complain. If protection is to raise prices to him at all, it really matters very little whether it come through congressional enactment or whether it be the result of private combination.

Consumers ought to be more considerate, and not to denounce Mr. Havemeyer as an "all round villain."

We should remember that a trust is "purely a private affair," with which the government has nothing to do.

Meanwhile the sugar trust is firmly holding its ground behind a wall of 85 per cent. average ad valorem duties; and the reduction on raw sugar without any reduction on refined sugar—as is reported to be the plan of Mr. McKinley's committee, provided he can get the consent of the Kansas representatives for any reduction at all—will only serve to strengthen the defenses of the sugar trust.

There is one practical way to turn the position of the trust; and common sense people cannot see why that should not be adopted. Mr. McKinley himself said to an Ohio audience during the campaign in that state last fall: "Whenever this free competition is evaded or avoided by combinations of individuals or corporations, the duty should be reduced and foreign competition promptly invited."

So, after all the wild and windy declamation of Republican stump speakers in election times, their ablest leaders do believe that the tariff raises the price of goods to the consumer. If the tariff does not raise prices, then Mr. McKinley's fine sentence would lose its point, for it would be a foolish procedure to strike at the sugar trust by the removal of duties if these duties do not keep the prices up.

We are now collecting $50,000,000 a year in duties on sugar—the poor bearing a relatively much higher proportion of the burden than the rich—and until the present Republican congress assembled everybody supposed that the government had no need for this enormous sum. Now, however, it seems that congress is making away with the surplus in such a record breaking style, and is carrying out so fully the late Corporal Tanner's exclamation, "To hell with the surplus!" that instead of a surplus we are to have a deficit, and that there is more method than madness in Mr. McKinley's drag net process for finding new subjects of taxation.

From present appearances the sugar trust has nothing to fear.

Since congress assembled in December three bills against trusts have been introduced in the senate and fifteen in the house. The most important of these is the bill of Senator Sherman. The senator was quoted some time ago as saying that the tariff protection should be withdrawn in cases where trusts or combinations are formed to limit production, but his bill does not embrace that very wise feature. Why does he not hit the trusts at their most vital spot?

The condition of the woolen manufacturing industry of Philadelphia is reported to be alarming. Over 800 weavers are idle; two large mills, employing together 1,500 hands, have shut down; and another large establishment, which has been running night and day for several years, is now on half time.

WHAT IS

SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofulous sore neck from the time she was 22 months old till she became six years of age. Lumps formed in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she seems to be a healthy child." J. S. CARLILE. Nauright, N. J.

"I was caught in a python's folds and saw fierce eyes glaring down into mine. If that tremendous coil were tightened around me, I knew that I might as once check my luggage for the undiscovered bourne. In this crisis of my fate I saw the great python's tail in close proximity to his mouth. I grasped the snake's tail and pushed a yard or two down his yawning jaws. Serpents seldom bite their prey; they lubricate it and suck it down. With such a long and cold-blooded creature I calculated that it would take over a half a minute before the sensations of his tail could be conveyed to his head and render him aware that he was committing suicide."

TAULBEE'S SLAYER.

Correspondent Kincaid Still Subject to Prostration.

CORRESPONDENT KINCAID.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The grand jury was not in session and no further action was taken in the case of Charles E. Kincaid, charged with the killing of ex-Representative Taulbee. It is understood, however, that a presentment has been found on which the District Attorney will prepare the indictment, and that it will be passed on by the grand jury early in the week. Judge Kincaid was looking fairly well and in apparent good spirits today, but last night suffered from an attack of nervous prostration. The frequency of these attacks begins to tell on his general health, and his appearance and actions, and cause some apprehension to his friends. It is more than likely that if the indictment is not presented early in the week and some arrangement is not made for his enlargement on bail that efforts will be made for having him placed in a hospital under police surveillance.

Kincaid Better.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Reports from Kincaid indicate he is better and reports of his serious illness or inability to leave his bed are greatly exaggerated.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

HOUSE COMMITTEE TRYING TO AGREE ON A BILL.

The Place, Time and Funds Form Questions That Call Forth Much Discussion in the Committee—What Will Be Required of Chicago.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—There was a lively meeting of the world's fair committee of the House, and the discussion was spirited. The committee met at 1 o'clock, with Chairman Candler and six of the eight members of the committee present.

Mr. Candler presented the bill prepared by the sub-committee, and the first section caused a controversy. This section provides that the fair shall be inaugurated at Chicago in 1892. Mr. Hatch thought that this section was hardly definite enough, as it did not provide when the fair shall be held. He moved to strike out the word "inaugurate" and insert the word "held," taking the ground that while the fair might be inaugurated in 1892, it might not be ready for the public until the next year. The Illinois representatives of the committee, Messrs. Hitt and Springer, said that section 8 settled Mr. Hatch's objections, and they succeeded in having the motion voted down. The second, third and fourth sections were agreed to, and the fifth section, which outlines the financial scheme on which the Fair shall be conducted, met with determined opposition. The section provides that the National Commissioners shall be satisfied with the local corporation, under which the money is to be raised, has a bona fide capital stock of $5,000,000, and that $500,000 of this amount shall be paid in, and that the further sum of $5,000,000 shall be guaranteed in case of necessity of its use.

Mr. Beldon led the opposition. He offered a resolution declaring that it was inexpedient to adopt the bill until Chicago had furnished a site and $10,000,000 sufficient to guarantee it. Messrs. Hitt, Candler, Springer and Howden favored the retention of the original section. It was contended that the Chicago people were willing to do, and had agreed to do, all that was reasonable in connection with the financial plan, but they did not propose to be blindfolded, it was claimed, and wanted some definite plan settled on before the fair was opened. After considerable discussion Mr. Beldon modified his resolution so that it read as follows: "That when a guarantee fund of $10,000,000 shall be secured by the citizens of Chicago, the sufficiency and legality of which shall be satisfactory to this committee, that we report the pending bill with such amendments as the committee may agree upon." Messrs. Hitt and Springer claimed that the Chicago people had already given ample security and that the resolution and other measures were simply put forward to delay matters and to hurt Chicago's chances.

Mr. Candler presented a statement of Mr. Gage, of the local board of promotion, to show that $5,000,000 had already been subscribed. More opposition followed from the New York people and at 4 o'clock no conclusion on the section was reached and it was decided to adjourn until Monday morning.

FREE MEN.

Ives and Stayner to Be Given Their Liberty Early Next Week.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Assignee William Nelson Cromwell confirms the announcement that the affairs of Ives and Stayner have been compromised. He stated that debts which amounted to about $18,000,000 at the time of the failure, has been reduced by the payment of $8,000,000. This has been realized from the sale of collateral and the disposal of assets, and secured creditors had not been paid. On the remaining $10,000,000, most of which was unsecured and held by big railroad companies, who also held secured claims, a compromise having been effected. Efforts are being made to secure the requisite bail, and Ives and Stayner will probably be free men early in the week.

Ives Still in Jail.

NEW YORK, March 17.—H. S. Ives and G. H. Stayner have furnished the required bail and Stayner was released, but owing to the absence of an official in the district attorney's office Ives failed to get the necessary papers signed and will have to remain in jail until Monday.

A New York Fire.

NEW YORK, March 17.—The building No. 36 Cedar street, was partially burned last night. Loss $80,000, of which $10,000 is on the building, $20,000 on the stock of Hosford & Sons, stationers, and $50,000 on the stock of James Kempster & Co., printers. All are fully insured. During the fire two explosions of benzine occurred. Several firemen were thrown down, but none seriously injured.

ITS ILL-GOTTEN GAINS.

The Louisiana Lottery Company Offers to the State.

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—The following correspondence explains itself;

NEW ORLEANS, March 15, 1890.

To his excellency, Francis Nicholls, governor of the state of Louisiana:

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Louisiana Lottery company held at their offices this day it was resolved that the president of the company be directed to forward to you the sum of $100,000 to be used in your discretion to protect the people of Louisiana against the inundation now apparently so imminent, in consequence of the threatening condition of the river. Participating, as they do in anxiety which your excellency must feel at this critical moment, the directors and members of this corporation feel confident that the money which they thus place in your hands will be promptly and sufficiently applied to the purpose for which it is intended. Accordance with the resolution, I therefore enclose the company's check for $100,000.

Very respectfully,
M. A. DAUPHIN,
President Louisiana Lottery Company.

Governor Nichols replied as follows: "I have received your communication of this date enclosing the check of the Louisiana Lottery company for $100,000 for levee purposes. On the eve of a session of the legislature during which the renewal or extension of your charter will be acted upon by a question vitally effecting the interests of this state—I have no right to place the people under obligation to your company in however small a degree by my acceptance of a gratuity from it. I herewith return you the check.

Very respectfully,
FRANCIS NICHOLLS, Governor.

BIRCHELL, THE MURDERER, LOST IN THE TOILS.

He is Identified Again and Again by Reliable Parties and His Guilt is Beyond a Possible Doubt.

WOODSTOCK, ONT., March 17.—So rigidly have the jail rules been enforced that not a single individual, with the exception of accepted witnesses, has been permitted to even look through the cell gates at Birchell since his incarceration in the jail here. The sheriff has granted his request to have his meals brought to him from an outside source. Detective Murray brought four more witnesses to the jail today to identify the prisoner. They were Miss Alice Smith, Miss Swaysee, Miss Cromwell and J. H. Jones, all of whom are supposed to have seen the prisoner at Eastwood on the afternoon of February 17.

Detective Murray had his party visit each prisoner, his object being to allow the witnesses to identify the prisoner without assistance. When they came to the corridor leading into the prisoners cells, Jones, who is assistant agent at Eastwood, remarked: "That's the man," pointing to Birchell, who was at the other end of the corridor. Jones had only seen Birchell at Eastwood while the latter was waiting for a train, but he identified him the moment he saw him in the corridor. When Birchell saw Miss Smith he bowed politely in response to a "How do you do," but said nothing. Miss Smith at once identified him at once as "Lord Somerset."

Agent Jones said to a reporter this afternoon that he knew the prisoner the whole length of the corridor and could not possibly be mistaken.

Alex. Logan, of Princeton, stated that he left Princeton about 10 o'clock in the morning of the 17th of February for Woodstock, concluded his business and left for home about 1:30 in the afternoon; met Birchell alone about one mile west of the swamp where Benwell's body was found. He had his pants turned up, his boots were muddy and he was wearing the fur cap referred to by other witnesses. Logan recalls the fact that Birchell was walking fast and that he never looked up as he walked past. Logan saw Birchell at the jail to-day in company with Murray and fully identified him and the fur cap.

Miss Fallon, when put on the witness stand, will testify that she not only saw the men whom she recognized as Birchell and his friend Benwell on the road to the swamp, but also that she saw Birchell returning alone shortly afterward.

LYNCHED.

A Nebraska Farmer Shoots a Storekeeper and is Strung Up.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., March 17.—A special to the Tribune from Hastings, Neb., says A farmer named Amos Stanton, living near Bromfield, in Hamilton county, shot and instantly killed W. W. Lewis in his store in that place in the afternoon and was lynched in thirty minutes after committing the crime. Lewis was sitting in his store when Stanton entered and began firing. Lewis attempted to run, but was hit in the back and dropped dead. Stanton was jailed, but a mob of ten men wearing masks marched to the jail, and putting a rope around Stanton's neck, dragged him to a livery stable and hung him to a rafter.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates it cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

SOME FACTS ABOUT NEBRASKA.

ED. HERALD:—Some time ago I received a letter from a young niece in which occurred the following passage: "Now, auntie, I know you are very busy, but would you please answer my questions that I wish to ask you about Nebraska?" As I sat down to pen to her my reply I wondered if there were any other young people to whom it would be of interest, and I thought I would let ye editor decide. The questions are as follows:

1st. "What is the climate in which you live? What the weather in winter?

The climate in Seward county, where we resided, does not differ materially from ours, except that it is, or was,—for the stirring of the soil and growth of trees and crops seems to have increased the rain and snow fall, —very much dryer. Spring opens up earlier than here. The winters are as varied as our own; sometimes severely cold. Snow seldom lies long on the ground, nor is there usually much of it, and what there is is heaped in drifts. In an "open" winter the weather is perfectly delightful; very little rain falls and the roads are superb. Such a one was the winter of '75-'76. It was like one glorious Indian summer throughout; doors and windows open most of the time. In sharp contrast to this I remember a lovely Sabbath morning in '72, when all nature seemed at peace, and not a cloud apparently visible when we sat down to our morning meal. Judge of our astonishment when we arose to find a howling blizzard outside, snow falling, and also the mercury, very rapidly.

2d. "What is the timber there and is there much?"

Cottonwood, box elder (properly ash-leaved maple), black walnut, ash, soft maple, oak, and some beech, I think, and there are lots of wild plum brush of several varieties bearing delicious fruit. Originally only a thin fringe of trees along the streams.

3rd. "The place where you lived; is it hilly?"

Gently rolling; along the rivers and creeks it is cut up with many "draws" and the country is often a little rough. The impression is not so much one of hills as hollows. You are wondering how there can be hollowe without hills? You are going, we will say, across a level plain; you come to a "draw" or ravine, deep or shallow according to its distance from the river; you look across it to the level beyond. There are swells and low elevations and a chain of hills runs parallel with the Platte River, but away from the large rivers hills are rare.

4th. "Is the land fertile, and is it clay, sand, or what

Very fertile. In most parts, at least where I have been, it consists of a black, sandy loam.

5th. "Does the wind blow there?"

"Well, I should smile!" Yes, the wind does blow there, sometimes.

6th. What kind of dwellings have the people?

The first dwelling erected by the settler is very often of "Nebraska brick," otherwise sod. Another style much in vogue is the "dugout." Many of them are finished and furnished as nicely inside as any ordinary farm dwelling. Some of them are not.

I cannot leave this subject without telling you about our own "dugout." It was made in the level prairie with steps hewn in the earth to descend to the regions below. My husband purchased his "claim," which afterward became our homestead, from the man who built the "dugout," and we lived in it while our frame house was building. By the time we took possession those steps were worn threadbare and you could choose between a roll and a slide as your mode of entrance to our palatial abode. (Confidentially, my dear, it was just 10x12 feet; all the rooms on the ground floor.) I have an active remembrance of getting out of bed in undignified haste one night in the "wee sma' hours" and picking a wet bed up from a very wet floor and hunting a dry corner, while the rain poured in torrents down the roll or slide steps. When we settled in Nebraska in '71 there were but one or two frame houses near us. When I was last there, in '87, there was but one sod house left. Neat frame dwellings had taken their place. Then, in '71, not a tree or shrub or stone met the eye—only one unbroken prairie. Now the land is fenced, groves appear on nearly every farm, orchards have come into bearing and small fruits abound.

Are the people generally educated, and what is the school system?

The inhabitants of Nebraska seem to have been gathered "from the four corners of the earth." Nearly every European nation is represented, especially Germany, Sweden, Norway and Denmark. We had in our precinct an English lord and several other wealthy Englishmen. Many Southern people lived near us and some of our friends had been slaveholders and some had been in the Confederate army and very kind, true friends they were, too. There is no more loyal, disinterested, self-sacrificing friend on earth than the Southerner. And then there were Westerners, to whom eastern Iowa and Illinois were "back east." Of course there were some with meager learning, but they all took great interest in education and in the district schools—many of them at least. The pupils are as far advanced as here. The school system is similar to our own. A good paper is published in the interest of education, teachers hold institutes etc. Education is not compulsory, or was not. I have a nephew who is teaching in McPherson county at $40 per month.

8th. "How did you enjoy your residence there?"

Very much indeed. I liked the climate, the country, the inhabitants. No people are more hospitable or sympathetic. I enjoyed immensely the vastness of the pratries, the billowy waving of the grass in early June, the sense of freedom experienced, the newness, and the grasshoppers that came as thick as snowflakes in '72, and with appetites like a first class Nebraska mortgage.

I have been asked why I came back if I liked Nebraska so well? Why, bless you! the dear old Michigan is my mother and with a child's loyal devotion I love my native State.

"Oh Michigan! land of the free,
I ask no other home but thee;
I love thy pine-clad hills and brakes,
Thy murmuring rills and crystal lakes;
Though others in strange lands may roam,
Thou art my land, thou, too, my home."

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

The adjourned meeting was held at the residence of F. C. Rector. Although the roads were very bad there was a fair attendance and an interesting meeting. The program (subject, Whittier) was well carried out and the Club was favored with a song by Mrs. Remington. The question, The importance of the farmer as compared with the business man was rather a one-sided question. It was hardly fair, as the business men had no representives for their cause. Mr. F. C. Rector, who is apt to chaperon the weak side, talked for the business man to the best of his ability, but of course, with the odds against him, his defeat was sure. It was clearly shown by all that intellectually, morally and socially the farmer is fully abreast of the business man, and physically a little ahead.

The Club adjourned at a late hour to meet the last Friday evening in March, the 28th, at the home of John Schreder. The program will be a character representation of the authors studied through the winter. It will be the last evening meeting. Let all try to be present.

PROGRAM.

Phœbe Cary—Kate Ketchum.
Carleton—Betsey and I are out, The Schoolmaster's Guests, Gone with a Handsomer Man, The Three Lovers.
Dickens—Mr. Pickwick in the Wrong Room.
Longfellow—The Courtship of Miles Standish.
Whittier—Maud Muller, Barbara Fritchie.

There will also be some other representations.

FRANKLIN UNION LITERARY AND LYCEUM.

The above Society met at the residence of E. J. Whelan March 7th. Owing to the entertainment at Tipton that night there was not as large an attendance as formerly, but those present enjoyed it to its fullest extent. The meeting was called to order by the Vice-President. After the miscellaneous business the following is the program that was rendered:

Music—Ruth Taylor.
Reading—E. J. Whelan.
Rec.—Nina Allen.
Music—Clarence Wisner.
Rec.—Mrs. A. B. Wisner.
Dec.—G. W. Allen.
Chip basket—Cecil Billington.
Song—Mr. Simeon Whelan.

Owing to the absence of one of the leading speakers the question for discussion was held over for the next meeting, which will be held at J. S. Allen's April 4th. A good program will be presented. The question for discussion is, Resolved—That the government should be at the expense of making the public roads. Cecil Billington, aff.; George Taylor, neg.

Knights of Pythias Biennial Conclave at Milwaukee, Wis., July, 1890.

For this great occasion excursion tickets will be sold from all principal points in the United States and Canada to Milwaukee and return via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway at half rates.

As the name indicates the Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway is the direct route to Milwaukee, and as the camp ground for the uniformed Knights (to which point cars and trains will be run through without transfer) is located directly on this line, it will be seen that the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway has a great advantage over other routes which are unable to furnish such facilities, and visiting Knights, their families and friends should bear this in mind when purchasing excursion tickets.

A circular giving detailed information will be mailed free upon application to A. V. H. Carpenter, General Passenger Agent, Milwaukee, Wis., or to Harry Mercer, M. P. A., 90 Griswold St., Detroit, Mich.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

EDITOR OF THE HERALD.—With your permission I wish to make the following clipping a text for a few words on the question of street improvements:

"I see that brother Field is advocating the making of roads into town," said a Raisin man in our office yesterday. "That is a good notion but I can give him a pointer. If the mud on Chicago street here in the village were carted off into the country it would improve the country roads very much, and wouldn't harm Chicago street either."

Your Bro. is always at the front in the interest of the village. The mud speaks strongly on the subject, but our papers should also speak out on a subject of so vital public importance. Will you publish something about the science of engineering as applied to Road Making? Opinions differ in regard to the material carted on the streets here, and what its effect when applied. The opinion has been advanced that it makes more mud, and is a damage. If so, the Village Board is virtually carting mud from the country to improve our streets, and the suggestion of our Raisin friend that the country roads might be improved by our mud is very well put. Would it not be a very proper thing to attempt to organize a self constituted committee or that the Board so appoint and report, while the streets are in a semi-fluid condition by a careful analysis, and its effect; what the material is and its effect; and also the best method to adopt for our town?

CITIZEN.

EAST TECUMSEH SCHOOL.

Our national flag now floats over another district school, due to the successful entertainment given by the pupils of fractional district No. 1, Tecumseh. Thursday evening was the time decided on, and although the weather proved unfavorable, the patriotic spirit of the east Tecumsehites was too great to allow them to remain at home. At eight o'clock the school room was filled. Shortly afterward the curtain was drawn aside showing the entire school standing in the form of a half circle, each carrying a three foot flag. Immediately behind stood their teacher, Frances Kehoe. In this position all joined in singing a hearty welcome, which was followed by each giving a quotation. At a signal from the drum, the pupils marched down the centre aisle singing Marching through Georgia, pausing while singing the verse and marching while singing the chorus. A very interesting program of recitations, dialogues etc., followed.

Sec. E. G. Walker was expected to be present to take part in the exercises, but as he failed to do so, director B. J. Bond requested Miss Kehoe to read a piece. As none had been selected, she presently responded with a declamation which proved to be much better. Each then wended his way to his respective home feeling fully satisfied that his evening had not been misspent. The pupils were also well pleased, for they had netted $6.25 with which they could unfurl their loyal banner to the breeze.

For the cure of the inflamation and congestion called "a cold in the head" there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious developement of the symtoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh, after all other modes of treatment have failed.

THE DRUNKARD.

The play, entitled the Drunkard, which was presented by Theo. P. Wood's amateur dramatic company at the Opera House last Tuesday evening is a good one for an amateur troupe. The plot and individual characters afford an opportunity for good acting, while the scenery and stage accompaniments are not beyond our conveniences to properly present. The play had been thoroughly rehearsed and from the rise of the curtain till the close of the last act, it was very creditably presented. It is no flattery to say that it was a better entertainment than is frequently given by professional troupes that visit Tecumseh. The play was cast with good judgement, and the characters were all well up in the parts they assumed. Below is the cast in full:

Edward Middleton—C. H. Beneway.
Lawyer Cribbs—Theo P. Wood.
William Dowton—Claud Hubbard.
Farmer Gates. Sam, 1st Loafer—W. E. Stevenson.
Farmer Stevens—C. F. Minor.
Old Johnson, Messenger—Bert C. Pennock.
Mr. Rencelaw, 2nd loafer—Leon C. McNiel.
Landlord, Bar keeper—Martin A. Crossman.
Watchman, Clergyman—F. Slater.
Mary Wilson—Allie E. Osman.
Agnes Dowton—Stella Beneway.
Mrs. Wilson, Miss Spindle—Stella B. Prichard.
Patience, Julia—Satie Burch.

Edward Middleton, the leading character, was carried by Chas. H. Beneway, in a manner which showed excellent natural talent and careful study. Middleton and Miss Wilson were the hero and heroine of the play. The role of Miss Wilson was a difficult one, but it was very nicely personified by Allie E. Osman. Theo Wood is not half as big a villian as he tried to be in the character of Lawyer Cribbs. However, Theo entered into the spirit of the part admirably. William Dowton was very appropriately carried by Claude Hubbard. Stella Beneway did herself proud in her admirable presentation of the maniac. She surprised her friends. Stella Prichard acted both the matron and the spinster equally well. Satie Burch filled the dual character of Patience and Julia very tastily. The minor parts were not slighted, as is often the case. Although they had but little to do, that little was well done. The assistance rendered by W. E. Stevenson, C. F. Minor, Bert Pennock, Leon McNiel, Martin Crossman and Frank Slater, aided very materially in making the entire presentation the success that it was. If the troupe shall present Ten Nights in a Bar Room to-morrow evening as well, they should be greeted with a full house. That they will do so can be depended upon. Next week the troupe will present both plays in some of the neighboring towns.

HIGH SCHOOL HAPPENINGS.

Our High School paper is now being printed; we hope many will honor us by subscribing for it.

Several of the Seniors expect to go to Adrian, Saturday, March 29 to take the Teachers' examination.

A large number of the pupils are preparing to take part in the "Business Mens' Carnival" to be held some time in the near future.

The last meeting of the High School Lyceum was held last Friday P. M The program was carried out as arranged; each one doing his part well. Quite a number of outsiders were present. The question was well discussed on both sides; but the honorable judges, Mr. Slayton, Prof. Wilson and J. O. Heck, decided the question in the aff. The meeting adjourned to meet Oct. 19, 1890.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Ten nights in a bar-room to-morrow evening.

Ernest Coller visited friends in Coldwater last week.

Mrs. J. M. Jones visited her mother in Detroit last week.

Miss Allie Warren went to Detroit Tuesday, on a business trip.

Mrs. H. B. Root spent last Monday and Tuesday with Adrian friends.

Thos. Elliott and James Lowry took in the sights of Detroit last Tuesday.

The big boiler in the engine room of the table company is now in position.

We are glad to learn that Miss Lulu Jones is rapidly improving from her attack of rheumatism.

Mr. Wm. C. Grobhiser of Sturgis has been engaged by the Table Company to act as buisness manager.

The Globe mills are rushing the rolls now, filling an order of forty car loads of flour to go across the big water.

Miss Mary Stevens, who has been spending several weeks with N. M. Sutton's family and other friends in Tecumseh, returned home to Detroit last Monday.

Mrs. A. F. Church started yesterday morning for Orville, Ohio, to spend a few weeks with her daughter, Mrs. A. J. Coddington.

Assessors Weller and Davidson are on the war path, armed with an old assessment roll and a half dozen lead pencils. Look out for them.

All who enjoy a good amateur play should go to the Opera House to-morrow evening. Admission fifteen, twenty and twenty-five cents.

If you failed to see the Drunkard last Tuesday evening, you can make amends by going to hear ten nights in a bar-room to-morrow evening.

If the person who directed a letter to Mrs. Childs. Christania, Austin Co. Mich., will call at the postoffice and correct the address, it will probably reach the person intended.

The Detroit Evening Sun is a new journalistic venture which was launched last week. It is a spicy, newsy, seven column folio and sells for one cent. The initial number guarantees success.

A new time card for the Toledo and Ann Arbor rail road appears this week in our columns. This road is taking a leading position among the railroads of Michigan. Many people in this vicinity will find this time card in the HERALD a great convenience.

The Jackson Citizens says: "It is reported that beginning with the change of time, on or about April 1, the Lake Shore will put on a fast train, leaving Jackson in the evening, and arriving in the morning. The train will run seven days in the week."

The G. A. R. and W. R. C. united in a social at their rooms last Monday evening. A fine program was presented, consisting of select readings, and vocal and instrumental music. The attendance was good and the affair throughout was a very enjoyable one.

During Mr. Lucius Lilley's absence, the bank will be managed by Lester P. Tribou who is thoroughly competent to perform all the official duties of the concern. He has grown up in that bank, as it were, having had twenty years experience in the business and he is a young man yet.

The Michigan crop report for March gives a table showing the number of pure bred registered cattle in each county of the state. Lenawee shows up in this wise: Ayrshire, 8; Galloway, 8; Guernsey, 2; Hereford, 44. Holstein, 63; Jersey, 116; Shorthorns, 187. In the number of Jerseys registered Lenawee stands second, Kent being the first. Lenawee stands fourth in the number of Holsteins.

The Tecumseh News reports a balance of $6,234,36 in the village treasury. The stingy economists of the north village could gain information how to spend the surplus by applying to the Republican aldermen of this city. Over $6,000 in the treasury! It is an outrage. It having once been reported to the Arkansas house of representatives, that the treasury contained a surplus of $30,000, a member immediately sprang to his feet with "Mr. Speaker, I move you sir, that we rake 'er." But Adrian's council "rakes" the surplus before it is in the treasury.—Adrian Press.

These flowers are as costly as they are wonderful, and they are not only curious and extremely rare, but the blossoms, when cut off, will stay fresh for two weeks. Single blossoms have been sold for $25 and $50, while the value of the plants range from $100 to $1,000 each. Four of the most prominent Orchid growing houses in the United States will make large competitive exhibits at the Detroit Floral exhibition, April 22-25. The Detroit Journal is sparing no pains to insure to lovers of flowers a rare treat. No such exhibition of Orchids has ever been held in Michigan.

Henry Mensing is reported on the sick list.

F. D. Hillman spent last Sunday with his family.

Go and see Ten Nights in a Bar room to-morrow evening.

Lawyer Wightman took a business trip to Morenci last week.

March is keeping up its reputation for being the meanest month in the year.

C. E. Beers and mother are spending a couple of weeks with Adrian friends.

Supervisor Heesen is attending the March meeting of the Supervisors this week.

Agnes McElroy, of Adrian, came over to attend the Hamilton-Boyd wedding last week.

John Peters has moved his family from the Chas Bidwell house to the Hendryx house on Pearl street.

The Dramatic Society gave a fine entertainment Tuesday evening. They will present another good play to-morrow evening. Turn out and fill the house.

W. D. Howells has discovered a new humorist—"Ironquill," of Kansas,—and quotes specimens of his poetry in "The Editor's Study," in Harpers' Magazine for April.

Ben Laur, of Cambridge, was in town last week and made us a call. He was en route for Adrian by rail, finding it easier to go that way than to drive across the country.

Tecumseh Doctor—"There is nothing serious, sir; your wife has merely bit a little skin off the end of her tongue." Henpecked Tecumsehite—"End of her tongue. Great Scott! I didn't know there was any end to it."—Adrian Press.

Dr. Thomas Miller, of Washington, D. C., made a flying call among his relatives and friends here last week, returning home Wednesday of this week. We are glad to say he is doing well and is one of the most popular physicians of that city.

The next meeting of the Northern Lenawee Farmers Club will be held at James Updyke's March 26. In place of the usual program there will be a maple sugar festival and supper. Each lady is expected to bring biscuits, butter and spoons. The committee will furnish the sugar, cold meat, dishes etc. A general invitation is extended.

The last masquerade given by Prof. Skinner was so successful that he has concluded to give another one, which will come off on Thursday evening of next week, March 27. Four prizes will be given for the best costumes. First class music will be in attendance. Dance, fifty cents. Spectators, 15 cents. Supper at Van Antwerp's at 50 cents per couple.

A letter from Henry C. Ingraham takes exceptions to the statement in the HERALD of the 6th that Sheffield is at the head of navigation on the Tennessee river. He says: "I think most of the 18th Mich. members could discount that statement, having sailed that creek fully 200 miles above where Sheffield is now located. Sheffield is at the lower end of the big shoals, but steamers can go as far as Cleveland landing. East Tennessee.

F. Oliver Tefft, son of Charles C. Tefft, of this village, who is a student in the medical department of Howard University, Washington, D. C., has just passed successfully his junior examinations in anatomy, physiology, materia medica and chemistry. He takes first honor, having passed the best examinations in each branch, in a class numbering fifty or more students. We congratulate him on the excellent showing he has made.

Bernard Tyrrell, the colored lecturer of Virginia, is delivering a course of lectures in neighboring towns on "The Race Problem." He will lecture here in the old G. A. R. Hall, in Spark's Block, on Thursday evening, March 27. Mr. Tyrrell comes well recommended by the faculty and president of Hillsdale College, where he graduated some years ago. Admission 15 cents.

Dr. Bennett will be at the Lilley House on Wednesday, March 26 Piles! Piles of all kinds and phases, no matter what complications, he cures. Think you he has seen these things for 7 years, every day and hour, and now not know what he is talking about? Not one person in ten who thinks he has the piles has any thing of the kind; only fever or inflamation with its results. He knows the difference and knows what to do for them. He gets them wholly well. Go and see him when here.

Mrs. Chloe Woodard, who has been suffering for the past three weeks from la grippe, is now convalescent. She began to pick up the papers and read for herself what was going on about town, and her eyes fell upon the statement that Mrs. Sarah Edwards, who had just celebrated her 93rd birthday, was supposed to be the oldest resident of Tecumseh. "Why," says the old lady, "editor Stacy has made a mistake; I am older than that. If I live till the 15th of next June, I shall be 94," and she bids fare it come up to one hundred.

John Hicks is spending about two weeks at home.

Remember the Masquerade at Armory Hall, March 27th. Four grand prizes.

George Doney of Reading Mich, has taken Will Conklin's place in Snedicor's barber shop.

The supper at the M. E. Church last evening was largely attended. Over 150 tickets were sold.

Mrs. W. J. Waldron has returned from a two week's visit with her sister, Mrs. Crane, at Chicago.

C. A. Wright & Co., swing out a new card this week. Subject matter, wall paper and decorations.

Clinton and Cambridge are the only towns in the County that have reported all the taxes of 89 collected in full.

S. P. Hosmer has just bought another large invoice of books for the Ladies Library. All on account of that little 'Scrap of Paper."

All of the old and new members of the Tecumseh City Band are requested to be present at the band meeting next Monday night. By order of com.

William Prindall and Thos. Hoagland of Ridgeway had a legal set to on Monday last before Justice Wightman. Walter Westerman and Seth Bean appeared as attorneys in the case.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. will give an Easter entertainment in their rooms at Mrs. Jennie Halls, opposite Baptist Church, on Tuesday evening, April first. (No Fooling.) Easter favors for sale. Supper ten cents.

Ira Ladd of Adrian, offers to start a canning factory here, if the citizens will give him a lot to build on and a bonus of $1500. This is an opportunity that should be grasped at once. A canning factory here would be a good investment.

The formal wedding notice in last week's HERALD announcing the marriage of Mr. W. T. Hamilton to Miss Lena Boyd, hardly does justice to the affair. The ceremony took place at the residence of Mr. Chas. Albaugh in this village. A large gathering was in attendance and the happy couple were the recipients of many fine gifts. They embark upon the matrimonal sea, accompanied by the congratulations of a large circle of friends.

Wednesday morning the body of a man was found upon the Ann Arbor road near Alexis, which was discovered by the engineer of the passenger train coming north. It proved to be that of a brakeman on freight train, which arrived at Toledo at an early hour that morning. It is supposed that he fell between the cars while in motion. The body was cut in two and horribly mangled. His name is given as Malony, and is said to live at Milan.—Dundee Reporter.

LET US HAVE THE ELECTRIC LIGHT.

EDITOR HERALD:—In the annual report of the village treasurer I see there is a surplus on hand of about $6000.

Would it not be a good idea for the village to invest this surplus in an electric light plant, to be owned and operated by the village, and to furnish light for streets and to private individuals at the actual cost? I am opposed to giving away a franchise, that as soon as owned by any company becomes a thing of considerable commercial value.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Dr. D. J. Dewey departed this life Feb. 26th at 15 minutes before 12 o'clock. A short time before her death her prayer was, "Lord Jesus, take me," and sweetly fell asleep in Jesus.

Belle J. Dewey was the daughter of Geo. H. and Fannie A. Reister. She was born in this county Oct. 20, 1844; was united in marriage to Dr. Dewey Sept. 20, 1864; united with the M. E. church under the administration of Rev. C. L. Stafford, Feb. 17, 1884. She was preceded to the spirit land by her eldest daughter Ada. The family now are equally divided—wife and daughter have crossed the river: husband and daughter still linger on the hores of time.

She was a loving wife, an affectionate and indulgent mother. and will be sadly missed in her home, into which her happy Christian spirit always brought a ray of sunshine.

The above notice is taken from the Press, published at Washington, Ia. Dr. Dewey is a son of the late L. D. Dewey of Tecumseh. He has two brothers now residing among us—L. D. Dewey Jr. and Alphonzo and two sisters, Mrs. Robt. Stretch and Mrs. G. W. Marsden. There are many of the Doctor's boyhood friends in Tecumseh who will deeply sympathize with him in his affliction.

GUILTY!

Verdict of the Coroner in the Benwell Case.

REGINALD BURCHELL IS HELD FOR THE CRIME.

Mrs. Burchell is Also Held to Have Had Guilty Knowledge of the Murder.

PRINCETON, ONT., March 10.—The inquest on the remains of F. C. Benwell, the alleged victim of the Burchell conspiracy, was resumed at Princeton Saturday. Mr. Pelley, the young man who accompanied Benwell and Burchell to this country, was taken to the grave of the murdered man. Pelley recognized the dead man as Mr. Benwell. Pelley was the first witness. He told the story of his acquaintance with Burchell and Benwell much as he did at Niagara Falls. Some points in his evidence are worth noticing as affecting Mrs. Burchell. He swore that Mrs. Burchell spoke to him about the farm, the farm house and the servants in the farm house. She told him that she was not very well satisfied with either the farm life or the farm servants, the farm being lonely and the servants unsuitable. Pelley believed that Mrs. Burchell knew of the plot conceived by her husband to defraud him, and that she was a partner in the fraud. Other testimony was to the effect that Burchell and a stranger wearing a cape coat were seen at Eastwood Station on the day of the murder; that they were seen later on the highway near where Benwell's body was found, and Benwell's cape coat was identified as the one worn by Burchell companion, and that Burchell was seen alone with muddy trousers and blood on his clothing.

A letter was produced signed "F. Somerset," and addressed to Ford, Rathbun & Company, the colonization agents, London, England, in which he appeared to make a report of the conduct of a number of different young Englishmen in and around Woodstock, evidently the farm pupils sent out by the agency. Burchell has been identified as Somerset.

The jury retired and in less than hour returned a verdict that Benwell came to his death at the hands of Reginald Burchell, and implicating the wife as having guilty knowledge of the crime after its commission. Under the law of Canada, a wife cannot be punished for shielding her husband, and therefore Mrs. Burchell cannot be made accessory after the fact in the general sense of the term.

IS THE WHITE HOUSE SAFE?

Precaution Against a Disastrous Fire There.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The auxiliary fire alarm system recently put in the president's mansion has been connected with the city system. Mr. Kilbourne, superintendent of the anxiliary company of New York city, who placed the alarm boxes, six in number, in the mansions says it was one of the most difficult jobs of the kind he ever undertook to do. There are, he says, a great many nooks and corners in the White house, and it took just one mile of wire to make the connections in the house for the six boxes. He considers the building to be as well constructed as most modern houses, but does not think that it is particularly safe. There is an immense amount of inflamable material in the structure; but every possible precaution has been taken to prevent fire, and to extinguish it after it occurs. Several new patent extinguishers have been put in place in different parts of the building.

TOO TRIVOLOUS.

A Candidate for the Ministry Objected to on Account of His Gay Ways with the Ladies.

CUMBERLAND, MD., March 10.—Part of Saturday's proceedings of the Baltimore Methodist Conference consisted of voting on applicants for Elders orders. Right of the candidates were admitted to full connection. Mr. H. Thurlow, of Hawling's station, was voted to be continued on trial. He passed well in his examination, but objection to raising him to the preacher's rank was made by the Rev. Mr. Price who said Mr. Thurlow was not adapted to the ministry. This remark created a heated discussion. About half the members took part, the number being equally divided for and against the young man. The objection to Mr. Thurlow was, that "when in the company of girls, Mr. Thurlow was too frivolous." During the discussion Mr. Thurlow was standing in the vestibule, and as soon as he heard the majority was in favor of keeping him on trial instead of selecting him, he said, "well, I don't think I'll stay. This treatment is unjust, and I will not remain in the conference." He is 25 years of age.

STRUCK THE JUGULAR.

An Indianian Stabs His Mother-in-Law to Death.

LA GRANGE, IND., March 10.—Frank Mingus stabbed and instantly killed his mother-in-law, Mr. Nehemiah Lounsbery, last evening. Mingus separated from his wife recently, and one of his children was placed in the care of his wife's parents. Becoming dissatisfied with this arrangement, he attempted to enter the Lounsbery residence this evening and regain possession of his child, but Mrs. Lounsberry refused him admittance. This infuriated him, and he plunged a small penknife into Mrs. Lounsbery's neck. Only a small incision was made, but death was instantaneous.

FRENCH DETECTIVES.

After Eyrand the French Slaughterer at Mexico City.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 10.—Four French detectives have arrived here in pursuit of Eyrand, the assassin at Paris of Huissier Gouffe, whose murder last July caused so great a sensation in France. The murderer is being sought for here and in Pueblo.

Very Warlike.

PARIS, March 10.—The government will immediately equip and send out an expedition to maintain its rights to territory on the slave coast conceded to France by the King of Dahoney by treaty of 1867, renewed and confirmed by another treaty in 1878.

One Thousand Dollar Positions.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The following one thousand dollar clerks have been appointed in the office of the surgeon general: C. L. Elbough, C. A. Johnson, Missouri, H. H. House, Ohio, and N. V. Eastly, Tennessee.

A Strict Party Vote.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The senate committee on privileges and elections has decided, by a strict party vote, to report in favor of seating Messrs. Saunders and Powers, the Republican contestants for the Montanta seats in the United States Senate.

M. DE FREYCINET

Will Be at the Head of the French Cabinet.

DE FREYCINET.

PARIS, March 17.—It is now thought extremely probable that the new ministry will be constructed as follows: M. De Freycinet, premier and minister of war; M. Constans, minister of foreign affairs; M. Bourgeois, minister of the interior; M. Rouvier, minister of finances; M. Brisson, minister of justice; M. Roche, minister of commerce; M. Follieres, minister of public instruction; M. Develle, minister of agriculture; M. Cuyot, minister of public works, and Admiral Barbey, minister of marine.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Run on a Bank.

PITTSBURG, PA., March 17.—The run on the Real Estate Loan and Trust bank of Allegheny City, caused by developments in the Baeder Glue company failure, is over. The strain was pretty heavy for three days, but now everything is quiet, and more money was being placed on deposit than was drawn out. A meeting of the creditors of the defunct glue company will be held in New York on Monday.

Brick Manufacturer.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Schuyler Hamilton, Jr., brick manufacturer at Croton, Winchester county, N. Y., has made an assignment to Lawyer Henry L. Sprague, of this city, giving preferences for $5,025. Mr. Hamilton is a grandson of Alexander Hamilton, who was killed in a duel with Aaron Burr, and he was generally thought to be worth a quarter of a million dollars. He is an architect by profession.

Prominent Horseman Assigns.

LANCASTER, PA., March 17.—George Crossman, a prominent horse dealer of this city, and inventor of the Crossman horse car, made an assignment. Liabilities about $40,000; assets about half that amount.

Grocers Sell Out.

GREENEVILLE, MISS., March 17.—Rucks & Dunbar, wholesale and retail grocers, have sold out to two local banks. Their liabilities are about $17,000; assets about $15,000.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

Photograph Gallery, &c.

FRANKFORT, KY., March 17.—Fire in the morning destroyed the photograph gallery of H. G. Mattern, and damaged the clothing, boot and shoe house of Crutcher & Stark. Loss about $43,000; insurance about $39,600.

Business Block.

KIRKSVILLE, MO., March 17.—Fire destroyed the entire south portion of the business block at an early hour in the morning. It is supposed to have started from an overturned stove in a room near the building occupied by B. T. Tawkins, dry goods. The total loss is $200,000; insurance $75,000. Lawkin is a loser to the extent of $30,000. The First National bank building, with several other business houses, were completely destroyed. The block will be rebuilt at once.

Barn and Six Horses.

GALLATIN, TENN., March 17.—The barn of Joel Escrie, near Leaguardo, was burned to the ground. Six head of horses were burned, together with a vast amount of hay and corn and farmers' implements.

Green-Houses.

SPRINGFIELD, O., March 17.—Ruse & Goode's green-houses were destroyed by fire in the morning. Loss $20,000; insured for $3,000. The fire is supposed to have been incendiary in its origin.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Shaker Found Dead.

HARRODSBURG, KY., March 17.—George Schoolberg, a swede, about 65 years old, and a member of the society of Shakers, was found dead in bed early in the morning in his room at Pleasant Hill, seven miles from this place. Coroner R. B. Gibbs held an inquest, and the verdict of the jury was that he died of heart disease. He had been kindly treated and had very light work to do.

Mrs. Ellen McKee, Aged 101.

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—Mrs. Ellen McKee, supposed to be the oldest resident of the city, died yesterday of old age. She was born in Ireland, January 1, 1789, making her age 101 years. Mrs. McKee was remarkably bright up to the day of her death, and knew all that transpired about her. The funeral took place today. The remains were taken to Cleveland, where her husband died about fifteen years ago.

Leopold Rosenberg.

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—Leopold Rosenberg, delivery clerk at the post-office here for the past four years, died at Chicago at at early hour in the morning. He was well known to a very large number of people. The remains will be brought here for interment.

Rev. Charles Huebner.

TOLEDO, O., March 17.—Rev. Charles Huebner, aged 65 years, pastor of St. Mark's German Lutheran church in this city, died.

Miss Mary Graham.

MT. GILEAD, O., March 17.—Miss Mary Graham, aged 19, residing near Pulaskiville, this county, died suddenly in the morning.

Mrs. Magdalena Leonhart.

NEWARK, O., March 17.—Mrs. Magdalena Leonhart, aged 75 years, one of the pioneer residents of Newark, died at her home, South Fifth street.

Mrs. Edward Haines,

Aged 50 years, died suddenly with heart trouble in Cincinnati.

Victim of a Highwayman.

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—Harry C. Golden, aged 23, a painter, who was shot Saturday night by a foot-pad on South Gift street. No clew to the assailant.

CHRIST FORGIVING SIN.

LESSON XII, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 23.

Text of the Lesson, Luke v, 17-26—Commit Verses 24-26—Golden Text, Luke v, 21—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

17. "And it came to pass on a certain day as He was teaching." Our last lesson, concerning the miraculous draught of fishes, is recorded only in Luke; then follows the healing of the leper, recorded by Matthew, Mark and Luke, as a result of which there came great multitudes to hear and be healed, insomuch that Jesus could no more openly enter into the city, but was without in desert places. Then Luke says that He withdrew Himself into the wilderness and prayed (verse 16). Notice the seven other occasions recorded by Luke on which Jesus prays (vi, 12, 13; ix, 18, 29; xi, 1, 2; xxii, 32, 41, 44), and let us all sincerely ask ourselves how much we know of the power of prayer.

"There were Pharisees and doctors of the law sitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jerusalem." So that here was gathered a convention of all the leading and influential religious people of the land, and they were being addressed by this humble carpenter of Nazareth upon topics with which they ought to be very familiar, and of which the wonder in their eyes was that He should know anything.

18. "And, behold, men brought in a bed a man which was taken with a palsy." Mark says that four men carried him. His trouble was paralysis; he was utterly helpless, all undone, not a thing could he do for himself. Other cases of this disease are recorded in Matt. iv, 24; viii, 6; Acts viii, 7; ix, 33, the last case being that of a man who had kept his bed for eight years. This man's physical condition was an illustration of the condition of all men spiritually, Rom. v, 6, 8, 10, to describe it as "without strength, ungodly, sinners, enemies," and that was just the condition of those Pharisees and doctors of the law who were sitting by, but they knew it not.

19. "They went upon the housetop, and let him down through the tiling, with his couch, into the midst before Jesus." The discouragements were many and great. It seemed simply impossible to get their friend to Jesus.

20. "And when He saw their faith, He said unto him, Man, thy sins are forgiven thee." The great people present may have felt like objecting very decidedly to this rude interruption; or some hateful ones may have laughed in their hearts at the meeting being thus disturbed; but the quiet calmness and dignity of Jesus would overawe them, and as all was still again, the helpless man lying on his couch in their midst, these most unexpected words fell from the preacher's lips: "Man, thy sins are forgiven thee!" As the skillful physician seeks carefully the source of the more manifest symptoms, the seat of the disease, and attends to that, knowing that if the cause is removed all will be well, so Jesus goes at once to the cause of all sickness and suffering and death, and in the case of this man grants him first his greatest need, the forgiveness of his sins. At the same time He indicates to the Pharisees their need.

21. "Who is this which speaketh blasphemies? Who can forgive sins but God alone?" Thus these sin sick Scribes and Pharisees began to reason in their hearts, not knowing that God Himself stood in their midst and uttered these words.

22. "Jesus perceived their thoughts (R. V., reasonings) said unto them, What reason ye in your hearts?" They must have been startled at having the thoughts of their hearts thus told out before all, and one would think that this would convince them that Jesus was more than man. If they were well versed in their own Scriptures, as they should have been, such words as these would have come to mind, "I know the things that come into your mind, every one of them;" "The Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts;" "Thou understandest my thoughts afar off."

23. "Whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk?" Each was equally easy to God manifest in the flesh, but from their standpoint simply to heal the man of his sickness would not imply the same power of God as to grant forgiveness of sins, and would not have led them to accuse Him of blasphemy.

24. "The Son of Man hath power upon earth to forgive sins." And He will have them to know it. But who is this Son of Man? This is the first time we find the title in this Gospel, but we shall find it about twenty-five times as we go on. It is at least thirty times in Matthew, fourteen times in Mark and ten times in John. It seems to be our Lord's favorite title of Himself, and is found outside of the Gospels only in Acts vii, 56; Heb. ii, 6; Rev. i, 13; xiv, 14. Of the eighty times He uses it in the four Gospels, He uses it in reference to His resurrection and future glory about thirty times, and that reminds us of Ps. viii, 4; lxxx, 17; Dan. vii, 13, where the Son of Man is the one to whom dominion on earth is given. He has power to remove sin and sickness, and does it even now in the case of individuals. He removes sin as to its consequences and power from every one who truly seeks Him. He removes sickness and suffering whenever it is for our good and His glory, but not until the resurrection will He give His people bodies forever free from all infirmity. The time will come when He shall have removed from the earth forever all traces of sin and the curse; and He shall do it as Son of Man, David's Son, Abraham's Son, in association with redeemed Israel and the glorified church.

25. "And immediately he rose up before them, and took up that whereon he lay, and departed to his own house, glorifying God." The Word of the Son of Man, God manifest in the flesh, did it. He forgave his sins, He healed his body. We would, as a rule, have healthier bodies if we had healthier souls, purer hearts, hearts in which the Word of God dwelt richly. If our bodies were temples filled with the Holy Spirit, who can tell what He, the Quickener, Teacher, Comforter, would do for us, in us, through us, to the glory of God. By the Word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath of His mouth (Ps. xxxiii, 6), and that Word in which the Spirit dwells (John vi, 63) has lost none of its power. Turn a moment to the man and his friends as they return home in triumph, glorifying God. What a praise meeting it was; a true Hallelujah chorus. And all because of faith in the Son of Man.

26. "Amazed—glorified God—filled with fear—We have seen strange things to-day." Jesus is the Lord God of the holy prophets (Rev. xxii, 6, 16), and if our hearts looking up to Him in childlike faith should say, "Ah, Lord God! behold, Thou hast made the heaven and the earth by Thy great power and stretched out arm, and there is nothing too hard for Thee" (Jer. xxxii, 17), we too would be amazed at the results of faith, and should be compelled to glorify God every day because of the strange things we would see. The empty would be filled, but the rich and self satisfied would still go empty away. The Lord gives us to see our paralysis, that we may in our helpfulness come and cling to the Mighty One.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January, A.D. 1884, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife, of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan, of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A.D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages, on page 591, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1885, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 30th day of January, A.D., 1890, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in Liber 118 of Mortgages, on page 689; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-one and 12-100 Dollars ($1751.12) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that, by virtue of said power of sale, and the statutes of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now, as aforesaid, due and owing on said mortgage, together with interest to accrue thereon, and the costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Twenty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the 21st day of April, A.D. 1890, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5) town five (5), south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

Dated Jan. 23d, 1890.

CLEOPATRA.

Being an Account of the Fall and Vengeance of Harmachis, the Royal Egyptian.

"Why, it is the physician Olympus!" said one—"he who lived a hermit in the tombs of Tape, and who but lately was of the household of Cleopatra. Is it, then, true that the queen is dead by her own hand, physician?"

"Yea, holy sirs, I am that physician; also Cleopatra is dead by my hand."

"By thy hand? Why, how comes this? though well she is dead, forsooth, the wicked wanton?"

"Your pardon, sirs, and I will tell you all, for I am come hither to that end. Perchance among you there may be some—methinks I see some—who nigh eleven years ago were gathered in this hall to secretly crown one Harmachis, Pharaoh of Khem!"

"It is true," they said; "but how knowest thou these things, thou, Olympus?"

"Of the rest of those seven-and-thirty nobles," I went on, making no answer, "are two-and-thirty missing. Some are dead, as Amenemhat is dead; some are slain, as Sepa is slain; and some, perchance, yet labor as slaves within the mines, or live afar, fearing vengeance."

"It is so," they said; "alas! it is so. Harmachis, the accursed, betrayed the plot, and sold himself to the wanton Cleopatra."

"It is so," I went on, lifting up my head. "Harmachis betrayed the plot and sold himself to Cleopatra; and, holy sirs—I am that Harmachis." The priests and dignitaries gazed astonished. Some rose and spoke; some said naught. "I am that Harmachis; I am that traitor, trebly steeped in crime—a traitor to my Gods, a traitor to my country, a traitor to my oath. I come hither to say that I have done this. I have executed the divine vengeance on her who ruined me and gave Egypt to the Roman. And now that, after years of toil and patient waiting, this is accomplished by my wisdom and the help of the angry Gods, behold, I come, with all my shame upon my head, to declare the thing. I am, and take the traitor's guerdon!"

"Mindest thou of the doom of him who hath broke the oath that may not be broke?" asked he who first had spoken, in heavy tones.

"I know it well," I answered; "I court that awful doom."

"Tell us more of this matter, thou who wast Harmachis."

So, in cold, clear words, I laid bare all my shame, keeping back nothing, and ever as I spoke I saw their faces grow more hard, and knew that for me there was no mercy; nor did I ask it; nor had I asked, could it have been granted. When, at last, I had done, they put me aside while they took counsel. Then they drew me forth again, and the eldest among them, a man very old and venerable, the priest of the temple of the divine Hatshepu at Tape, spoke in icy accents:

"Thou, Harmachis, we have considered this matter. Thou hast sinned the threefold deadly sin. On thy head lies the burden of the woe of Khem, this day enthralled of Rome; to Isis, the mother mystery, thou hast offered the deadly insult, and thou hast broken thy holy oath. For all of these sins there is, as well thou knowest, but one reward, and that reward is thine. Naught can it weigh in the balance of our justice that thou hast slain her who was thy cause of stumbling; naught that thou comest to name thyself the vilest thing who ever stood within these walls. On thee, also, must fall the curse of Menka-ra, thou false priest! thou forsworn patriot! thou Pharaoh, shameful and discrowned! Here, where we set the double crown upon thy head, we doom thee to the doom! Go to thy dungeon, and await the falling of its stroke! Go, remembering what thou mightest have been and what thou art, and may those Gods who, through thy evil doing, shall perchance ere long cease to be worshiped within these holy temples, give to thee that mercy which we deny! Lead him forth!"

So they took me and led me forth! With bowed head I went, looking not up, and yet I felt their eyes burn upon my face. Oh! surely, of all my shames, this is the heaviest.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

OF THE LAST WRITING OF HARMACHIS, THE ROYAL EGYPTIAN.

THEY led me to the prison chamber that is high in the Pylon tower, and here I wait my doom. I know not when the sword of fate shall fall. Week grows to week, and month to month, and still it is delayed. Still it quivers unseen above my head. I know that it will fall, but when, I know not. Perchance I shall wake in some dead hour of midnight to hear the stealthy steps of the slayers, and be hurried forth; perchance they are now at hand. Then will come the secret cell. The horror! The nameless coffin—and at last it will be done.

Oh, let it come—let it come swiftly! All is written. I have held back nothing. My sin is sinned. My vengeance is finished. Now all things end in darkness and in ashes, and I prepare to face the terrors that are to come in other worlds than this. I go, but not without hope I go; for though I see her not, though no more she answers to my prayers, still I am aware of the holy Isis, who is with me for evermore, and whom I shall yet again behold face to face; and then, at last, in that far day I shall find forgiveness! The burden of my guilt will roll from me, and innocence come back and wrap me round, bringing me holy peace.

Oh! Dear land of Khem! as in a dream I see thee; I see nation rise nation set its standard on thy shores, and its yoke upon thy neck; I see new religions without end, calling out their truths upon the banks of Sihor, and summoning thy people to worship; I see thy temples—thy holy temples—crumbling in the dust—a wonder to the sight of men unborn, who shall peer into thy tombs and desecrate the great ones of thy glory; I see thy mysteries a mockery to the unlearned, and thy wisdom wasted like waters on the desert sands. I see the Roman eagles stoop and perish, their beaks yet red with the blood of men, and the long lights dancing down the barbarian spears that follow in their wake; and then, at last, I see thee once more great, once more free, and having once more a knowledge of thy Gods—aye, thy Gods with a changed countenance and called by other names, but still thy Gods.

The sun sinks over Abouthis. The red rays of Ra flame on temple roofs, upon green fields, and the wide waters of father Sihor. So as a child I watched him sink; just so his last kiss touched the further Pylon's frowning brow; just that same shadow lay upon the tombs. All is unchanged.

I—I only am changed; so changed, and yet the same!

Oh, Cleopatra, Cleopatra, thou destroyer! If I might but tear the vision from my heart—of all my griefs, this is the heaviest—still must I love thee, still must I hug this serpent to my heart!

Still in my ears must ring that low laugh of triumph—the murmur of the falling fountain, the song of the nightinga—[Here the writing on the third roll of papyrus abruptly ends. It would almost seem that the writer was at the moment broken in upon by those who came to lead him to his doom.]

THE END.

WONDERFUL CAJAH POND.

It Is Full of Floating Islands from Which Fishermen Troll for Pickerel.

A dispatch in a New York paper from a place in Minnesota, announcing as a remarkable fact the discovery of a floating island in a small lake in that State, inclines the residents of Honesdale, Pa., to the belief that if one floating island in a State so famous for natural curiosities as Minnesota is considered a wonder, they have been living all their lives with a still greater wonder close by without attaching any great importance to it. They have a lake a mile from Honesdale which is filled with floating islands. This lake is known locally as Cajah pond. It is two hundred feet above the village. It is dotted with a dozen or more islands. These are covered with trees, some of them twenty feet high, and a dense growth of thick-foliaged bushes.

The island bottoms are marshy, but the soil is stiff enough to sustain easily the weight of the fishermen who troll for pickerel from the islands in the summer fishing season. In the summer these little islands are pleasing variations in the beauty of the scene the lake presents to the spectator as he gazes upon it from the hills that encircle it. If the wind happens to be strong and variable, as it generally is on the lake, the visitor who looks upon the lake for the first time can hardly help being startled to see these islands moving about from one point of the compass to another as the wind shifts. On one day these islands may be seen huddled together in one spot, and on another day, perhaps, they will be seen scattered widely apart. An island from which the fisherman casts his line at one end of the lake to-day will, in all probability, invite him to it from the other extremity to-morrow.

The largest of these islands was some years ago partial to the lower end of the lake, and hugged the shore there with only slight changes in position day in and day out. During a stiff wind one day this island tacked first to one side and then to the other side of the lake, moving slowly the while to the upper end, until it was floated against the shore at that end. It remained there for two or three years through some of the hardest winds that blew off that shore. One day while three pickerel fishermen were fishing from the island's outer edge it suddenly was seized with a whim, induced or prompted only by a gentle wind, and before the fishermen knew it they found themselves fifty feet from shore. The island floated slowly across the lake until it had almost reached that shore, when a counter breeze struck it and sent it down the lake. It finally landed near the spot where it started from a year ago, and it has remained in that vicinity ever since, simply taking a short trip now and then to and fro across the lake, but always returning to or near its old moorings.

Although these fair islands are constantly shifting their places in the lake, they annually add perceptibly to their area. There are six or eight of them, and the scientific theory is that in time the roots of the trees that cover them will extend down into the water so far that they will anchor the islands in the lake, and that by the slow but certain processes of nature they will be increased in size until the surface of the lake will become solid land.

HELPFULNESS OF WORK.

Without Employment Life Would Be One Long Span of Weariness.

God put Adam in the garden of Eden "to dress it and to keep it." Herein He recognized, even in the earthly paradise, the universal law of work—employment for hand and brain. Doubtless this law will prevail even in the celestial paradise. Without employment eternal life would be eternal weariness.

The late fearful disaster in the Conemaugh valley left the survivors bereft of homes, families, friends, property and hope. When outside helpers organized the stricken multitude and set them to work, reporters for the press were struck with the immediate change for the better in look and tone and bearing.

In any great calamity, whether impending or already come, nothing is so helpful as engrossing employment. Men working at the pumps to save, if possible, the sinking ship, do not suffer in a tenth part as much as those who stand gazing in the face of death. No bloody encounter on the battle field equals in horrible experience the position of the line which must simply hold its ground without returning the fire of the enemy.

Next to the abject poor we may pity the inheritors of vast wealth, who are too often without stimulus to exertion, and indeed are often excluded from it, by foolish social notions. Amusements form a sorry substitute for actual employment for they soon lose their power to please. The great middle class enjoys the blessed reaction of regular, adequate work, and their children are to be pitied if their fathers' industry dooms them to a life of idleness.

Many persons whose minds, for want of wholesome activity, have fallen into an unhealthy state, have been saved from insanity or suicide, through the calling out of their sympathies in behalf of others. Such work is the more helpful in that it brings into play the best part of one's nature, the part most happy in its reflex influence.

Not a few successful men retire from business at a comparatively early age to enjoy, as they term it, a period of rest. Such men generally make a sad mistake. Their enjoyment is not half what it was before, and they are fortunate if the tendency of the brain to shrivel with years be not sadly hastened by the cessation of its life-long activity.

John Quincy Adams kept at his post in Congress to the last, not because of political ambition nor on account of pecuniary need, but because he wished by working to retain as long as possible his power to work. Mr. Gladstone retains his extraordinary working-power by using brain and arm.

No more cruel law, no law more opposed to the great end of prison discipline, was ever enacted in America than the one which deprived convicts of opportunities for labor. Death itself would be preferable to the insanity, vice, disease and general deterioration of the whole man, physically, mentally and morally, which are the natural results of such a deprivation.—Youth's Companion.

THE FLOOD

Bursts Its Fetters and Sweeps Down

ON THE CRESCENT CITY WITH A TERRIBLE FORCE.

A Break Occurs in the Levee in Front of Dr. Wylie's House, 100 Feet Long and 8 Feet Deep—Great Danger Apparent—Flood News From the Far South.

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—News from river points state that the river has remained stationary all day in West Baton Rouge Parish. The levees are safe and able to stand two feet more of water. River is falling.

At St. Joe the water is within a few inches of high water mark. Work has been commenced on the whole of the Tensas front. Every levee is carefully guarded.

At Natchez, river has risen one inch and is now only nine-tenth of a foot below the water mark of 1882.

Planters in Concordia and Tensas Parish are removing their stock to the hills of Mississippi.

At Bayou Sara, the river rose 11-2 inches. Morgan sea levee is now all right.

Baton Rouge reports no breaks. River stationary.

Bad Break.

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—The Picayune's Tallulah, La., special says: Raleigh levee broke in front of Dr. Wylie's house at 5 o'clock this afternoon, 100 feet wide, 8 feet deep.

A Dangerous Position.

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—The Picayune's Newellton (Texas parish) special: Assistant United States Engineer Hardie says the old Point Pleasant levee, three-fourths of a mile above Buck Ridge Landing, has sloughed on the landside at the point where the levee crosses the slough. There were about fourteen feet of water standing against this levee on the front, and it is surrounded by several feet of water on the landside, which makes it quite difficult to obtain dirt to repair the dangerous points. There are some who regard this levee as in a very dangerous position, but Mr. Hardie says there is no immediate danger. Weather clear and cold.

Clear at Greenville.

GREENVILLE, MISS., March 17.—The weather was clear and cool and the river has risen only one inch in twenty-four hours. Reports from all points in the levee district show that the levees remain firm. The levee officials say that unless there is a heavy storm the levees can stand a foot or more of additional rise.

The Railroads All Right.

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—All the railroads centering here have informed the board of trade that their lines are not at all interrupted by reason of the floods, except in the case of the Louisville, New Orleans and Texas road, which is temporarily interrupted by a break in the levees at Nita, but expects to resume traffic today.

The Latest.

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—The crevasse was reported at 5 o'clock and in fifteen minutes was fifteen feet wide and widening fast. The last report was that the water was three feet at Fairview. The telegraph operator says he is alone there and is afraid to go to bed for fear the water might catch him. He says probably no attempt has been made to close the break at this time.

A few minutes after the break occurred Secretary Snyder started for the scene with the steamer Charleston and barges and with sacks. Night came on and the operator can get no information. The telegraph line has gone down.

A great many people are preparing to remove live stock, while others say they are going to fight the flood. Nearly all the people in this section are hard at work making boats and levees.

This crevasse will inundate the entire bottom country as far down as Delta, Louisiana.

Bond Purchases.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The treasury department has purchased $184,000 four per cent bonds at 123 flat. The treasury statement of United States bonds purchased from August 3rd, 1887 to and including March 15th, 1889, shows: Amount purchased, $126,048,850 fours, $135,452,550 four and one-halfs, $262,501,900 total; cost $160,569,817.03 fours, $146,987,174.91 four and one-half, $306,556,991.94 total; cost at maturity, $218,747,697.50 fours, $152,908,962.70 four and one-half $371,651,660.20 total; saving, $58,177,886.47 fours, $6,916,787.79 four and one-half, $65,094,668.26.

Weather Crop Bulletin.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The weather crop bulletin issued for the week ending to day says that freezing weather continues in the northwest, where the season is backward and the ground frozen, and although the rainfall has been less than usual in this section, ample moisture is reported. The recent cold weather has proved injurious to wheat and fruit in Michigan, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa and Indiana, and farm work delayed by the late spring. The freezing weather in the early part of the month extended as far southward as the Gulf states, and Georgia and North Carolina, with injurious effect upon all fruit and vegetables, and in many localities fruit trees are reported as seriously injured.

Mrs. Cleveland Lays a Cornerstone.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Mrs. Cleveland performed the ceremony of laying the cornerstone of the new building of the eye and ear infirmary at Second avenue and Thirteenth street Saturday. Chauncey M. Depew, who was to have presided over the exercises, was prevented by illness from doing so, and Hon. Abram S. Hewitt took his place. Bishop Potter offered prayer, and George William Curtis delivered an address.

The Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, March 17.—The bank statement show the banks to have increased in the surplus reserves during the past week $839,350 and now hold $1,200,800 above the legal requirements.

An Arizona Appointment.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Attorney General Miller has appointed Calvin Wilmer assistant United States district attorney for Arizona.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, with its varied and excellent contents, is a library in itself.

It was indeed a happy thought to print an entire novel in each number.

Not a short novelette, but a long story such as you are used to get in book form and pay from one dollar to one dollar and a half for.

Not only that, but with each number you get an abundance of other contributions, which gives you a good magazine besides the novel.

The ringing blows which have been struck on the gateway of popular favor, have resounded throughout the entire land, and to-day Lippincott's Magazine stands in the front rank of monthly publications, and is the most widely-read-and-talked-of publication of its kind in the world. AROUND THE COUNTY.

A "Blue Jay" entertainment is the latest thing in Adrain.

The electric light poles in Hudson are being painted.

Hudson honored St. Patrick's Day with a large celebration.

Mumps have been having a big run in the Adrian Public schools.

An amateur troupe will play the Confederate Spy at Palmyra soon.

Dr. Begel of Holloway is gaining quite a reputation as a lay preacher.

A new tailor shop has been opened in the postoffice building at Blissfield.

Hon. Wm. H. Waldby of Adrian has returned home from his California trip.

The late revival at Olive Branch church in Ogden resulted in 46 conversions.

Jas. Vescelius of Milan has been pulled for running a saloon without a license.

The passenger locomotives on the Mackinaw road now toot steamboat whistles.

The March meeting of the Board of Supervisors is in session at Adrian this week.

L. H. Potts of Adrian will soon open his store at Manitou Beach with a new stock of goods.

The revival meetings at Addison have closed the debating society, but the saloon still holds out.

A vestry choir of thirty voices connected with Christ church at Adrian is preparing a special service for the coming Easter.

Three young men in Hudson fell into the mill pond last week with their best clothes on. Gone to look for McGinty, likely.

Geo. W. Ford, of South Riga, hauled three loads of red oak lumber to Toledo, last week, for which he received $22 per thousand.

A telegraph wire has been stretched from the depot to the store, at Manitou, and that station is now connected with the outside world.

The Geneva Patrons of Industry turned out the other day and chopped twenty cords of wood for an invalid brother, Chas. Langdon.

Drs. M. R. Morden and Jewett Williams, of Adrian, have been appointed attending physicians of the county house for the coming year.

New cars are arriving daily for the use of the Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinaw. The cars are fine ones, and are started out on the road as soon as received.—Toledo Bee.

The Tecumseh News committed the criminal error of omitting seventeen names in writing up the business men's carnival at Clinton, and 99 per cent of the seventeen are angry, with a cap. A.—Adrian Times.

A Tecumseh man offers to be one of ten to put up $100 each for the improvement of roads leading into that village. Are there ten men in Blissfield who would put up that amount for roads here?—Blissfield Advance.

It being desirable to pump ice on the mill pond at Hudson the other night, the East side engine was brought out for the purpose and found to be frozen up solid, and wouldn't budge a grain. What a glorious machine to have run to a fire!

Talk about your vigorous young men! Here is Abraham Cramer, a wealthy Medina farmer 87 years old, who has lived alone the past winter and done his own cooking, besides going twice each day three-fourths of a mile to feed and care for 33 head of cattle. So says a Medina correspondent of the Hudson Post.

Wednesday morning the body of a man was found upon the Ann Arbor road near Alexis, which was discovered by the engineer of the passenger train coming north. It proved to be that of a brakeman, on freight train, which arrived at Toledo at an early hour that morning. It is supposed that he fell between the cars while in motion. The body was cut in two and horribly mangled. His name is given as Malony, and is said to live at Milan.—Dundee Reporter.

The Detroit Journal of Friday has this despatch from Adrian: Mrs. Helen Sisson of Brooklyn, is suing Llewellyn Sisson, of Clinton, Lenawee county, for divorce. She claims that 25 years ago Sisson drove her from his home and she has seen him but once during that time. She said in her evidence yesterday that she wouldn't know her husband if she should meet him on the street. Sisson denies that he ever treated his wife cruelly, but avers that she left him because she couldn't get along with his parents.

Mr. Chas. Humphrey has purchased the interest of Mr. Wm. Corbin in the Adrian Packing Company. This is a good thing all around. Mr. Corbin makes sale of a business which his health prevented him from attending to as he wished and as it needed, and the company in Mr. Humphrey's person is reinforced with a prompt, careful, thorough business man. The stock on hand will be disposed of by Messrs. Lamble and Corbin, but contracts for new business will be made with the newly constituted firm.—Adrian Times.

On Saturday, March 8th, Mrs. Uri Decker, of Wolf Creek, reached the eighty-second mile stone in life's roadway, and the event was celebrated by five of her eight children spending the day with her, and all enjoying themselves highly. Mrs. Decker has been a victim from the grip, but is recovering from its effects. There were present Sidney Decker of Muskegon, Joseph Decker of Adrian, Mrs. George Turner of Cambridge, Mrs. Geo. W. Fleming, of this city, Mrs. Luther Wood, of Palmyra, and Uncle Joseph Baker and wife, the latter being Mrs. Decker's sister. The day passed in the pleasantest manner, and it need not be said that a most excellent dinner formed not the smalest part of the entertainment of the occasion.—Adrian Times.

WM. MONTGOMERY.

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidney, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles should remember that no other remedy in the world will so spedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

THE COMING CENSUS.

John C. Sharp, of Jackson, Supervisor of the First census district of Michigan, which includes Lenawee county, has decided to appoint one enumerator for each of the four wards of Adrian, and the work of taking the census will begin on the morning of June 2. The law provides that in all towns of 10,000 or more population the census must be completed within two weeks from the time it is begun. Throughout the county, also, each voting precinct will be a census district with one enumerator. In the cities the enumerators will be paid at so much per capita, but in the rural districts, where a distant family might be neglected, the pay will be per diem. All questions asked by the enumerator must be answered under a severe penalty of law, and he must not be delayed, hampered or misinformed. It is the government that asks the questions and the enumerators are invested with sufficient power to enforce their positions. In addition to name, age, sex, birthplace, nationality, color, business, married state, etc., the government will take pains to find out how many aliens are enjoying the blessings of a free government while shirking its responsibilities.

AUBURN, N. Y., June 6.

F. E. C. MEDICINE CO.—I have been a great sufferer from kidney difficulties for a number of years. Have taken all kinds of remedies without benefit till I heard of F. E. C. Kidney Remedy. I have taken two bottles with most gratifying results. I am now entirely free from headache (from which I was a sufferer), and believe the worst forms of kidney disease can certainly be cured by its use.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court, for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Thursday, the 6th day of March in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of Francis Coates, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of John Britton, Jr., surviving executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, alleging among other things that the widow of said deceased has departed this life: that the real estate devised said widow for life, excepting that specifically devised in remainder, has been disposed of in accordance with the terms of said will; that the duties of administration of the estate of said Francis Coates have been fully performed, save distribution and assignment; and that petitioner is ready to render his final administration account. And praying that said account may be allowed; that the funds remaining on hand and the real estate specifically devised, be by the order of this court distributed among and assigned to the parties entitled thereto under said will; that petitioner and the estate of Edwin B. Wood, deceased, be discharged from the administration of said trust; and for such other order and decree as to this court shall seem meet and just.

It is ordered that Tuesday, the 8th day of April next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the Heirs at Law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

THE STANDARD.

HENRY GEORGE, Editor and Proprietor.

A Fearless Exponent of Principles and a Weekly Record of Important Facts Affecting Social Problems and Rational Politics.

Interesting to all, and indispensible to the student of political principles and the great social problems of our times.

THE STANDARD advocates The Single Tax, which means the abolition of all taxes on labor or the products of labor; that is to say, the abolition of all taxes save one tax levied on the value of land irrespective of improvements.

Free Trade, not tariff reform, but REAL free trade; that is, as perfect freedom of trade with the whole world as now exists between the States of our Union.

Ballot Reform, no humbug envelope system, but the real Australian system, the first requisite of which is the exclusive use at elections of official ballots, furnished by the State, and prepared and cast by the voter in compulsory secrecy.

Terms: One year, $2.50; six months, 1.25.
Payable in advance. Sample copies sent free on application.

For the convenience of those who wish to inform themselves as to the general principles, we will send on receipt of a two-cent stamp, three tracts: "The American Farmer," by Henry George jr; "Farmers and the Single Tax," by Thomas G. Shearman; and "The Case Plainly Stated," by H. F. Ring.

What a Difference

between the WOMAN who is wedded to old-fashioned ideas and she who is bright enough to appreciate a new one. Everybody is striving to get something to make life easier—often it's right beside them—those who are bright enough to embrace it get the benefits, those who don't go backwards—their work grows harder. Pearline makes life easier and cleaner. Washing and cleaning done with Pearline has about enough work in it to make it good exercise—but not enough to tire the body or ruffle the temper.

Not ours, but the word of the millions who use it as to whether it hurts the hands, clothes or paint—probably your neighbors can tell you all about PEARLINE.

Send it back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, the honest thing to do is—send it back. 167 JAMES PYLE, New York.

The FORUM is of great value to that part of my college work which deals with practical politics and current questions. Two sets are hardly enough for daily use by students.—Prof. ALFRED BUSHNELL HART, of Harvard.

I consider THE FORUM as furnishing the most intelligent and sympathetic audience that a thoughtful writer can find to address in any land.—Prof. ALEXANDER WINCHELL, of the University of Michigan.

THE FORUM continues to hold its place as the foremost of our magazines, for the variety, the value, and the weight of its contributions.—THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There has come forward no problem of grave importance since THE FORUM was established that has not been discussed in its pages by masters of the subject. Announcements of forthcoming articles can seldom be made long in advance, for THE FORUM'S discussions are always of problems of present concern. Every such problem that the year 1890 will bring forward will be discussed, whether in politics, or religion, or social science, or practical affairs. The January number will contain a reply by ex-Speaker J. G. CARLISLE to Senator Cullom's recent article on "How the Tariff Affects the Farmer."

HUMAN NATURE.

If you are interested in the study of HUMAN NATURE and Character, and the improvement of yourself and others in any way, we would like to call your attention to the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL AND SCIENCE OF HEALTH, a well-known magazine which has been published for fifty years, and is devoted to all that will improve men Mentally, Morally, or Physically. It is the only magazine of its kind published in this country, and in every way the most important.

The specialty of PORTRAITS of distinguished, or notorious persons, with studies of their character and sketches of their lives, which has always been a marked and attractive feature of the JOURNAL, will still lead the host of good things prepared for the reader.

No one can study themselves or others and not be greatly benefited by the results, and therefore no one can afford NOT to read the JOURNAL. A knowledge of HUMAN NATURE would enable us to understand ourselves and others and to avoid many of the disappointments in life.

TERMS.—Monthly at $2 a year, or 20 cents a Number. To each new subscriber is given either the PHRENOLOGICAL BUST or NEW PHRENOLOGICAL CHART Premium. When the premiums are sent, 15 cents extra must be received with each subscription to pay postage on the JOURNAL and the expense of boxing and packing the Bust, which will be sent by express, or No. 2, a smaller size, or the Chart Premium, will be sent by mail, postpaid. Send 10 cents for specimen Numbers, Premium List, Posters, Catalogue of books, etc. Address

BRITTON BUDGET.

Some of our early farmers are sowing oats.

Diptheria and scarlet fever have both disappeared.

Knifin and Tripp's mill resumed operations this week.

Wiggins and Bachman have just completed some very fine bookcases for different parties in the village.

The I. O. G. T. have organized a lodge in Britton, or at least the organization is under way, and we expect the installation of officers will soon be announced.

The village was captured Monday night by Dr. Charlie and his Kickapoos. No blood was shed, not a scalp gone, but one of the performers certainly cracked the glass of his watch when he "just struck one."

Our board of health is enjoying a season of activity just now. That's right. There certainly are a good many nuisances existing right in our midst dangerous to the public health, and if there is any way to abate them let's abate.

The donation last week netted $110. Not bad, considering the inclement weather. Quite a delegation from Ridgeway attended. Everyone seemed to enjoy himself hugely and Charlie Dubois especially. He gave everybody the P. I. grip and that is far ahead of the L. A. grip.

Will Rinn caught some boys in his house—or rather in his cellar—the other evening, stealing cider. These were a part of a party who have had considerable devilry laid at their door recently, and as their escapade above referred to fully divulges who the guilty parties are, we would suggest to the boys that it is about time to call a halt. Out of respect for their family connections we withhold names this time. Look out! Next time we will let her go.

The shock to the community by the death of Clayton Smith was keenly felt by the school of which he had so recently been an active member. On the day of burial the school was convened and then dismissed and Clayton's desk appropriately decorated by his schoolmates. Clayton was one of our best boys and kind words we hear on all sides prove in what estimation he was held. Memorial services will be held at the church next Sunday. The family have the sympathy of the entire community.

St. Patrick has no reason to be proud of the events which transpired here on the 17th. We have nothing to say against the masque ball in itself, but all the drinking, fighting and brawling which followed in its wake we are down on hard with both feet. We have taken no little pains to learn who were engaged in this most disgraceful conduct and the little satisfaction gained by the investigation lies in the fact that although Britton was the scene, the parties engaged were not Brittonites.

The Britton Dramatic Club, a newly organized institution, is engaged upon a play which will soon be put upon the boards. The members are among our best citizens and are going to no little expense and trouble to succeed. The Club have just had a stage built in Exelby's Hall. We understand the first public entertainment will be given in connection with the closing exercises of the village school. Of this, however, the public will have due notice.

Parties who have dropped letters in the postoffice addressed to "The Herald Cor." should send their communications direct to the Herald office, as dynamite and infernal machines are not conducive to the happiness of a scribbler, while the "devil" in the office grows fat and prospers on that kind of diet. Besides, it's annoying to run your eye over the advertised list and see the legend "dropped, Herald Correspondent," bringing up the tail end of the list.

We hear some talking about a library and reading room, of which we spoke some time ago. Go ahead, good people, talk it up. The dramatic club will flourish for a time; the Kickapoos will seek new fields; the P. I.'s will lie down to sleep off their satiety; the Good Templars will wane because there are no saloons in Britton; the G. A. R.'s time is limited to the life of its members and so are the S. of V.; but a library will go on after all these are gone forever. Talk about it. Work it up. This is for your children's and the public good.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Mark Terry, of Adrian, spent Sunday at the home of E. W. Rappleye.

Other cases of diptheria are reported in the neighborhood but not serious.

Patrick and James Curry went to Cone to attend a funeral Saturday.

Ed. Freer, of Mason, spent the Sabbath at the home of F. E. Pocklington and family.

Joseph Hamilton, of Dundee, was in the village on business last week a day or two.

Willis Chatfield, of Holloway, was in the village last week Friday on business.

Mrs. Jennie Bangs, of Tecumseh, called on Mrs. John Arner and family Saturday afternoon.

Miss Lou Arner spent the Sabbath as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lamont Bangs, of Tecumseh.

Mrs. Nathan Voorhees, of Adrian, made her aunt, Mrs. John Arner, a visit Monday.

W. P. Cadmus, our boot and shoe dealer, made a business trip to Toledo Friday and Saturday of last week.

Albert Zimmerman, of Tecumseh, was in the village Thursday of last week looking up hickory for his handle works.

Easter Sunday a week from next Sunday. The Sabbath school is preparing an Easter exercise for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Eli Beebe, who have been the guests of their aunt, Mrs. Hall, for several days, left for their home in Connecticut the first of the week.

The gentlemen who went to Devil's Lake fishing last week returned Thursday with a fine assortment of the finny fruit and report a splendid time.

T. S. VanDuser, who is visiting his parents, is buying butter to take with him to Duluth, where he has a situation as steward on a steamer on Lake Superior the coming season.

The next regular meeting of the Library circle will be held next week Tuesday evening at the library. The program is being prepared by H. J. Williams and Miss Louise Rogers, committee.

Harry Smith, tinsmith for the hardware firm of H. J. Williams, has rented the Lydia Miller property of E. C. VanVleet for a year and will move as soon as it can be repaired sufficiently for occupation.

S. P. Smith, who has been in the grocery business here for the past ten years, has sold his entire stock to W. F. Clack and will retire from the mercantile business for the present. We regret very much to have him retire, as he was one of the best business men in the place.

The public entertainment the Library association is preparing is receiving special attention. It will be presented to the public about the middle of next month. As soon as the program is completed it will be published.

The Prohibition caucus will be held at Exelby's Hall at Britton on Saturday afternoon of the present week, for the purpose of placing in nomination a ticket for the local election to take place April 7.

The following salutatory we clipped from the Salida Mail we received from the editor, and send it to the HERALD, thinking it may interest the readers of the Rambles. As the present editor of the Mail was once a citizen of our village we in behalf of his school-day friends extend our best wishes for his success in his new venture.

SALUTATORY.

With this issue the undersigned assumes editorial management of THE MAIL. We shall indeed be gratified if, under our management, THE MAIL shall continue to enjoy the success which has attended it under the able management of our predecessor.

It shall be our constant aim to maintain the high reputation which THE MAIL has already secured. The policy of the paper will be unchanged, and as ever it will be devoted to the best interests of Salida and the surrounding territory. We shall endeavor to the best of our ability to advertise the resources of this vicinity, and will lend our assistance to every enterprise which may have this for its object. We shall avoid all factional feuds, but labor solely for the interest of the community at large. Our interests are inseparably allied with yours. We wish to become personally acquainted with you all and to this end would be pleased to have you call at our office.

Very Respectfully,
M. D. SNEDICOR.

The Spring Medicine.

The popularity which Hood's Sarsaparilla has gained as a spring medicine is wonderful. It possesses just those elements of health-given, blood-purifying and appetite restoring which everybody seems to need at this season. Do not continue in a dull, tired, unsatisfactory condition when you may be so much benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood and makes the weak strong.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Jas. Sutherland is moving into his own house again.

Miss Fannie Kelley is on the sick list—mumps.

Manson and Harry Osgood spent Saturday at Adrian.

John Wright died at his home Monday night of heart disease.

H. E. Parshall and wife visited friends in town Thursday.

Mrs. Geo. Bethel, of Willis, visited her daughter Adda last week.

Uncle Ned Broadbent, of Clinton, shook hands with old friends in this place last Friday.

Mr. Edgar Rogers and Miss Ida Carpenter were married at the home of the bride on Thursday eve.

Will Wilson will move on the place recently vacated by Jacob Wright and Fred Hauser on the Jas. Starin place.

M. Hines has moved from Mr. Wickwire's farm to A. D. Macham's house, and Mr. O. Haak occupies the house he vacates.

Mrs. O. E. Carpenter returned from Clinton Wednesday morning, where she was called to see her daughter, who has been sick.

Miss May Kelley has gone to Tecumseh to spend a few days with friends and from there she will return to her home in Bay City.

The logs at the station will not trouble those shipping any more. The last loads were shipped on Thursday and only a few unfit for shipping were left, and these are to be removed soon.

The Confederate Spy will be given at the Hall on Saturday evening by the Palmyra grange. As they have good scenery and a good company it will probably be the best entertainment of the season.

The meetings at the F. M. Church were not very well attended last week. What is the trouble with the people around the village? Many of the men here failed to attend. It is rather discouraging for a minister to waste his breath on the handful of saints and sinners who did have the courage to go in spite of mud. The church was full Sunday evening, it being quarterly meeting, and quite a number came from a distance Saturday, but most of them returned to their homes Monday.

MACON MUSIC.

Frank Sage is down with the measles.

Democratic caucus at Grange Hall, Thursday, April 3rd, at one o'clock.

John Frost, Sr., is visiting his son and daughter at Deerfield.

The Prohibition caucus will be held at Grange Hall on Tuesday, April 1st, at 2 P. M.

A bald eagle has made its appearance in this vicinity. It has been seen by Spencer Morgan and others.

The Baptist society will meet at their church March 30, at 9 A. M., to organize a Sabbath School.

We predict no more cold weather this spring as the swans were flying west and northward last Monday.

Thomas Liddell has sold his farm to John Pratt, of Saline, who will take possession about the first of April.

Several of the young people of this place will attend the teachers' examination at Adrian Saturday, March 29.

The temperance tea meeting will hold their next meeting at the home of Mrs. Mark Pennington on Friday afternoon, March 28th.

DEVILS LAKE DOINGS.

Mrs. H. E. Anderson went to Tecumseh Friday.

Jake Andrews has moved into William Willsey's house.

Geo. Elsworth and wife went to Tecumseh last week.

George Terry has moved to Dewitt Turner's and expects to work for him this year.

Ed. Spear has rented a house on the turnpike and will move there the first of April.

Another boy in the family of W. F. Anderson, of Tecumseh, making four in all to call Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Anderson grandpa and grandma.

On Friday last a freight train was wrecked at this place, the engine and six cars running off the track, tearing it up for several rods. Fortunately nobody was hurt, although there were some very narrow escapes. The rails spreading apart was the cause of the wreck.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

School resumed last Monday, with Geo. R. Miller, (second term) as teacher.

Macon students of the Ridgeway school are getting fidgety over the coming teachers' examination at Adrian.

Wm. E. Spaulding, who has just closed a term of school in Franklin, returned to his claim in McAllister, Logan county, Kansas, last Friday.

W. B. Peck, of Summerfield, Monroe county, has just been granted a pension of $6 per month and $600 back pay. Warren steps high.

The new telegraph is working very smoothly now. Still there is a hitch in the center of the line, whereby round trip messages are uncertain. The 50 operators are advancing with commendable order and speed.

George A. Wilkins and wife are pioneers from away back in the thirties and what they don't know about pioneer life is not worth remembering. They have traveled life's journey together 55 years. George is just thirty days the oldest. Last year the friends celebrated her birthday, but this year was George's turn; so on the 20th inst., it being his 78th birthday, the friends to the number of 33 congregated to congratulate and cheer the aged pair on life's rugged way. A grand feast was provided and a very enjoyable afternoon was spent in reminiscences of the past, realities of the present and prospects of the future, concluding with the presentation of a nice base rocker to cheer and comfort "mine host" in his declining years.

RAISIN RACKET.

Edwin B. Taft has moved into T. G. Mead's tenant house and is going to work for him by the year.

Cyrus D. Crandall, prosecuting attorney of Crystal City, was visiting his mother in the Valley last week. The north woods seem to agree with him in more ways than one.

School closed in Dist. No. 6 Saturday afternoon with appropriate exercises of singing, dialogues and essays, the house being well filled with visitors;—Miss Mattie Jones is teacher.

The scholars at the Seminary are expecting a treat next week in the way of examinations. Those having a class per cent. of 95 on an average during the term are relieved of the pleasant task.

Last Thursday Raisin lost one of the best farmers that it has had in many a day. Chas. Bidwell having rented his farm has moved to Tecumseh. Those who know him consider him an accommodating and thorough-going man. Charles will miss those little pigs that he used to watch to see if he could not see them grow.

THE G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

An Outline of Arrangements for the Gathering at Adrian.

Extensive arrangements are being made for the coming State Encampment of the G. A. R., to be held in Adrian on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 1, 2 and 3.

The most elaborate decorations ever attempted in any city in the State will be a prominent feature of the gathering.

Camp-fires have been arranged for on the evenings of the 1st and 2d, at Croswell Opera House, Woodbury Post Room, and the Methodist church, and the following named are to be present and participate:

Gen. R. A. Alger.
Gen. William Gibson, of Ohio.
Gen. J. C. Black, of Illinois.
Past Dept. Commander Washington Gardner.
Col. O. A. Janes.
J. G. Rutherford.
Department Commander Michael Brown.
Col. Henry M. Duffield.
National President, Mrs. Wittemyer, of Wisconsin W. R. C.
Department President, Mrs. Thompson, of Flint.
Past National President, Mrs. Kate B Sherwood, of Ohio.
Col. M E Hall, Inspector General.
Col. Williams, of Grand Rapids, Department Commander S. of V. and others.

A general canvass has been made of the citizens for entertainment, and all comers can rest assured of a hearty welcome and good treatment.

For the cure of the inflamation and congestion called "cold in the head" there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious developement of the symtoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh, after all other modes of treatment have failed.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAR. 27

Shaking the bloody shirt is a poor way for farmers to pay the interest on their mortgages.

If the only way to destroy the sugar trust is to abolish the sugar tax, then put sugar on the free list.

The Blair bill was killed last week in the senate by a vote of 36 to 3? The epitaph on its tombstone should be: "Talked to Death."

An increased duty on clothing, and a reduced tax on snuff, alchol and tobacco d es not strike the average citizen favorably. And this is what the McKinley tariff bill proposes.

The passage of a federal election law would be one of those political blunders that is worse than a crime. It would paralyze the business revival in the South, injure the negro, and injure the Republican party itself.

One point for farmers to investigate is: Why can an American made plow, or reaper and mower be bought cheaper in Canada than in the United States? Another point for consumers to consider is: What proportion of a custom's rebate on goods manufactured from taxed raw materials, comes back into their pockets?

The problem during the Cleveland administration was how to deal with the treasury surplus in such manner as to give satisfaction to the country. Cleveland thought the wise plan would be to reduce taxation. The country did not agree with him. The problem before the Harrison administration is likely to be how to deal with a treasury deficit.

The effort to put sugar on the free list seems to be growing in strength. There are many good reasons in favor of this action, but the sugar tax is a revenue tax now and it should be put on the free list wholly or not meddled with at all. Cutting the tax on raw sugar alone would actually aid the sugar trust and deprive the government of so much revenue.

While Congress is squabbling over post-masters and collectors, over rules, over pensions, over seats, over the world's fair, over everything but the subjects which are provoking the farmers of the northwest to these loud outcries, another unpropitious season, another bad harvest, may provoke a revolution in politics unequaled by any since the Whig party was annihilated and the Democratic party was submerged.—Detroit Journal.

A Minneapolis republican journal says that "the republican party has the offices and that is what is troubling the democrats." The Minneapolis editor is mistaken. The democrats are not troubled and the republican party has not got the offices. Said offices are reposing in grandpa's hat, and the democrats just now are enjoying the troubles of the republicans who are nosing about that ancient and well-worn head-gear.—Chicago Times.

The Pittsburg Dispatch has this to say about the sugar tariff: "The proposition pending in the House to settle the matter of the sugar duties by putting raw sugars on the free list and keeping the duty on refined, is simply the one way of adjusting that issue which would most thoroughly defeat the public considerations that should be taken into account. It would enable the Sugar Trust to get its raw sugar cheaper than now, and at the same time continue the bleeding process now practised upon the long-suffering public which buys refined sugar.

President Harrison will soon be calling upon the Democats to save him from his political friends. Another prominent Republican—the brother of a United States Senator—and who claims to have, by dint of hard political work and shrewd political management, contributed toward the election of the President, has publicly expressed his opinion of Mr. Harrison as follows; "After such a struggle as that which resulted in the election of Harrison, it is sickening in the extreme to see that, instead of securing a man of full stature, great enough in brain and big enough in heart to fill the greatest place on earth that man can be called upon to fill, we have a disappointing political dwarf, a man who is controlled entirely by a consuming self-esteem."

CHAFF FOR THE FARMER.

The McKinley tariff bill, which has been made public, seems to be based upon the assumption that the farmers are all fools. Under our present war tariff the farmer has been used as a pack horse for so many years that he is beginning to grow restless. All the products of the farm are sold at free trade prices in a foreign market, while the principal articles which he has to buy for farm and household use, are purchased at high tariff prices in the home market. He has thus been taxed to death on what he buys, to enrich a few monopolists, and is obliged to compete with the whole world in the world's market in disposing of his export crops. This policy pursued for a series of years is beginning to have its legitimate effect. The farmer himself is reading and posting himself on this tariff question and he has finally made up his mind as to the real cause of his present condition.

* * *

The sop with which the farmer has been fed hitherto, and which has reconciled him to pay the bounties exacted from him on what he buys, has been the tariff on wool. True, it has been demonstrated over and over again that the wool tariff did him no good; that the price of wool was fixed by the law of supply and demand; that the price of wool, for a series of years, was higher under a free trade tariff before the war, than it has been since the war under a high protective tariff; and that even if the tariff did increase the price of his wool, that was more than offset by the enhanced cost of the clothing and woolen goods for himself and his family. But his patience and long suffering kindness have finally become exhausted and he is beginning to speak out in emphatic language, and demand a reduction of taxes on manufactured goods. He is beginning to appreciate the fact that the tariff on wool is a very uncertain benefit to say the least; that it helps him sometimes more and sometimes less, but generally less; that the true political economy is to save the plunder that has been taken out of him, rather than to attempt to recoup his loss by plundering somebody else.

* * *

This is the situation to-day. How does the McKinley tariff bill propose to meet it? By adopting the homeopathic system of treatment, similia similibus curantur. The patient is sick unto death now from an overdose of the tariff, and Doctor McKinley would administer more high tariff, in large and frequent doses, to cure him. A cut is to be made in the sugar tax, by which the sugar trust can get their raw sugar free, a slice is to be taken off the tobacco tax, while the tariff on tin plate, woolen goods and many other articles of household use is actually raised.

"But," says the tariff reformer, "won't the farmer kick on this?" "Oh, no," says Doctor McKinley, "we've got the farmer fixed all right. We have remembered the man who holds the plow. In fact this is essentially a farmers, tariff from top to bottom. The wool schedule is slightly increased on carpet wools and remains intact on first class wools. The duty on butter remains as now. In addition to these, our bill imposes a tariff of 30 percent on barley and malt, 20 cents a pound on hops, 20 cents a bushel on apples, 10 cts. dozen on eggs. The duty on hay is increased from $2.00 to $4.00 a ton. The farmer cannot fail to see the blessings of protection as exemplified in this bill."

* * *

But will the farmer see it? That remains to be seen. The farmer has been fed on chaff so long that Doctor McKinley thinks he can live and thrive with chaff as a permanent diet. Under the present tariff the following taxes and bounties were paid last year on articles which the farmer actually bought. Sugar 70 per cent; tin plate about 40 per cent; knit cotton goods, 39 per cent; cotton clothing, 35 per cent; earthern and stone ware, 58 per cent; bagging for cotton 44 per cent; window glass 73 per cent; chains 44 per cent; woolen goods, 70 per cent. Not one cent's reduction is made on any of these articles except sugar, while the tax on some of them is actually raised, and the reduction on sugar is made in such a manner as to foster and fatten the sugar trust instead of killing it. The pastime of plundering the farmer is to be continued, and what does the farmer gain in return? A protection of ten cents a pound on wool, which does not protect; a tariff on wheat, barley, and other export crops, the price of which is regulated in the foreign market, tariff or no tariff; and a tax on peas, eggs, hay and a few articles of this kind, which are only imported in insignificant amount along the Canadian border, and which would not be imported at all, if our own farmers raised enough to supply the home market. If this McKinley bill isn't a contrivance to feed the farmer with chaff, pray, what is it?

STILL VERY HUNGRY.

LIKE OLIVER TWIST THEY ARE ASKING FOR MORE.

The Insatiable Appetite of the Glass Works—They Are Thoroughly Prosperous, but They Do Not Cease to Beg. Enormous Duties Paid on Glass.

The window glass importers of New York, Boston and Philadelphia have recently held a meeting in Springfield, Mass., at which most of the firms represented made comparisons of their figures to show what the average duties on window glass have been during the past three years.

The figures of eight firms were compared, and the average duty was found to have been 105 per cent. One firm paid last year average duties of 116 per cent., and the lowest average was 104 per cent., the average for the year being 108.6 per cent.

Duties on some sizes of window glass, however, ran far above these figures. One payment of 219 per cent. some time in 1888 can be seen on the books of a prominent New York firm.

The figures given at Springfield were estimated upon the cost of the packed glass on board ship at Antwerp. But the cost of freight, insurance, etc., is also a protection to the American manufacturer, and ought rightly to be added to the duties in making up the total protection. These additional charges would change the 105 per cent. average above given to from 115 to 125 per cent.

Is not this protection enough?

Our manufacturers say no; and so they have been before Mr. McKinley's committee to ask for still higher duties. Do these men want the earth? The window glass industry in this country is no longer an infant. It is 100 years old; but it still cries for pap. Our infant of a century in its "No. 10 shoes" toddles up to the pap dispensers at Washington and asks for more pap and a bigger spoon.

The importers have not appeared before the committee to ask for lower duties, for they remember that Mr. McKinley has already fathered one bill which treats importers as if they were enemies of the country, and of which The Boston Commercial Bulletin says that it is "fitter for the era of the Plantagenets than for the Nineteenth century."

The manufacturers offer their familiar plea that wages are higher with us than in Europe. It is their old rot that everybody has become so disgusted with—comparing the price of daily wages here with the same in Belgium, and ignoring the fact that the only true basis for a comparison of wages is the percentage of labor cost in the total product. Let them make that comparison.

But what are their figures on wages? Two years ago Mr. F. L. Bodine, president of the American Window Glass Manufacturing association, who usually acts as chief spokesman of this industry before committees of congress, told the senate committee that the average wages of glass blowers in Belgium were $50 to $100 per month, and in the United States $75 to $150. He also told the committee that the Belgian laborers worked all the year round, but that the American season for glass making averaged less than eight months.

Let us make it eight months—and here is the result:

Twelve months in Belgium at $100	$1,200
Eight months in the United States at $150	1,200

And the difference is zero.

But it is a well known fact that the wages of glass workers in this country are kept at the highest possible point by the cast iron rules of the National Window Glass Workers' association, which regulates the number of apprentices to be allowed in each factory. Too many young men are not permitted to learn the trade, for Mr. James Campbell, the president of the association, knows that the supply of labor regulates wages. When he goes before Mr. McKinley's committee, however, he thinks that the tariff regulates wages, and accordingly he asks to have the duties increased.

Mr. Campbell's association keeps the number of apprentices so low that the working force of blowers actually does not meet the demand in rush seasons like the present, when glass is taken from the factories as fast as it is made. There have been complaints that some of the manufacturers were delayed in filling orders by reason of the inefficiency of untrained blowers put in for lack of experienced workmen.

This labor, too, is more than half foreign. The Glass Workers' association, although it caused the passage of the contract labor law, does not object to importing blowers on its own account when there is an unexpected demand which it cannot fill. The glass blowers who recently came here from Belgium to work in the Jeannette factory in Pennsylvania came through the instrumentality of that very association, coming by different routes and turning up mysteriously at their common destination.

It is claimed by these applicants for higher duties, by manufacturers and workmen alike, that importations of French window glass have greatly increased during the past seven years. There has been some increase, but the importations last year were 8,000,000 pounds less than in 1888. This is shown by the latest treasury reports.

But the industry in America has increased out of all proportion to the enlarged importations. In 1879–80 we had only 646 pots in our factories; this season there are 1,298.

The window glass men are the last men who should ask for increased duties at this time. Prices have recently advanced 35 per cent. for French window glass. Furthermore, our glass industry is in a most flourishing condition. Prices have advanced, the factories are kept busy, and at the recent meeting of the Western Association of Window Glass Manufacturers at Pittsburg it was a subject of congratulation that the best brands of American glass are now displacing foreign glass in the eastern markets. Why should there be still greater protection for these thriving infants? Are they not well fed?

THE FARMERS, TOO.

A Prohibitory Tariff for the Hop Growers. Our Large Exportations.

It is not to be wondered at that at a time when the tariff mania is attacking so many people of all conditions and occupations some of the farmers have caught the infection, too. The farmers, as is well known, have almost no "protection," and all the other protected classes prey upon the farmers as upon no other portion of our population. The farmers are so numerous and are so scattered over the land, have so little organization and so little means for getting their case heard by those in authority, that they get fleeced right and left, and are then told that it is all for their own good.

It is almost natural, therefore, that a limited number of farmers, pursuing a special form of industry like hop growing, should take advantage of their position to join in the universal clamor for high and higher "protection."

The hop growers of New York have petitioned congress to raise the duty on hops to 25 cents a pound. The duty now levied is 8 cents a pound, and this is equal, at present prices, to 40 per cent. ad valorem. The duty asked for would equal 125 per cent. ad valorem. Mr. De Lano has accordingly introduced a bill to make the duty 20 cents a pound, equal to 100 per cent. ad valorem.

The hop merchants of New York city have presented a counter petition, in which they make out a strong case against the claims of the growers. According to the treasury reports we imported last year 5,584,000 pounds of hops, and we exported 10,038,000 pounds. As we are able to sell abroad twice as much hops as we buy, it is somewhat curious to see the reason for any increase.

The growers state that the hop industry is in a deplorable condition; their prices are lower than formerly; therefore congress must come to their relief. But the prices of wheat and corn are also much lower than formerly, and no amount of pretended protection can benefit the growers of those grains. Their surplus product, which is simply enormous, goes to foreign markets, and prices are regulated there by conditions beyond the reach of the strong arm of congress. The same is true of hops; one-fourth of our total product is sent abroad and receives the price prevailing in non-American markets.

Our growers will doubtless get their prohibitory duty through congress. But they should remember that it is a matter of much graver importance to them to have a market abroad for ten million pounds of American hops than to exclude from the American markets five and one-half million pounds of the foreign article. Retaliation abroad may result; for there have already been expressions of dissatisfaction among growers in foreign countries that American hops were invading their home markets. If there should be retaliation, the American grower may know who will be hurt most.

But is it not a comical thing that the American grower should ask a prohibitory duty against the very foreigner whose markets he successfully invades?

Another Trust in Prospect.

It is reported by The New York Commercial Bulletin that the manufacturers of ingrain carpets are in a bad way, prices being very low and competition very keen, and that a combination scheme is on foot.

This will be another one of the numerous trusts which are intrenched behind the tariff bulwark. Carpets of the kind named pay a duty equivalent to nearly half their cost abroad.

Here, then, is a case where "protection has done its work"—its first work. Sharp competition has been developed and prices have gone down. Hence protection must now do its second work—it must give birth to a trust for the purpose of getting more protection in another form. The president of the sugar trust remarked, recently that the great trust over which he presides was simply endeavoring to do for itself what congress had undertaken to do for it; in other words, to protect an industry by keeping prices up, and thus making goods dearer to the consumer.

But the protection of the carpet makers has had another effect. The high price of the wool they need has fostered the use of shoddy to an extent never before seen. The common coarse wool used in carpet making pays a duty of two and one-half cents a pound, thus adding about 25 per cent. to its cost. The senate bill of the last congress proposed to raise the duty to four cents a pound, or about 40 per cent. ad valorem. The present demands of the wool growers seem likely to result in an increase equally great, and perhaps greater, in the forthcoming tariff bill of Mr. McKinley's committee.

Where are those eminent Republicans in congress who have said that those industries which form themselves into trusts should have the tariff prop knocked from under them?

Let them speak out now.

England's Boom.

England is one of the countries which are spoken of by high tariff delegations before congressional committees as "the poor and poverty stricken nations of the earth."

But the commerce of England for the month of January reached a point never before attained by her, and was, consequently, greater than the commerce of any other nation at any time in the world's history.

The manufacturing industry of England is just now on such a boom that labor is reported to be actually scarce. The labor unions are not able to meet the demand for skilled laborers, and overtime is general in most of the larger establishments. The present year promises to be the most prosperous that England has ever had.

Will the protectionists then drop England from their familiar old "pauper labor" argument? Or will they change their tune and demand all the higher protection because the British laborer has full work and higher wages?

KOAL

BISMARCK.

Spurns Honors and Says the Emperor

WILL SOON RECALL HIM—"LE ROI M'E REVERRA."

The Cause of the Prince's Resignation—Five Hundred Russian Students Arrested and Imprisoned—The Czar Terrified by a Patriotic Woman—Sarah Bernhardt Claims Permission to Give the Passion Play.

BERLIN, March 24.—The recognized evening organs of Prince Bismarck declare that he has declined both the dukedom and a pension. Count Herbert Bismarck has requested that he be relieved of the office at once.

The Freisinnige Zietung says that at Thursday's luncheon Prince Bismarck used the expression, "Le roi me reverra."

Why Bismarck Had to Go.

BERLIN, March 24.—The North German Gazette asserts that the result of the recent elections and the loss of his once all powerful influence were the reasons for Prince Bismarck's resignation. The Gazette further says that the ex-Chancellor was not asked by anybody to reconsider his resignation.

The Tageblatt says that General Von Goltz, Inspector-General of Fortresses, will be appointed to succeed Herr Von Maybach, as Prussian minister of public works. General Von Goltz was in America in 1875 6, studying the American system of railroads.

Batch of Candidates for Siberia.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 24.—The students of the university of the academy of agriculture engaged in a serious riot here. The students insist upon the restoration of the liberal regulations of 1863, and the refusal of the authorities to comply with their demand led to the outbreak. Five hundred students were arrested and imprisoned. Troops guard the streets in the vicinity of the university, and all traffic in the neighborhood is stopped. The newspapers make no mention of the disturbances.

Extraordinary Act of the Russian Government.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 24.—The government has abandoned the prosecution of the woman Tchebrikova, who was charged with writing and sending to the czar a letter threatening that unless he modified his reactionary policy he would meet the fate of Peter III., Paul I., and Alexander II.

Gay Paris.

PARIS, March 24.—The fashionable world is again in Paris, Parisians and strangers have left the sunny South for the boulevards and cafes and drawing room entertainments, which consist mostly of choral afternoon musical soirees and teas. Theater parties are among the pleasures, as Paris is teeming with every variety of amusement, and never have the theatres had better attractions.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt opens in "Cleopatra" April 20 at the Porte St. Martin, and has permission, so she says, to play the Passion play in Paris. The theater has not been decided upon.

The Labor Conference.

BERLIN, March 24.—The Nachrichten announces that the work of the International Labor Conference is so far advanced that the final sittings are expected to be held on April 9. The decisions already protocoled the committees embrace these recommendations; Only males over fourteen years of age shall be employed in mines; female labor underground shall not be allowed; children's labor in factories must depend upon their completion of the prescribed school course; the employment at night of persons under fourteen years of age is prohibited, or where permitted only six hours labor out of twenty-four, with a half hour interval shall be required; the employment of children in unhealthy or dangerous trades is prohibited; Sunday shall be a day of rest in all employments except those in which work is necessary for the continuity of production, or which can only proceed at certain seasons.

THE BLACK EAGLE FLOPS ITS WINGS.

The Emperor held a chapter of the Black Eagle. It was a brilliant spectacle. His Majesty conferred the decoration of the order upon Princes Herman of Saxe Weimer, Prince George of Wales, Count Von Munster, the Prince of Pless and Herr Von Coetticher. The guests at the dinner given by Bismarck at night to his successor, General Von Caprivi, included all the members of the Prussian Ministry, the Secretaries of State, and Wenninger, Prince Bismarck's physician.

A Russian View.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 24.—The Grashdanin says: Prince Bismarck's resignation inaugurates an era of fatalism, new ideas and unexpected events, which will compel everybody to be on the alert."

The Journal de St. Petersbourg says that the resignation of Bismarck does not involve any change in the foreign policy of Germany. The Chancellor's withdrawal from office, the Journal declares, emphasizes the pacific declarations recently made by Emperor William.

Great Floods in Italy.

ROME, March 24.—The floods which have prevailed in many parts of Italy still continue. The damage already amounts to four million francs.

It is stated that the socialists will run thirty candidates in coming elections for members of the Chamber of Deputies.

CRISPI TO BE FEARED.

His Blundering Alone, Likely to Disturb Europe's Peace.

PARIS, March 24.—Count Benedetti, the French ambassador at Berlin at the outbreak of the France-Prussian war, said in an interview that Prince Bismarck's resignation should cause no alarm. In his opinion, the only danger to European peace lay in the blundering by Premier Crispi, of Italy or the possibly bankruptcy of Italy.

GLADSTONE TO RESIGN.

Rumored that He Will Withdraw From the Commons.

PARIS, March 24.—A special dispatch from London to the Galignanis Messenger reports that Mr. Gladstone intends to resign his seat in the house of commons.

Some One Handy With the Pen.

MADRID, March 24.—Forged notes amounting to a half million pesetas (about $96,000) have been discovered in a package of funds brought to a bank here from Seville.

A NAVAL OFFICER

Gets Into Hot Water and a Discharged Sailor Sues Him.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Lieutenant Commander Longnecker, of the receiving ship New Hampshire, stationed at Newport, Rhode Island, is now in trouble. The matter has been called to the attention of the navy department, but the department does not see its way clear to take any official action in the case. As far as the facts are known at the navy department it seems that a sailor named Carbrey who had served on the New Hampshire had received his discharge, of which fact Commander Longnecker was ignorant. Meeting the sailor afterwards, the sailor did not treat his former commander with that servility which the commander expected from a common sailor and he immediately caused his arrest and had him placed in the hold of the ship. Afterwards Commander Longnecker had him released. Civil action has been brought by Carbrey against Commander Longnecker, and the case has also been brought to the attention of Secretary Tracy. A civil suit will come in the Rhode Island Supreme court this week.

SHORT SKETCHES

Of Prominent Personages Dying Throughout the Country.

Colonel J. B. Hudson.

CAIRO, ILL., March 24.—Colonel J. B. Hudson, who had charge of Captain W. H. Halliday's plantation at Yellow Bay, Ark., died suddenly of congestion of the stomach. He leaves a wife and three children, who reside at Cairo. He was sixty-five years old and extensively known on the river.

Jane Chamblin.

MANCHESTER, O., March 24.—Jane Chamblin, an old pioneer, died. She was born in 1809, in Pennsylvania, lived for a while in Mason county, Ky., and then moved to Adams county, where she has lived the greater part of her life.

Mrs. Georgia Ann Duncan.

PARIS, Ky., March 24.—Mrs. Georgia Ann Duncan died at her home at Shawhan, this county, aged seventy-five years.

Wm. Harvey, for many years a prominent citizen of Somerset, Ky., and for a number of years a wholesale merchant of Louisville, died suddenly.

Miss Eliza Noland died at Waverly, O., aged eighty years.

IN HIS OWN GRAVE.

A Negro Hanged by a Mob for a Crime Without a Parallel.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., March 24.—News has reached this city of the hanging by a mob, near Meridianville, in North Alabama, in the afternoon, of Robert Mosely, a young negro. He was lynched by a mob of five hundred men, fifty of whom were black, having been captured after a determined pursuit. The crime for which he suffered death was in some respects without a parallel. He was a farm hand, whose employer had a sister-in-law, Miss Ellie Austin, a handsome young lady of eighteen years. Half a mile from her home, in the edge of a lonely wood, Mosely dug a pit seven feet long, two feet wide and three feet deep, which he partially boarded in and laid in wait for Miss Austin, on her way to school at Park Chapel. As she passed, the villian sprang out and seized her and a fearful struggle followed. She succeeded in defeating the brute's attempt. He then pushed her into the pit, placed sills and boards over it, and, nailing them down, said to her: "Now, damn you, stay there, and I'll come back tonight and kill you." He covered the hole with leaves, sticks and rubbish, put an old stove-pipe in it to supply air and left his victim in her living grave. As soon as he was gone, the brave girl, using her slate frame, pried off the boards and made her escape. Mosely was hanged within few feet of the pit and buried therein.

ONLY EIGHT CLUBS.

President Day Buys the Indianapolis Team.

NEW YORK, March 24.—President Day, of the New York National League base ball club has purchased a controlling interest in the Indianapolis club and the best of its players will be transferred to New York. Washington has dropped out of the League and there are now but eight clubs in the League. A schedule for an eight club League has been arranged, and the old League men say that they are now ready to combat with the Players' League on their own level. It is not known what price was paid for the Indianapolis club, but it is generally understood that President Brush, of that club, realized a handsome sum for his star players.

New York City Badness.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Among the witnesses before the Fassett investigating committee was Henry S. Ives, who testified as to sums paid for special privileges granted himself and Stayner by the sheriff's officers during his imprisonment in the Ludlow Street jail.

In the Flack conspiracy case the principal witness was William L. Flack, son of the sheriff. His testimony consisted of swearing down his mother's testimony and telling how he helped his father get a divorce so the latter might marry his mistress.

Milkmen Arrested.

KINGSTOWN, N. Y., March 24.—The state milk inspectors have caused the arrest within the past few days, of a number of milk men in the villages and cities, along the Hudson, on the charge of adulterating milk. Fines of $25 were paid in each case. Two such arrests were made at Pokeepsie and three here.

Oxford-Cambridge Regatta.

LONDON, March 24.—The interest in the coming Oxford-Cambridge regetta is increasing as the date of the event grows nearer. Cambridge has of late been practicing in better form than Oxford, but Oxford is showing exceptional strength in rough water and the betting is still in Oxford's favor by 110 to 100.

DANGER.

The Ohio at Cincinnati Will Go Over 60 Feet.

CINCINNATI, March 24.—It is certain now that the river will go over sixty feet by Thursday, from points up the river show a rain fall for eighteen hours.

Royal Hobnobbing.

BERLIN, March 24.—The Prince of Wales and his son, Prince George, dined with Count Herbert Bismarck. The Empress Frederick received Prince and Princess Bismarck.

Is it a Bluff.

BLOOMINGTON, ILLS., March 23.—Lee Cheney, manager of Billy Myer, said that the result of the McAuliffe-Carrol fight had convinced him more and more of Myers' ability to stop McAuliffe in short order. Referring to McAuliffe's statement that he would not fight Myers for $2,500 a side as he is challenged to do, but would meet him for from $5,000 to $10,000 a side, Cheney said: "We will raise the figures just to accommodate McAuliffe and challenge him to fight in Texas at any point for $10,000 a side or any larger sum that he may name. Billy Myer will fight him for any sum that he can put up, and give him the three pounds offered in the previous challenge."

D. RANSOM'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.
The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years,
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

WILL TILE DRAINING PAY?

Paper Read at the Late Farmers Institute by Calvin Crane.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen, some one suggested that we write an article on drainage, (in our opinion decidedly a mistake in which you will concur;) however that may be, we have undertaken to do so; and for a heading we have used these words, "Will tile draining pay." Having re-read two or three times what we had written under this heading, we have come to the conclusion that if this Institute had been (and we rather suppose in one sense it is) a revival meeting, that telling our experience would have been the proper thing to do, instead of what we ought to have done by using sound and common sense arguments to have proven, that tile draining did pay, and that too, very liberally.

It may be said that it is no longer a question with those who have been actuated by their own good judgment, or, perhaps by and through the advice of others have used their spare means, as well as those, who have had the courage to make small loans to raise money to use in laying tile drains, perhaps, first only as an experiment, but thus having begun the good work they will continue in it until their entire acres are redemed and become adaptable to any of the grain crops usually cultivated in this county. With such as these, the question, "will it pay" has become entirely obsolete. It is thought that not a few residents of this county now present will heartily endorse the foregoing view, and that some of those who have beautiful and well cultivated farms, pleasant and comfortable homes, together with well filled barns, sheds and granaries, and all the comforts of rural surrounding, can say truthfully, these things are not things of chance, but are really the products of well matured plans and persistent use of all available means in each succeeding year to increase the area of tile drained land, that one, two, three, or more fold might be, and have been realized. If these views are correct how important it becomes to induce others who may yet ask "Will tile draining pay?" to at once look about and see for themselves what others are doing and what they have accomplished, by adopting well considered plans of tile draining and in carrying them forward as fast as practicable, and if not to the end, yet in each succeeding year nearing it. We would say in all candor, that those having doubts as to the benefits of tile draining (if any) are those whose interests are intended to be most benefitted. If we can succeed in arresting and directing their attention to the importance of making a beginning with a view of testing the question for themselves. This test having been fairly tried there is little doubt but the benefit will be seen and appreciated, and that another year will add another area to that already began, and so on to the end.

It is true in our opinion, that there is quite a large area of land in Lenawee county that would not be preceptibly benefitted by any system of tile draining. Nature has already performed this work most effectually. It is equally true that a larger area would be very materially improved by judicious tile draining. We would make four classes of lands that would in our opinion be benefitted by tile draining in the order named:

1st. Land having clay or marl subsoils that hold an excess of water some considerable time following wet seasons of the year, or after heavy rain storms.

2d. Land underlaid with gravely subsoil, having same conditions as to excess of water.

3d. Black muck or sandy loams with clay and sand subsoil; same conditions as to excess of water.

4th. Land whose surface earth or soil (if any) rests on a bed of quick sand (it would be a misnomer to call it subsoil.)

It is generally understood by the term "grade" that it represents the inclination or departure as compared with a horizontal (water level) line, and its ratio is expressed in feet and one hundredths of a foot. As an example we would say a tile drain having six inches fall in 500 lineal feet we would express the ratio of grade as being 10 100 or 1-10 of a foot to 100 lineal feet.

In regard to grade lines, this or a similar question may be asked, "what is the minimum ratio of grade per 100 lineal feet admissible in laying tile drains? In general the ratio of grade will be determined by the slope of land. To illustrate our view as to what we would do, and what we have heretofore done when the land had very little slope, and so little that it was practically level. We have laid some hundreds, not to say thousands of lineal feet of tile drains with a ratio of 5 100 per 100 lineal feet, or at the rate of two 64-100 feet per mile. The subsoils in these low ratios being uniformly clay or marl and great care was taken to make the bottom of the ditch for the tile perfectly true to the grade, and in no case without a water test as the work progressed, even if it had to be carried or hauled to the place where needed. We would in all cases advise that great care should be taken and in laying tile to have the bottom of ditch made true to the grade line, and a water test in this matter ought not to be omitted, especially in low ratios. When gravel subsoil is found, it is not unnatural to find pockets of quicksand, and in case these pockets occur quite frequent it would be found very difficult to follow as low ratio of grade as above indicated, and might possibly require a ratio of 20-100, or even more to 100 feet. We will briefly remark that where quick-sand (in place of subsoil) is found, and it contains a free flow of water it would be very difficult to lay a tile drain with a ratio less than 5-100 foot to 100 lineal feet, and then only pretty near the surface of quick sand. Of course various means may be used to aid laying tile drains in quich sand, such as placing a narrow board on the bottom of ditch, or two boards nailed together, forming a trough. Sometimes straw or marsh hay is used, both underneath and on the tile; this will materially aid in keeping the tile clear of sand. So far as we have had experience in low ratios of grade in clay or marl sub-soils, and even where we have laid mains for several hundred feet together on a level, we have uniformly had satisfactory results. It is desirable to avoid as much as possible, low ratios or level grades at the sources of tile drains. We would advise as great a ratio of grade as may be found practicable for a few hundred feet of the upper end of said drains to guard against filling with mud, sand or other sediment. In all cases where there is a good flow of water in the tile drains properly laid there is really little or no danger of their becoming filled with mud, sand or other sediment, even at low ratio of grade. In this connection we might add that it is quite important to have free and unobstructed outlet for the water to pass away after leaving the tile.

As to the proper depth of laying drains we cannot give any definite rule. This also must be in a measure like the ratios of grades, dependent more or less upon controlling or influencing circumstances such as character of subsoil, etc. When practicable we would suggest that our rule has been to make our tile drains so as to give an average depth of not less than three feet, which places the tile when laid out of the way of any accident from above, or from any disturbance from the action of frost. We believe a tile drain laid at a depth of three feet will extend its influence about one-third further each way than one laid only two feet in depth. Our plan, with two or three exceptions, has been to locate our drains, about eight rods apart, expecting at some future time to find it necessary to cause intermediate lines of tile drains to be laid; but, thus far we have not found it neccessary to do so. In the exceptions above noted, we have laid all the tile drains believed to be necessary for the present or future, the same being from three to six rods apart. Our experience would prove that fields well tile drained can be cultivated much earlier in the spring, or after heavy rain storms, and before other undrained fields which have been considered sufficiently dry for the usual grain crop; and in this connection we may add that in most of our fields that have been tile-drained, some portions that have been considered sufficiently dry, are now found to be later in the spring in becoming sufficiently dry for cultivation; thus completely reversing former conditions. Hence it follows that the farmer can commence his spring cultivation several days (if not in some cases weeks) earlier than he could otherwise have done, and this is equally true as to earlier cultivation after heavy rains, in our crops that require working after seeding, as corn, potatoes, etc. These considerations alone are of no small importance to the agriculturalist in enabling him to do his work in due season, and without hindrance and loss in other branches of his farming operations as the season advances. We might give some of our experience as to results in fields that have been tile drained, but as our remarks on this subject are already quite too long and uninteresting, we will not trespass upon the patience and time of this Institute, further than to thank it for its attention, and to bespeak for it abundant success, both now and in the future.

GUMBO'S GRAB BAG.

A Respected Citizen of Tecumseh dropped into the HERALD sanctum the other day, and getting down to the editorial ear, remarked: "Do you remember an innocent little item which appeared in the HERALD about a month ago, giving a few words from a sermon by Rev. J. S. Joslin, wherein he spoke of the meagre attendance at church."

Scove Stacy—"Yes Sir, I do."

R. C.—"Have you noticed what a breeze it has stirred up?"

Scove Stacy—"I should smile. I should'nt call it a breeze, however, but a genuine double-barreled, breech-loading cyclone. In all my experience as a newspaper man, I never experienced such an experience before. Here is the item:

Rev. Joslyn gave his congregation a little food for serious thought, at the close of his sermon last Sunday morning at the M. E. Church. He said: "We have in our town say 3000 inhabitants. On an average there are not over 500 who attend the five churches. Where are the other 2500 people? More especially the young boys and girls?

"Now, my dear sir, read that over carefully. Turn it up side down and endwise. Can you see any claws about it? Are there any dynamite bombs concealed under the edges? I think not. And yet what a conflagration this little spark hath kindled. Many of my local exchanges copied the item and commented thereon. Editor Schermerhorn of the Hudson Gazette allowed that the girls would be found in church and the boys on the sidewalk waiting for them to come out. From the standpoint of a good looking Hudson bachelor this theory may be correct, and we have great confidence in Editor Schermerhorn's judgment in such matters. Oh, hum! let me breathe a minute."

R. C.—"Well, go on with your story."

Scove Stacy—"The Michigan Messenger then snatched up the item and went for the Rev. Joslyn straight from the shoulder. The Adrian papers are addicted to this method of warfare. They never seem to be quite so happy as when they are slinging mud and slandering their neighbors. I had hoped that the Messenger would adopt a higher standard of journalism, but it drops into the peculiar Adrian style as easily, as naturally and as gracefully, as a young duck takes to a mud puddle. It is not my purpose to defend Mr. Joslyn. He needs no defense at my hands. He did what many clergyman have done before, endeavored to stimulate the people to a better attendance on Sabbath services, not only those of his own church, but others. I notice that the Presbyterian pastor at Adrian has lately been remonstrating with his flock for their dereliction in this regard, and has seriously contemplated resign h is charge for that reason. But this action by an Adrian clergyman did not strike the editor of the Messenger as an unpardonable sin. What the Rev. Joslyn's politics may be, I neither know nor care. So long as he keeps politics out of his pulpit, and performs the part of a faithful shepherd to his flock, I believe that he has the same moral and legal right, which an unregenerated editor has, to vote the ticket he prefers. He gave his own views on the subject last Sunday in his morning sermon, and if the editor of the Messenger could have heard that discourse, he would have gathered some information on gentlemanly courtesy and Christian charity which even a printer might receive with profit. Gimme a drink—of cold water."

R. C.—"Go on, don't be bashful."

Scove Stacy—"But the funniest part of this tale remains to be told. The Presiding Elder of this district, who is a brother of our Tecumseh pastor, rolled up his sleeves and sailed in. The editor and the Elder are both liberally endowed with combativeness and you can easily imagine that the fur flew. Which one got away with the other's scalp is a mooted question. As hard a case as I am, I should have hesitated long and tearfully before hurling such invective, as appeared in the Messenger, against any clergyman of any church. If the Elder merits any criticism, it is simply this. I have noticed that the better way to notice personal scurrility is not to notice it at all. However, considering the geographical location in which the Elder finds himself, perhaps he has chosen the better way. When one is in Rome he is inclined to do as the Romans do. But this controversy did'nt stop there. It was injected into the M. E. church prayer meeting at Adrian one evening last week, on which occasion the class leaders got awfully tangled up on Republican and Prohibition politics."

R. C.—"Do you think the Messenger will gain anything by thus attacking the church?"

Scove Stacy—"That depends. It will lose no standing among thick-and-thin prohibitionists. A prohibition organ is like any other party organ, neither better nor worse. The editor regards it as a religious duty to stand by his party, right or wrong. Whether its Puritanical course will gather in any converts from the two old parties, I have very grave doubts."

OBITUARY.

Charles G. Wooden, for many years a worthy citizen of the township of Cambridge, was born in the town of Gates, Monroe Co. N. Y., June 17th, 1838. When about seven years of age, he came to Michigan with his father's family, and settled on section thirty one in that town. That section was then an unbroken wilderness. He passed his boyhood and early manhood on the home farm. On the 5th of January, 1865, he was married to Charlotte Burcham, at Tecumseh, by Rev. H. L. Hayward. He began housekeeping soon after and has lived in the same neighborhood ever since. For the past eight years he has been engaged chiefly in the business of buying and shipping stock to Buffalo. He shipped his last load on the 10th day of March, just one week before he died. During the last week, he was about the house but complained of illness. The night before his death he was about the premises. That night he suddenly grew worse, and dropped peacefully away a few minutes past twelve o'clock on the 17th. He was a generous citizen, a kind husband and father and a neighbor who had the respect of all who knew him. He leaves a wife and one son and a large circle of friends and relatives to mourn his untimely death.

DIED.—March 20, at her home in Ann Arbor, after a severe three weeks illness of typhoid-pneumonia, Miss Nellie W. Cheever, only daughter of Mrs. Laura E. Cheever and sister of Dwight B. Cheever.

Whereas our Heavenly Father has seen fit to remove from our numbers our esteemed friend and classmate, Nellie W. Cheever, we, the members of the junior class of the Ann Arbor High School, do hereby desire to express our deep sense of bereavement at our loss. Nellie was esteemed by all who knew her as a diligent student, a conscientious Christian and a true friend. We shall miss her bright presence in the class room and her cheerful companionship in the social circle. We shall ever remember her noble qualities of heart and character, and will try to emulate her high ambition to live a worthy and useful life. We extend to the sorrowing friends our most sincere sympathy, knowing full well that their loss here is more than compensated by her gain in the home above.—Ira Severance, Winifred Orr, May B. Cooley, Ada L. Stephens, Samuel B. Shirley.—Com.

Knights of Pythias Biennial Conclave at Milwaukee, Wis., July, 1890.

For this great occasion excursion tickets will be sold from all principal points in the United States and Canada to Milwaukee and return via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway at half rates.

As the name indicates the Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway is the direct route to Milwaukee, and as the camp ground, for the uniformed Knights (to which point cars and trains will be run through without transfer) is located directly on this line, it will be seen that the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway has a great advantage over other routes which are unable to furnish such facilities, and visiting Knights, their families and friends should bear this in mind when purchasing excursion tickets.

A circular giving detailed information will be mailed free upon application to A. V. H. Carpenter, General Passenger Agent, Milwaukee, Wis., or to Harry Mercer, M. P. A., 90 Griswold St., Detroit, Mich.

A NEWSPAPER RELIC.

Alex. Turner has in his possession an old copy of the TECUMSEH HERALD issued Jan. 1, 1863. It is quite a curiosity. It is a seven-column folio sheet, all home print. The first page is devoted to story reading and one column of business cards. W. A. Nimocks is the publisher. The second page contains an editorial leader on the New Year and quite an assortment of war news. The local page contains one column of short items, an obituary notice of E. Darwin Turner, who died in the hospital at Lexington, some correspondence between the colonel and chaplain of the 18th Mich. Infantry, and a few smaller items. The fourth page is given wholly to advertising. There were two trains on the Jackson Branch then instead of three. Going south they passed this station at 7:40 A. M. and 1:01 P. M; going north at 9:48 A. M. and 6:10 P. M. B. J. Bidwell has a double, full column advertisement, and R. C. Moore a single column one. Among the other leading advertisers are A. Hood & Co., Robbins & DeWolf, G. T. Ketcham, Libbeus Drew, Tecumseh Woolen factory, David VanTine. There are two full columns of sewing machine advertisements. This little appeal is found on the local page: "Would that some of our delinquent subscribers knew that good wood was wanted at this office." A marriage notice appears, in which Rev. E. R. Hascall is the officiating cleryman. The probate notices have the name of Robert R. Beecher affixed as Judge of Probate. A leisure hour can be whiled away very pleasantly looking over the old sheet.

The above was written for last week's HERALD and was crowded out. We give it this week without change. It will be a little testimonial to his memory for his wife to peruse.

TECUMSEH AND FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB

Dark was the night, muddy was the road that led to the home of B. Hurry and few were they that found it. Wednesday, March 19th. Many who were to brighten the literary exercises of the evening with their wit and wisdom were absent, consequently the program was very brief. Next meeting Wednesday, evening, April 2d. Program for the evening:

Music by the Society.
Dec.—Eddie Hong.
Read.—Mrs. Pentecost.
Chips—Ada VanValkenburg.
Dia.—Frank and Jennie Osborn.
Rec—Lena VanValkenburg.
Read.—Barzillai Hurry.
Question—What benefit is the Agricultural College to the farmer? Discussion opened by Wm. Waldron.

Weak back and depression of spirits, with sharp shooting pains in the region of the Kidneys, always indicate that those organs are unhealthy or diseased. The F. E. C. Kidney, Blood and Liver Remedy will relieve you in a few hour

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MARCH 27, '90

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Easter Sunday will fall on April 6th this year.

Adrian is preparing for a big crowd next week.

Order your election printing at the HERALD office.

Miss Lou Arner of Ridgeway, was the guest of Mrs. Mont Bangs the fore part of the week.

Jas. D. Walker of Brooklyn was in town last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Root visited Adrian last Monday.

The business mens' carnival has been fixed for April 11th.

Miss Nellie Conklin was visiting friends in Hudson last week.

Sylvester Miller of Blissfield, has obtained an original pension.

There was an old fashioned big crowd in town last Saturday.

Scove Walker spent last Sunday and Monday with friends at Ann Arbor.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Snell have gone to Grand Rapids to spend a few weeks with their son Harry.

The Democrats of Tecumseh will hold their caucus on Friday, April 4th, at three o'clock, P. M.

Election tickets and slips will be printed neatly, correctly, at the lowest rates, at the HERALD job rooms.

The Democrats of Macon will hold their caucus at Grange Hall, on Thursday April 3d. at one o'clock P. M.

The Republican caucus for Tecumseh will be held on Thursday afternoon April 3d. next, at 7:30 o'clock P. M.

The Guarantee Nursery Co., of Geneva, N. Y., are calling for men to work on salary, in another column of this paper.

The funeral of Alex. Turner last Tuesday afternoon was largely attended, the G. A. R. Post attending the services in a body.

Mrs. D. N. Goodrich of Chicago is visiting at her father's, I. H. Schreder's. She is a member of the Lenawee club of that city.

The new engine and boiler for the Table Co. are now in position. The boiler is the largest one in town and the engine is a beauty.

James Berger, who has been traveling through Ohio and Indiana for the past year, was shaking hands with his Tecumseh friends last Friday.

John Koch's brewery in Manchester was burglerized last Saturday night. Fifty dollars in money were taken and a lot of jewelry belonging to the family.

The announcement given last week, of an Easter Entertainment to be held by the W. C. T. U., is hereby revoked, on account of sickness and absence of several members.

The Farmers' Union will hold the last meeting of the season at the residence of Thomas Welliver, on Friday evening, April 4th, with the program previously published. A full attendance is desired.

A young fellow in the barn at the Drew house, Blissfield, hid a customer's cost, and did not confess until the landlord paid for it. He then said he did it "for fun," but the interested parties could not see the joke

Gospel meetings are being held at the Friends church every evening this week, and will continue over next Sunday. The meetings are conducted by two ministers from Ohio, David J. Lewis and Judith Johnson.

A letter from John R. Clarke says that his time has been utilized to good advantage during the past season. On his way home from Chicago next month he expects to stop a day or two and visit his friends in Tecumseh. We ought to have a lecture from him during his stay here.

The ladies of the First Baptist church of Tecumseh, will hold their monthly social at the chapel parlors on the afternoon and evening, April 3d. 1890. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Supper from 5 to 7 o'clock. Price 10cts. Mrs. L. G. Lester, chairman of committee.

Ten Nights in a Bar Room was presented last Friday evening at the Opera House, by our Amateur Dramatic company, and they carried out the play very creditably. They had a fair audience but not as good as they deserved. The troupe are playing at Dundee and other towns this week.

In the amended tax law as passed last winter, there is a section providing for the election at the town meeting in 1890 of two members of the Board of Review, one for one year and one for two years; thereafter one member will be elected each year to serve two years the same as school inspectors now are. A full township ticket this spring should be in the following form:

For Supervisor
" Township Clerk.
" Township Treasurer.
" Justice of the Peace.
" School Inspector.
" Commissioner of Highways.
" Drain Commissioner.
" Member of Board of Review (1 y.
" " " " (2 yrs
" Constables, (four.)

April Fool's day is near at hand.

D. T. Hall is on the sick list this week.

Will Bidwell has returned from Howell.

J. W. Patterson of Elkhart, Ind., was in town last Tuesday.

Save your pennies for the business men's carnival, April 11th.

Miss Ellen Fisher is home from Kalamazoo College for a few days.

The village schools close next Friday for a vacation of one week.

Ask Scove Walker how he likes pedestrianism in the vicinity of Britton.

A. B. Cotton, of Chicago, is in town this week looking up the electric light business.

The Milan Cornet Band will give a dancing party on Thursday evening, April 3d.

Mrs. Jas. M. Ingersoll entertained small party of friends last Friday evening.

Elsworth Cairns left for Angola, Ind., last Monday morning for a visit of a few weeks.

Remember the lecture by Bernard Tyrrell, the colored orator, this evening at the G. A. R. hall.

The Prohibitionists of Tecumseh will hold their caucus next Monday evening, March 31st. at 7:30 o'clock P. M.

Assistant postmaster Scove Walker has been taking a few days respite from work at Ann Arbor and Norvel.

J. S. Kinney has begun the work of remodeling his new store, which he will move into about the first of April.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Thompson of Adrian were the guests of J. M. Ingersoll's family a couple of days last week.

F. O. Tefft returned home from Washington last Saturday, and will spend the summer vacation with his parents.

Mrs. R. B. House of Springfield, Ohio, has been home for a week past to assist in nursing her mother, who is seriously ill.

News from H. M. Temple, now living at St. Paul, contains the intelligence that he is the happy father of a bright little girl.

Burglars visited the house of John McConnell last Sunday night. They got away with a suit of clothes and about $6.00 in cash.

H. Brewer & Co's tile machine works are crowded to the full capacity. They now employ fortytwo regular hands and are running nights.

Mrs. Freeman has obtained a lease of the old Hewitt house east of Marks' drug store. The front room will be remodeled and the windows enlarged, making it a fine place for her business. She is moving her stock of millinery into the new rooms this week.

Alex. Turner was taken with the grippe about two weeks ago. The attack developed into the pneumonia which caused his death last Saturday. The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon. A suitable tribute to his memory will appear in a future issue.

There is a pleasing atmosphere of happy domestic life about The Ladies' Home Journal which makes each number as welcome as sunshine. The brightest stories vie with the best of home poetry, while its articles always bristle with helpfulness for women. And never was a stronger number issued that for April.

The new M. E. Parsonage is progressing rapidly, under the guidance of Stephen Whittier, who has the job. The lathing is nearly completed, and the plasterers will soon be at work. Mr. Whittier intends to make a first class dwelling of it, which he will doubtless accomplish, for he has built more houses, probably, than any other contractor in Tecumseh.

Five Hundred Children will Sing on the afternoon and evening of the opening day (April 22) of the Detroit Floral and Musical Charity Festival. These children are being trained by Mrs. Emma A. Thomas, director of vocal music in the Detroit public schools. The songs will be from popular operas and the national airs of various countries. "Columbia" will be the opening number, and will be accompanied by the waving of 500 little flags, and "everybody" will have an opportunity to hear the children sing.

At their annual meeting, March 14th Tecumseh W. C. T. U. elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. H. L. Stewart.

William Preston has purchasd Lon Chapman's little farm and moved thereon.

The Parons of Industry of Section Association No. 1432 will meet in Royal Arcanum Hall, Thursday, April 3rd, at 7:30 P. M.

Mrs. Jos. Rynd, of Madison, is stopping a few days with her parents Lieut. and Mrs. Elliott Gray. Mrs. Gray is quite sick.

W. F. Anderson is passing cigars around among his friends in a reckless manner. Cause: His family has been increased by a bouncing boy.

Barnes Brothers of Detroit have sold their paper stock to Chas. W. McCorkle, who took possession last week. Mr. H. E. Soper, representing the new firm, gave us a call Tuesday.

There will be a meeting of the stockholders of the Star Mountain Mining Co., at the office of B. F. Steinhoff, April 2d. 1890, at 7 P. M. A full attendance is desired.
By Order of the Directors.

Mrs. P. C. Snell has engaged rooms over John J. Orr's drug store and is prepared to do all kinds of dressmaking at very reasonable prices. She has t eimproved Buddington cutting machine, which always gives the best of satisfaction.

The celebrated picture, the Angelus, has left Chicago and will be sent to Europe in a few days. The bonded-period expires April 1st, and the picture must be sent beyond our borders before that date or pay a duty of $35,000.

The High School pupils issue the first number of their school paper today. It is a three column folio, and is entitled, "The Breeze." The subscription price is twenty-five cents. In general style and make-up it reflects much cerdit upon the Board of Editors. It is a very breezy little sheet.

Rev. Geo. W. Hudson, of East Saginaw, writes that he is very busy just now conducting a series of meetings which have resulted already in 35 conversions. Mrs. Hudson is improved in health and they hope to visit Tecumseh this summer to see the new parsonage, hear the new organ and shake hands with their many friends. Welcome.

The attack which the Adrian Messenger made on Justice Hunter last week is likely to bear more fruit than the editor anticipated. Mr. Hunter has returned from Denver, safe and sound, and has instituted a suit against the Messenger for libel. The affair is likely to create considerable business for the lawyers and lots of fun for the newspapers.

HIGH SCHOOL HAPPENINGS.

School closes Friday afternoon for a week's vacation.

We hope the people will not forget to subscribe for the High School paper.

Miss Ina Daglish is teaching the seventh grade, Mrs. Wilson being absent on account of sickness.

Most of the seniors forget to salute each other with their class yell. What is the use of one if it is not going to be used?

Miss Grayson is arranging for a cantata, to be given some time in May. Most of the young ladies of the High School will take part.

This is examination week. Final examination will be given in three studies Thursday, and the regular monthly examination to the unlucky ones Friday.

It is quite amusing to see the young ladies jump when a little mouse runs across the floor in the Professor's room. Don't be afraid girls, it won't hurt you.

It looks rather suspicious when a young man walks up to the teacher and looks at her as much as to say, "What is it?" thinking she called him to her. Boys, when you are in mischief, do not let your guilty conscience give you away. R. F. H.

DEATH OF GENERAL ROBERT C. SCHENCK.

Served Sixteen Years in Congress—Minister to Brazil and England—Member of Ohio Legislature For Two Terms—Gallant Soldier in the Union Army—Fought at the Battles of Bull's Run—His Arm Shattered by a Rebel Ball.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—General Robert C. Schenck is dangerously sick with pneumonia at his residence in this city. The first symptoms appeared on Friday. He had been weakened by a bad attack of bronchitis. Dr. Yarrow, of the army, is attending him.

There is great concern in the family over his condition, and Dr. Yarroy says frankly that it is causing him great anxiety. General Schenck's daughters are with him. He was eighty years old last October, and this great age decreases the chance of his recovery. In fact, there seems to be very little reason to hope for it.

The Soldier-Statesman's Death.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—General Robert C. Schenck died at 5:45 last evening.

Robert Cumming Schenck was born near Dayton, in Montgomery county, Ohio, in October 1809, where his parents early emi- [illegible] Miami university at Oxford in 1827, and taught there as instructor. He then read law and was admitted to the bar. He was elected a representative to the 40th Ohio general assembly in 1840 and re-elected in 1841 as a Whig. In the following year he was elected to congress where he served with distinguished honor four terms representing a district that before him had sent William Henry Harrison and Thomas Corwin to the National House—the "Old Third District"—from which afterwards came Clement L. Vallandigham, Lewis D. Campbell and James E. Campbell, the present governor of Ohio. He was appointed minister to Brazil by President Fillmore in 1851 and served until the advent of President Pierce's administration in 1853.

When the rebellion broke out in the spring of 1861 he was made a brigadier general of volunteers, and fought at Bull Run, in West Virginia, and in the Shenandoah valley. In the second battle of Bull Run he commanded a division under General Sigel, and had his arm shattered by a ball. He continued in the army, but took his seat in congress in 1863 to which he had been elected the year previous, where he remained for four more terms and until 1871, when he was appointed minister plenipotentiary to Great Britain by President Grant, which position he nobly filled until the spring of 1876, when he resigned from ill-health. Since then he has resided in Washington city and has been engaged in the practice of the law. Next to Thomas Corwin, General Schenck was the finest Whig stump speaker Ohio had ever had, and in the campaign of 1840 he accompanied General Harrison and Corwin at all the Buckeye Whig meetings. He was a lawyer of national reputation, a statesman of broad, comprehensive views, and a brave soldier who shed his blood in defense of his country.

He served with Abraham Lincoln in congress, and when the latter became president received from him a commission to defend the American flag. When in the legislature of Ohio he had for one of his fellow members—James B. Steadman, afterwards general in the union army and the hero of "Chickamauga." When John Sherman was reelected to the United States senate in the winter of 1865-6 he secured the Republican nomination in caucus by only one majority over General Schenck.

The deceased was one of the few survivors of the old wigs of Ohio, and belonged to the old school politicians whose numbers are nearly all gone. His death will awaken universal regret throughout the country which he served so long and so honorably in civil, military and social life.

Another Account of His Life.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—General Robert C. Schenck died at his home at 5:45 o'clock, of pneumonia, after an illness of but five days. General Schenck was in the eighty-first year of his age, and his career as a soldier, congressman and diplomast, was a remarkably busy one. He was born in Franklin, Ohio, on October 8, 1809. He was first elected to Congress in 1842, and served four terms and until 1850, when he was sent by President Fillmore as minister to Brazil. When the war broke out he promptly offered his seevices and was one of the first brigadier generals appointed by President Lincoln, his commission bearing the date of May 18, 1861. He served with distinction as a brigadier and division commander until December 1863, when he resigned to again take his seat in the House of Representatives. General Schenck was re-elected in 64, 66 and 68, and during his last four terms in congress filled a number of important positions in the House, and rendered distinguished services as chairman of the committee on military affairs, and of the ways and means committee. In December 1870 he was appointed Minister to England by President Grant. Resigning his post as minister in 1876, General Schenck returned to Washington, where he has since resided.

AN ENTERPRISING REPORTER

Gets Into the Flack Jury Room But is Bounced.

NEW YORK, March 24.—At 11:45 p. m. Dilworth Choate, a New York World reporter, was found by the Flack jury secreted behind a curtain in the room where they were deliberating. The fact was reported to the court. Choate was brought before the judge. Counsel for the defense asked that he be punished, but the judge said there was no law covering the case. Choate was made to give up the notes he had made. He had not spoken to the jury. He was allowed to go and the jury was sent back to the room.

German News.

BERLIN, March 24.—One gendarme was killed and several others seriously injured by being struck with stones or knives in Thursday night's riot at Koepnich. Many rioters were also badly injured and about forty were arrested.

The local press gives a unanimous welcome to the Prince of Wales, and predict his warm reception will strengthen European peace.

The London Tailors.

LONDON March 24.—The east end tailors held an enormous mass meeting at which their wretched condition was mournfully discussed.

AT IT AGAIN.

Senator Blair Revives His Defunct Educational Bill.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—In the senate Mr. Blair introduced a new educational bill which contains the general features of the bill rejected by the senate Thursday, but omits certain portions which were especially objectionable.

The new bill differs from the old, principally in the amounts which it appropriates. For the first year $5,000,000 instead of $7,000,000, and for the succeeding years millions as follows: 7 instead of 10; 10 instead of 15; 12 instead of 18; 9 instead of 11; 7 instead of 9; 5 instead of seven, and (in the eighth year) 3 instead of 5. The law is to go into effect January 1st, 1891. The provision for reduction in the territories is to apply to illiterate Indians.

A CYCLONE

Sweeps Through a North Carolina Village.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., March 24.—A special to the Chronicle from Chester, S. C. says that a destructive cyclone passed over the village of Edgemoore, near Chester. Fourteen houses were blown down and a negro named James Miller was killed and several persons seriously injured. The roof of the Georgia & Northern railroad depot was blown a mile away. Robinson Brothers' establishment and Dickey's drug store was totally demolished. Edgemoor's new church was also destroyed.

SCALDED HER CHILD.

A Little Girl Conceals Herself in a Churn.

WARDSVILLE, ONT., March 24.—Ella Crandall, aged four, while playing hide and seek with some children, secreted herself in an old fashoned churn. While so concealed her mother came to scald out the churn poured a kettle of boiling water through a hole in the lid upon the child, who was terribly scalded, and lived but a few moments after being lifted out. The mother has become partially insane in consequence of her act.

FOUND GUILTY.

JURY IN THE FLACK CASE AGREES ON THE SECOND BALLOT.

The Penalty Is One Year's Imprisonment and a Fine of $500—It Is Thought That the Fine Only Will Be Inflicted.

NEW YORK, March 24.—The jury strongly recommended clemency by the court.

The judge said that as it was Sunday, all he could do now was to accept the verdict. The defendants would remain under bail of $5,000 each.

The jury stood 8 for conviction, 2 for acquittal and 2 blank on the first ballot. On the second ballot all agreed.

The penalty for the offense of which the prisoners are convicted is one year's imprisonment or a fine of $500, or both. It is thought that the recommendation for mercy will reduce the punishment to a fine only. Court was adjourned until 10 o'clock Monday. The defense will probably move to set aside the verdict on the ground that the presence of the reporter vitiated the proceedings.

VERY MYSTERIOUS.

Singular Fatality Connected with a Certain Room.

PAW PAW, MICH., March 24.—Albert A. Fosdick, county surveyor, was shot dead Saturday night in the same room of the same house in Almena where the doctor, his brother, was recently shot. The shooting is very mysterious, and has produced the most intense excitment. Albert was arrested for the assault on his brother, who has now recovered, but there was no evidence against him.

A TOLEDO FIRM

Goes Way Up the Financial Spout.

TOLEDO, O., March 24.—Quite a sensation was created in business circles here by the announcement that C. H. Whitaker & Co., wholesale and retail hardware, had made an assignment. The firm was the largest in this line of business in Northwesten Ohio, and did a large business. No cause is given but it is understood to be chiefly due to the unreasonable weather of the past winter. George R. Hudson was appointed assignee. Liabilities are about $100,000; assets not yet known.

ABANDONED AT SEA.

Twenty Sailors Go Down in Davy Jones' Locker.

LONDON, March 24.—The captain and eight of the crew of the British steamer Virent abandoned at sea have landed at Ferrol. The mate and fourteen others of the crew were lost. The coasting steamer Ethel Gwendoline foundered off Rattray Head, Ireland. Seven of the crew were drowned.

German Opera in New York.

NEW YORK, March 24.—The season of German opera at the Metropolitan closed Saturday with a successful performance of Siegfried. The audience was the largest of the season, and there was an enthusiastic demonstration at the close, all the leading artists being repeatedly called before the curtain. The total receipts of the 17 weeks' season have been $400,000, and the total attendance 169,537.

Charles H. Mallory Dead.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Charles H. Mallory, head of the Extensive Mallory line of steamers plying between New York, Galveston and intermediate ports, died at his home in Brooklyn, aged 72 years. He was a veteran sea captain, and by his successful ventures in sailing vessels and subsequently in steamship lines acquired a large fortune.

GOD SPEED.

Dinner to Minister Smith on His Departure for St. Petersburg.

NEW YORK, March 24.—A number of New York friends of Hon. Charles Emory Smith, of Philadelphia, tendered him a dinner at Delmonico's at night in honor of his appointment as minister to Russia. Among those present were William H. McElroy, who presided; Hon. Warner Miller, General Thomas L. James, Colonel John A. Cockerill, Walter P. Phillips, George William Curtis, C. A. Dana, J. W. Husted, W. J. Arkell, W. R. Grace, S. B. Elkins, General Daniel Butterfield, President Gates, of Rutgers; Chester S. Lord, Daniel Lamont, J. J. Knox and Thurlow Weed Barnes. Several informal congratulatory speeches were made.

JACK THE RIPPER,

Appears in Ohio's Capital in Fiendish Array.

COLUMBUS, O., March 24.—Saturday night David Sutton, a superintendent on the natural gas mains, just after midnight was assaulted and horribly mutilated on High street. Jake Welker and Jack Kefe have been arrested for the frightful cutting.

REVIEW OF THE QUARTER

LESSON XIII, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 30.

The Peculiarities of the Quarter's Teaching and of St. Luke's Gospel—Some Elementary Principles as to the Nature and Methods of Revelation.

The lessons of the quarter just closed deal with all the early part of Christ's life on earth and much of the middle part; they deal, be it particularly noted, with His acts rather than His teachings, and therefore the gospel according to St. Luke is chiefly relied on. To see the importance of this the reader needs, perhaps, to have his attention called to some salient points in the nature and methods of revelation.

"God works by means" is a profound and important truth. The clouds and the winds, the beauties of nature and forces of the elements do not change their nature or laws a particle because God occasionally employs them in specific manifestations of His holy will; and man, as a part of nature, is subject to the same divine law. Matthew is just as thoroughly an Israelite and Luke as much an expert in Greek, David is a poet and warrior and Isaiah a fervent, flaming exhorter to patriotism when God speaks through them as at any other time. And this is the perennial charm of biblical style; the writer of each book of the Bible preserves his individuality as distinct from any other as Tacitus from Livy or Bancroft from Macaulay; yet God's spirit is ever present in each writer from Moses to St. John. Matthew, having the spirit and yet acting as an individual, naturally set forth the teachings of our Saviour as they seemed best adapted to win over the Jews, and John, similarly, as an individual, addressed the church of his time; but Luke, the scholar, traveler and man of scientific attainments, as naturally became a historian.

Matthew concerned himself only with his brethren after the flesh, the Jews of Palestine, and quite naturally, therefore, only gave a thread of narrative sufficient to string Christ's teachings upon, and at each point preferred the teaching most nearly connected with the Old Testament, which the Jews accepted; Luke, as naturally, felt inclined to crowd into his narrative as many as possible of those incidents which would strike the attention of Gentiles. The position of Matthew may be likened to that of a native of New England writing on the history of his section and connecting it by constant reference with the American Revolution and adoption of the constitution; the position of Luke to that of a highly educated German or Frenchman pointing out to his countrymen the brilliant achievements of the Americans as a whole and urging the adoption of the American system.

In the primitive church the opinion was almost universal that Matthew first composed his gospel in the popular language of Palestine—Syro-Chaldaic—or perhaps in Hebrew, and this but five years after the crucifixion. In modern times that belief was abandoned, and it was generally maintained that the Greek form of the gospel was the first. Finally, however, these two opinions were reconciled to this extent: that Matthew did compile a sort of "memorabilia" of Christ's teachings, and that this (in the popular language) was the only gospel for near thirty years, after which Matthew compiled the complete Greek composition which we have.

No such question could arise as to St. Luke; he was a physician, the companion and fellow laborer of St. Paul, and doubtless a master of the Greek language, in which he wrote this gospel and the Acts of the Apostles. So far there is no dispute, but as to his home and country very little is known. The earliest of the apostolic fathers confess that he "wrote not of himself," and that they are ignorant of what he was before his conversion. They believed, however, that he was a native of Antioch and was an early convert—one of the seventy. They also agree that he labored diligently to the last of his life, dying at the age of 84. His gospel was universally accepted as authentic by the fathers, and Irenæus, Tertullian and others add that he receive the facts directly from St. Paul.

The readers of the lessons just passed over cannot have failed to note the extreme clearness, simplicity and positive directness with which Luke relates the healings of leprosy and other diseases, the casting out of devils, the raising of the dead and the effective replies to impertinent or sneering questions. He does not say that it seemed thus or so, but that it was so; he never intimates that the "possessed" was merely a lunatic or that the bystanders merely supposed that he was "possessed"—he says with emphatic simplicity that the demons were there, that they spoke and acknowledged the divine power and came out at the command of the Lord Jesus Christ. To St. Luke the existence of a power for evil was an awful reality, and with it the fact that some individuals were "given over to sin and sold wholly to Satan." In these lessons the truth is emphasized in detail that a part of Christ's mission was to break the power of Satan over the bodies as well as the souls of men.

Observe also the charm of the few references to the childhood of Jesus. Very little is said—just enough to show that as to His earthly or human nature He was a child to grow and wax strong like any other healthy child, but every word is golden. Who would be without that exquisite passage which relates his remaining behind at the Feast of the Passover and being found in the temple conversing with the doctors of the law! A curious fact in this connection is that the early Christians often showed an inordinate desire to learn more of Christ's early life on earth, and one result was that spurious accounts were written to meet the demand. Skeptics have had much to say of these and other "Rejected Manuscripts," but surely no better cure for their poison could be found than a mere perusal of such works. Any one with an intellect not utterly vitiated by prejudice and obstinate unbelief who will read the so called "Childhood of Jesus" and compare its puerilities with the sublime simplicity of Luke must rise with renewed confidence in the divine inspiration of this gospel.

A Bird Without Wings.

A "wingless" bird would naturally be expected to be a remarkable creature, and some queer stories are told of one species, the apteryx of New Zealand, which has the rudiments of wings developed even less than most of the birds called "wingless." It is said to make its nest in a way which seems very characteristic of its antipodean habitat. Instead of depositing its eggs in a nest and then sitting upon them, the apteryx first buries its egg and then digs a hole underneath it, for which it remains, and thus sits not upon but under the nest. It must be admitted, however, that this statement has been disputed. Also, contrary to the wont of birds in general, the apteryx is nocturnal and devotes its energies entirely to a nightly hunt after worms. If the apteryx has no wings worth the name, it is worthy of note that it has a pair of very stout legs which allow it to hurry over the ground at a very respectable rate, and to defend itself by vigorous kicks.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January A. D. 1884, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife, of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan, of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A. D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages, on page 591, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1885, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 20th day of January, A. D., 1890, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in Liber 118 of Mortgages, on page 569; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is, at this date, claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-one and 12-100 Dollars ($1751.12) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that, by virtue of said power of sale, and the statutes of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now, as aforesaid, due and owing on said mortgage, together with interest to accrue thereon, and the costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Thirty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the 21st day of April, A D. 1890, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan, known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5), town five (5), south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

Dated Jan. 23d, 1890.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court, for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Thursday, the 6th day of March in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of Francis Coates, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of John Britton, Jr., surviving executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, alleging among other things that the widow of said deceased has departed this life; that the real estate devised said widow for life, excepting that specifically devised in remainder, has been disposed of in accordance with the terms of said will; that the duties of administration of the estate of said Francis Coates have been fully performed, save distribution and assignment; and that petitioner is ready to render his final administration account. And praying that said account may be allowed; that the funds remaining on hand and the real estate specifically devised, be by the order of this court distributed among and assigned to the parties entitled thereto under said will; that petitioner and the estate of Edwin R. Wood, deceased, be discharged from the administration of said trust; and for such other order and decree as to this court shall seem meet and just.

It is ordered that Tuesday, the 8th day of April next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the Heirs at Law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

WHEN I'M BALD.

There's a question I would mention
If you'll listen, wife, to me,
For a fearful apprehension
Now and then creeps over me;
When our lives have reached the summit
And the turning-point is called,
And Old Age begins to eye us,
Will you love me if I'm bald?

When no more your gentle fingers
Wander through my waving hair;
But go groping through the vastness
Of the whereness of the w(hair);
When Old Time's fantastic fingers
O'er my face his name has scrawled,
Do you think that you can love me
Just the same if I am bald?

When my brow shall shame the tombstone
As it rises bland and bare,
Write thereon: "This slab is sacred
To his late lamented hair."
Like a grinning skull I'll haunt you
Till your senses stand appalled.
Can you brave the test, my darling,
Will you love me when I'm bald?

When my present jetty ringlets
Have not died, but gone before,
And until I go to meet them
They will come—ah!—nevermore,
When the files of fifty summers
O'er my helpless pate have crawled,
And I have to wear a nightcap,
Will you love me when I'm bald?

—Yankee Blade.

SQUARING THINGS.

How a Sharp Schemer Was Neatly Outwitted.

Herbert Denison placed up and down the small room that had been the especial sanctum of his brother-in-law, Tom Thorpe, his brows knit in perplexed thought, his fingers nervously rattling his watch-chain. Jessie, his only sister, Tom Thorpe's widow, was sobbing on the sofa.

"Jessie, dear," he said, presently, "it is cruel to make you talk, but if I could only get some really clear idea of the business, I might, perhaps, help you."

Jessie sat up, and tried to still the sobs that the talk about her husband—not yet a month dead—had called forth. She was a woman with fair hair and blue eyes, and young enough still to make her deep widow's mourning doubly pathetic.

"About the house?" she said.

"Yes. You say it is almost paid for?"

"The price was six thousand dollars for the house and grounds. There is a very large orchard and vegetable garden, besides the garden in front. Tom was to pay for it just as he could, but not less than three hundred a year. We were so anxious to have a home of our own, Bert, that we worked very hard for it, and that is the reason I know all about it. I put all my writing money in, too; not a vast sum, to be sure, but it helped along."

"And you are sure there were five thousand dollars paid to Mr. Paxon?"

"I am positively certain of it."

"And the receipts are lost?"

"Lost! Gone entirely. Bert, I never dared say it, for I can not prove it, but I firmly believe Mr. Paxon stole Tom's receipt book."

"Why?"

"Well, he is a man who is not much respected, and there have been several stories told about him that throw a doubt over his honesty. Still, he keeps clear of the law. Tom took the receipts for the payments on the house in a small red account-book that had nothing else in it. That day—no, I am not going to cry again, dear—that dreadful day, he sent word to Mr. Paxon that he would pay him five hundred dollars. He had sold a lot of wool, and I had two hundred dollars saved. I know he had it when Mr. Paxon came. Then there was that dreadful hemorrhage, and how could we think of any thing but Tom for the next three days? But, Bert, Mr. Paxon was alone with him when he was taken ill and gave the alarm. There was nothing to prevent his slipping the receipt-book into his pocket, and I believe he did it. It can not be found, and Mr. Paxon would not dare to assert that he has never been paid any thing but rent for the house, if he did not know I can not produce the receipts."

"H'm! Yes, I see! But one can not accuse a man of such a crime as that without some proof."

"I understand that. I think he intended, if Tom got better, to pretend it was a mistake, or he might have meant to cheat him."

"Was there never any witness to the payments?"

"No. He would come over, or Tom would go to him and pay whatever we could spare. But I have seen the receipts often! And think, Bert, how that five thousand dollars would help me now!"

Bert did think of it! He was a young man who had made for himself a home in a Western State, over which he had asked his widowed sister to preside. He had come to her with open hands and heart, to offer a home to her and her two boys, knowing that his brother-in-law had lived upon his salary as a clerk in a wholesale house. But he had found that these two by close economy, by Tom's experiments in sheep-raising, and Jessie's contributions to magazine literature, had nearly secured a home of their own, when a sudden rupture of a blood-vessel had ended life for one, and left the other desolate.

Many long talks the brother and sister had about this cruel wrong pressing upon her, but arriving always at the conclusion that only the finding of the receipt-book could help her. They were still talking, in the room that Tom had devoted to his wife's literary labors and his own business affairs and dignified by the name of library, when Bert, pointing to the wall, said:

"Where on earth did you ever get that horrid daub, Jessie? What is it?"

"The Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers," said Jessie, smiling. "It is a daub, Bert, but Tom was fond of it for the sake of his only brother, who painted it. Poor Fred! He imagined himself a great artist, and this picture a masterpiece. But after vainly trying to sell it, he gave it to Tom. It was a dreadful job to get it up, and you see it takes all the space on that side of the room. How we are to get it down is a mystery."

"Do you value it?"

"No! I scarcely knew Fred, who died ten years ago, and the picture is frightful."

"H'm!—I think I see a light!" said Bert, musingly. "Well, dear, as there is nothing to be gained by staying here, how soon will you be ready to go to Scrantonville with me?"

"I will begin to pack to-day."

It proved to be a tedious job to gather all the household goods into traveling compass, to start off box after box, to take leave of neighbors, and make preparations for the long journey and new home. But Jessie found comfort in constant work, and the next week most of her packing was finished.

But the day before that appointed for their start Bert sent for Mr. Paxon to make one more appeal to his honesty. There was a long, rather stormy interview in the dismantled library, where only the huge painting and two chairs had been left. Bert had left the room under some pretense of questioning his sister, and Mr. Paxon was peeping about in a Paul Pry way that Jessie had told her brother was habitual with him, when he made a discovery. There was an ugly space in a recess, where Tom Thorpe's stationary desk had stood for ten long years against the wall. Scraps of paper and string, torn envelopes, all the debris of packing, were scattered about, but wedged into the top of the mop-board was an envelope, almost concealed, that Mr. Paxon was sure contained an inclosure. Warily he crept up to it, seized it and found it a sealed envelope directed:

"To JESSIE, my wife. To be opened only after my death."

He crammed it hastily into his pocket, and when Bert returned took his departure. Something important must be in that paper that had evidently slipped out of the desk when it was moved and escaped observation. But the disclosure was a startling one. Without any scruples of honor or honesty, Mr. Paxon broke the seal and read:

"DEAR JESSIE: It has been long known to you, dear, that my life was a precarious one, and you will not be surprised that I have made a little provision for you and the children. Poor Fred left me ten thousand dollars in United States bonds, and, unwilling to trust it to any bank, I have hidden it away in the lower right-hand corner of the picture he gave me. The interest will run on until you take the envelope from its hiding-place, as no one else will ever move the picture. Forgive me for keeping this one secret from you. TOM."

No one else! Why, they might tear it down any moment. A cold sweat broke out all over the rascal's body. All his hoarded wealth, the result of scheming, cheating, saving, was as nothing compared with this newly-discovered treasure. Nobody else must find those bonds!

But when he returned to the house he found every thing in hurried confusion, and Bert issuing hurried orders.

"I can't talk to you now," he said, as Mr. Paxon came up. "I am obliged to leave on the 7:30 p. m. train from B——, and it is nearly two o'clock now. There is still a wagon-load to go, and the children and Jessie are getting dressed for the carriage at three o'clock."

"But I must speak to you."

"And that confounded picture has to be packed, too!" cried Bert, bustling into the house. "Here, some of you fellows, bring a step-ladder!"

"No! no!" cried Mr. Paxon. "I—I came over to see if I couldn't buy that picture."

"Buy it!" Bert cried. "You might as well ask Jessie to sell you one of her boys! Why, her dear brother-in-law painted it!"

"But it looks so well where it is, and will be so awkward to move!" cried Mr. Paxon, watching with horror Bert's preparations to tear the painting from the wall. "I will give you a good price."

"How much? But I am sure Jessie will never part with it."

"Five hundred dollars."

"Bah!"

"A thousand!"

"A thousand dollars for such a work of art as that! Why, man alive, if Jessie ever could part with it it ought to bring five times that sum!"

"Five times that sum! Five thousand dollars!" cried Mr. Paxon.

"Certainly!" said Bert, coolly. "But we do not wish to sell it at all. Come, hurry up! Take out the top nails very carefully, there."

"I'll give you five thousand for it!" cried Mr. Paxon, desperately, rapidly calculating the ten years' interest on the bonds.

"But we leave here in half an hour. You don't carry five thousand dollars round in your pocket, do you?"

"No, but I carry my check-book. I'll give you a check!"

"Won't do! I can not stop to cash it."

"I'll run over to the bank with it myself."

"Well, you haven't much time. You get the money, and I'll speak to Jessie while you are gone. I'm not sure she will take it!"

Off darted Mr Paxon, and Bert hurried the last boxes on the wagon and sent it off just as the carriage drove up. Jessie and the boys were already seated when Mr. Paxon came round the corner, actually carrying the money in his hands.

Very carefully Bert counted it, the crisp notes for five hundred dollars each, that represented the exact sum that Tom had paid the rascally landlord for the house his widow was leaving.

"Correct!" he said, presently. "There is no need of a receipt. You can see the picture through the window. Good-bye!" The carriage whirled off, and Mr. Paxon entered the empty house. The workmen had gone with the wagon, but when he pulled the corner of the canvas, he found it already loosened from the frame. A large, yellow envelope, with three immense red seals, was behind it, and with trembling fingers he tore it open. A long slip of paper was the only inclosure, and half-fainting, the disappointed schemer read:

"This makes our account square."—Anna Shields, in N. Y. Ledger.

A Self-Extinguishing Candle.

A candle has recently been brought out which extinguishes itself after it has burned for an hour. This is done by a tiny extinguisher of tin which is fastened in the wax by wires and which effectually performs its task. It is only necessary to remove this diminutive extinguisher when its work is done and the candle is ready to burn another hour.

AT REST.

The Funeral of General George Crook.

AROUND THE BIER OF THE GREAT INDIAN FIGHTER.

The Casket and the Dead Hero—The Religious Services—The Loyal Legion—Ex-President Hayes' Son Escorts Mrs. Crooks—Full Details of the Obsequies—The Journey to Maryland For Burial.

CHICAGO, March 24.—General Crook's body lay in stay all day Saturday at the hotel, guarded by a detail of non-commissioned officers from Fort Sheridan. A large number of friends visited the hotel and viewed the remains.

The body is dressed in the full uniform of the rank of major general, while on the broad-cloth covered casket rests the general's hat and sword, with bunches of lilacs, roses and violets. The face of the dead man is wonderfully natural. The cheeks and eyes are as full as in life and every feature retains its outline and expression. In the room was stationed a body-guard of non-commissioned officers of the army from Fort Sheridan, they having been detailed by Secretary of War Proctor to act as bearers of the body as well as the guard. As soon as the doors were opened to the public Saturday, a large number of ladies and gentlemen filed around the head of the coffin, entering at the north door and passing out at the exit at the east end of the parlor. Many of the persons who called to take a last look at the face of General Crook were his friends during his lifetime and his old army associates.

General Williams received a telegram from Secretary of War Proctor this morning, detailing Colonels Corbin, Stanton, Heyl, Major Randall, Captain Roberts and Lieutenant Cannon to accompany the body to Oakland, Md., where they will act as the pall-bearers. The non-commissioned officers from Fort Sheridan will also go to Oakland, however, and will act as the actual bearers of the corpse.

The Funeral.

CHICAGO, March 24.—The arrangements for the funeral were complete. Services were held at 1 p. m. Sunday. Rev. Dr. McPherson of the Second Presbyterian church, assisted by Dr. Clinton Locke, Rev. Dr. Thomas and Professor Swing, conducted the services. Mrs. Crook is suffering from nervous prostration but surgeon McClelland says she will be much better soon.

The Sad Rites.

CHICAGO, March 24.—The closing chapter of the record of Major General George Crook's connection with the west was written in the morning, when relatives and friends, comrades and ex-comrades in arms, gathered from afar and near around his bier in the parlor of the Grand Pacific, to breath a final farewell to all that if mortal of the great Indian fighter, and then to escort the remains on the first stage of the journey to the grave in Maryland soil. All night long the casket was guarded by a detail of the officers from western ports, who had been summoned here by the late general, to serve upon the Steele court martial. At six o'clock the help in all departments of the hotel and with whom General Crook had been very popular, paid their last tribute of respect to his memory, and shortly afterwards the doors were opened to the public. From this time on to one o'clock, a steady stream of people of both sexes, white and colored, millionaires and laborers, and to a total of over five thousand, filed past the casket, which was surrounded with a large number of exquisite floral tributes The services were conducted by Rev Dr. McPherson Presbyterian; Rev. Dr Clinton Locke, Episcopalian; Professor Swing, and Rev. Dr. H. W. Thomas and ex President Hayes and Judge Q. A. Gresham, representing the Loyal Legion occupied seat at the foot of the casket, with General H F. Devale, of Kansas City, who succeeded General Crook in the 36th Ohio during the war, on their right. Facing the head of the casket were some two hundred members of the Loyal Legion from this city, Milwaukee, Omaha, St. Paul and Cincinnati, together with the personal staff of the late general, the official and personal friends of the deceased being gathered in the communicating parlors. Mrs. Crook, who bore up bravely during the exercises, was escorted by Webb C. Hayes, and Mrs. Reed, her sister, by Lieutenant Venno. Dr. McPherson opened the serveics with a short supplication, and after the audience joined in repeating the Lord's prayer, the hymns "Rest for the Weary," and "Something for Thee," were touchingly rendered by the choir of the Second Presbyterian church. Eloquent tributes to the dead general's memory were then paid by Professor Swing and Dr. McPherson, who dwelt upon his faithfulness, self-denial and self sacrifice; his devotion to his country, and his many noble attributes as a man. The addresses were very affecting, and many of the veterans present were unable to repress their emotion. The pronouncing of the benediction by Dr. Locke brought the services to a close, and the remains were escorted to the Baltimore & Ohio depot by the four regiments of the national guard, the Loyal Legion and the Grand Army of the Republic. The procession was over a quarter of a mile in length and the sidewalks were packed with spectators, many of whom bowed their heads as the catafalque passed by. Two special cars were attached to the 3 p. m. express, one being occupied by Mrs. Crook, Mrs. Reed, their friends and the military escort, and the other by the casket and the guard of honor.

Walter Crook, of Dayton, Ohio, a brother of the dead General, while on his way in a street car to the hotel in the morning with his brother John, was suddenly taken ill with indications of apoplexy. He was quickly conveyed to the hotel, and shortly after revived, although it was not considered safe for him to be present at the services. The remains will reach Oakland, Md., where the final interment takes place this evening.

Indians on the War Path.

ENSENADA, LOWER CALIFORNIA, March 24.—The Cocopali Indians are on the war path on the other side of the peninsula. Reports are conflicting, but it is believed that they are murdering Mexican settlers and fighting among themselves. Governor Tope has sent a large detachment of troops over the mountains to the scene of the disturbance.

Prairie Fires.

BURLINGTON, COL., March 24.—Prairie fires are raging in Southeastern Colorado down to the Kansas border. Already a hundred thousand acres have been devasted. There are no fatalities as yet reported.

CLINTON, MICH., MARCH 27, '90

Mr. Crego spent Sunday in Jackson.

Alonzo Clark went to Chicago Saturday.

School closes Friday for one week's vacation.

Mrs. Chas Parker, of Eaton Rapids, is visiting her parents.

Mrs. Ann Frost is suffering from an attack of pleurisy.

Mrs. Maun, of Newton, Kan., is visiting at P. C. Smith's.

Mrs. Geo. Rowland, of Albion, is at T. D. Lancaster's.

W. P. Hamilton, of Detroit, was in town over Sunday.

Eva Shumman returned from the west Saturday.

Libbie Wallinger has nearly recovered from the mumps.

Sylvester Nase and wife, of Adrian, were in town over Sunday.

Will Mattison commenced clerking for F. D. Lancaster Monday.

C. F. Clark was in Ann Arbor a few days last week.

Geo Mahrla started for Fargo Dakota, Wednesday.

Miss Flora Fisk is expected home from Nebraska this week.

W. W. Demuth and Alonzo Mills went to Adrian Monday on business.

Mrs. Chas Becker came over Saturday from Ypsilanti, remaining over Sunday.

Miss Laura Haggart, who is teaching in Cambridge, Ill., is spending her week's vacation at Clinton.

Chas Lewis, of Wheatland, and Dan Strang, of Adrian, are guests of Minor Strang and family.

Miss Katie Cotton and brother Mell will go to housekeeping in part of C. Fuller's house.

Emma Haarer, together with Mrs. Terryberry, has been wrestling with the measles.

Nine of Mat Staib's family were down with the measles at one time, but they are all out again.

James Eagan, of Ann Arbor, is spending a few weeks at the farm and in town.

Mrs. Ewing was called to Jackson Saturday by the illness of her daughter, Mrs. Ordiway.

Mr. Taylor Alls and wife, of Denver, Col., are visiting friends here and in Bridgewater.

Mrs. Ewing entertained her Sunday school class last Friday evening. They spent a very pleasant evening.

Mrs. McMaster went to Toledo Tuesday to buy goods. She expects to show a new and elegant line in a few days.

M. B. Fitzpatrick has moved his family here from Packwaukee, Wis. and occupies rooms in Mrs. John Smith's house.

Miss Ella Mahrla, who has been spending a few weeks with her grand parents, A. Ward and wife, returned to her home at Manchester.

The ladies of the Baptist church gave a social at the church parlors Tuesday evening. A good attendance was reported.

The members of the Baptist church will give their pastor a donation on Tuesday evening, Apr. 1. A cordial invitation to all.

Geo. Kodling was out of town Sunday. It is astonishing that NA attractions could draw Geo. away over these bad roads. But we suppose roads or weather cut no figure.

A fire alarm was sounded from Mrs. Joseph Kies's Tuesday morning but prompt assistance averted a conflagration. The coal stove had tipped over and filled the room with coals and smoke.

The New York Fashion Bazar for April is filled to overflowing with information for all those interested in the spring fashions. It is especially valuable to dress-makers and milliners because of its profusion of engravings and fashion plates. There is a large number of plates of children's fashions such as no other magazine in America affords. Its literary contents are equal to its pictorial embellishments.

During Floral Festival week, half fare round trip tickets, containing admission coupons, will be sold for all regular trains on all railroads centering in Detroit. The tickets will be good to return the same or following day. The Floral and Musical Charity Festival, for the benefit of the 23 Detroit charities, will open at noon on Tuesday, April 22nd and continue day and evening until midnight, April 25th. The plans are upon twice the scale of those of last year, and the floral exhibition and the musical program will greatly exceed anything previously undertaken in Michigan. Hundreds of Detroit's fairest ladies will occupy the 23 floral booths, which this year will be built in the architecture of 23 different countries. As several eastern orchid houses will compete for the 13 costly special premiums offered for Orchids, a great exhibition of these costly and wonderful plants is thus insured. The Detroit Journal, which organized and is managing this exhibition, is devoting a great deal of space from day to day in describing the promised attractions.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Cobweb parties are the latest social thing in Hudson.

The interior of the M. E. Church at Hudson is being papered.

The gross receipts of the "deestrick skule" entertainment at Blissfield was sixty-five dollars.

There are two printers in the Hudson Gazette office whose united term of service in the art make a total of 100 years.

Hudson gathered a part of its ice crop on Sunday. They may need that part of the crop badly in the hereafter.

The weather editor of the Addison Courier thinks February and March have not transposed on the calendar this year.

The man who was caught in Morenci with stolen skunk skins in his possession paid $47.25 for the four pelts. He will hereafter conduct a less odorous business.

La grippe has nearly disappeared, but in its place has come a disease very similar, which is rapidly becoming universal through the country. It is called politician's hand-shake.

A new mail route was begun Monday morning here, mail being carried daily to Ogden Center and South Fairfield. Probably a new postoffice will also soon be established at Marshall's Corners.—Blissfield Advance.

H. B. Mathias, a former resident of Tecumseh, and late of Addison, was found drowned in the river at Jackson on the morning of the 18th. He was a cigar maker by trade and leaves a family af seven children. It is supposed that the drowning was accidental.

At young people's social at Holloway the men of the village will allow themselves to be sold. This they believe will not only be helping a good cause, but will guage the cash value at which they are esteemed by the ladies. They could be worse sold than they will be on that occasion and at the hands of the fair ones too.—Adrian Press.

We understand that the cheese factory, in the building at Keene's corners, is an assured fact, and that cows enough have been pledged to give the factory a good send-off. The scheme is receiving the hearty support of the farmers in the locality. It is claime that enough can be realized from th sale of milk to make the keeping of cows profitable.

Guernsey P. Waring, having embarked on an Adrian newspaper craft, wants to sell his hearse and undertaking business, over in Ridgeway. Let Guernsey keep his hearse. The craft he is sailing being prohibition is said to be making considerable water. He may want to do his own business at his own funeral and so help out the mortuary expenses.—Adrian Press.

Some High School girls at Tecumseh, who dine from their baskets at the building, went into the furnace room the other day to pop some corn. But when the little dears went upstairs they didn't go up. The janitor had locked them down cellar with the rats—O, my! and weren't they scared? They spent half an hour of such subterrestrial misery as to nearly turn their hair white.—Adrian Press.

Macon grange will this evening discuss the subject: "Resolved, That it would be beneficial to the township to own at least four good road scrapers and several gravel pits in different parts of the town, the several districts to have free access to them for road purposes." It might properly be further "Resolved, That the four-story quarrel over the distribution would be sure to make the gravel fly."—Adrian Press.

Hudson boasts of a married lady in that place who wears a 2 B shoe. Hillsdale has several ladies that cannot wear a shoe of that size for fear of losing it. One maiden lady requires a No. 13½, as do several young ladies we know, and if we are correctly advised there is a married lady here who travels around easily in a No. 13. Try again, Hudson, we had the last say, but the above is sole-um truth.—Hillsdale Standard.

If you have a little business and are out of debt, don't fret and work yourself and your good wife into the grave for the sake of money. You have but one life to live and it is very brief a best. Take a little comfort and pleasure as you go along day by day, and to do a little more good to others. A morbid, insatiable desire to possess the earth, to grab everything in sight, is yet the foundation of more misery than almost any other thing.

The managers of the Gas and Oil Company have at last concluded to "shoot" the well on the Wood farm, and are negotiating with parties to come and do the work. We believe their action will be satisfactory to all, or nearly all, the stockholders and it ought to have been done long ago. Therefore, if within the next thirty days the earth should tremble for five miles around, don't think it is an earthquake.—Blissfield Advance.

At the examination of teachers at Adrian this month there were 178 candidates. For every school house there are several applicants. If a man wants a wife or a district wants a school ma'am, they have only to hang out a shingle, but if a hired girl is wanted there is a sad lack of candidates. Of course in Utah the remedy might suggest itself, but in a country where a man can only get married to one woman, and she from sickness or other cause is unable to attend to household affairs, he must do the work himself.—Hudson Post.

At a meeting at the Ames school house, two miles north and one mile west of Hudson, Monday afternoon, George Lord said he would start the neighboring cheese factory if the farmers would pledge the product of 200 cows. He told The Gazette yesterday that he thought it would be a go, and operations would commence the second week in April. Alfred Colvin, of Medina, will be installed as cheese maker. He is second to none in that capacity. The Beal factory in Quaker will also resume under the management of Otis Beal, with 125 cows guaranteed.—Hudson Gazette.

LODGE'S SCHEME

For Pure and Fair Congressional Elections.

HE PROPOSES A UNIVERSAL AUSTRALIAN BALLOT SYSTEM

With Modifications and Additions to Suit the Case—Full Details of What His Measure Is.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Mr. Lodge, of Massachusetts, introduced in the house Saturday a bill to regulate the election of representatives in congress by means of a federal election law. The bill provides that whenever 500 persons, voters in any congressional district in the United States not less than two months prior to the next election of representatives in congress, petition the judge of the United States district court for that section to place the next congressional election in that district under the provisions of the act, it shall be the duty of the judge to announce that the act will govern the next election in the district, and he is directed to appoint the proper officers of election. Two registrars are to be appointed, one from each of the two principal political parties for each voting precinct. The registration is to close not less than ten days before the election. Registrars who place on their lists the names of ineligible persons are to be subject to fine or imprisonment or both. Other violations of the law are also amenable to punishment. Two inspectors and two deputy inspectors are to be assigned to each voting precinct to take charge of the ballot box and to check on a list of registered voters furnished by the registrars the name of each voter before he votes, and no person will be allowed to vote until his name is checked. No one shall be admited within the rail to vote unless his name appears on the registered list, nor until his name has been checked off the list by the inspectors. Inspectors failing to perform their duties will be subject to punishment. After the registrars have prepared their preliminary lists, it is provided that they shall meet publicly to register all duly qualified voters who may come before them and who have not been registered already, and to strike names from the preliminary list when cause is shown. The names of candidates nominated for congress are to be furnished to the clerk of the United States district court in which the election district is situated, and the ballots are to be prepared by the later at the public expense. All ballots are to be uniform and are to contain all the names of persons nominated, the one to be voted for to be checked off by the voter. A blank space is to be left at the end of each ballot in which the voter may insert the name of any person not printed on the ballot. A record of the number of ballots printed and furnished to each polling place is to be kept. At the opening of the polls in each polling place the seals of three packages of ballots the registrars are to be broken and the ballots made ready for use. The second and third sets of ballots are to be retained until needed.

The election inspectors are to select the voting places and the registrars shall cause these places to be suitably provided with a sufficient number of voting shelves or compartments, at which voters may conveniently mark their ballots, so that they may be screened in doing so from the observation of others, and a guard rail shall be so constructed and placed that only such persons as are inside the rail can approach within twenty feet of the ballot boxes and of the voting shelves or compartments. The arrangements shall be such that neither the ballot boxes nor the voting shelves or compartments shall be hidden from the view of those outside the guard rail. The number of voting shelves is to be not less than one for every seventy-five voters and not less than three in any precinct, and not less than ten in any city voting precinct.

When a properly registered person comes to the polling place the registrators are to give him a ballot. The voter is then to go to one of the shelves and after preparing his ballot is to place it in the box and leave the enclosure. Each voter is allowed six minutes and no more in which to deposit his ballot. Persons who are blind or who cannot read or write may have their ballot prepared by the inspectors. Challenges are to be allowed only under certain conditions. When a person is challenged for a cause recognized by law the election officers are to have his name written on the ballot, together with the names of the challenger, and no challenges for the purpose of delaying voting are to be entertained. The inspectors of elections are to count the votes at the closing of the polls and announce the result publicly. Two certificates of the result are to be prepared and furnished to the clerk of the District Court. The judge of the court and the clerk are directed to compute the total votes of all the precincts for each candidate and to transmit a certificate of election of the candidate receiving the greatest number of votes to the clerk of the House in Washington.

ALEX SANDS

Takes His Place on the Stand in the Ballot Box Forgery Case.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Hon. Alex Sands, of Cincinnati, was before the Ohio ballot box investion committee. He denied a statement made by Private Secretary Kurtz intimating that President Cleveland had desired action by congress on the Campbell ballot box bill, and that he (Sands) had knowledge of the existence of an alleged contract. He asserted that he know nothing whatever about the ballot box contract, and said if he had known of the proposed publication and charges upon the subject, he would have advised against it, as it was probably untrue.

A NEWSPAPER MAN

Attempts to Shoot a State Senator—Bullet vs. Brawn.

BISMARK, N. D. March 17.—Conde Hamlin, a St. Paul newspaper correspondent, attempted to shoot State Senator Alexander McKenzie in the lobby of the Sheridan hotel this afternoon, but the latter, a powerful man, disarmed the newspaper man and with the revolver that had been pointed at him held at bay a crowd of twenty or twenty-five of the legislators friends who were bent upon lynching the would-be murderer. Having saved Hamlin from violence, McKenzie gave him his revolver and escourted him to the depot where Hamlin boarded a train and was carried beyond the reach of his enemies. The difficulty was caused by McKenzie laying his hands on Hamlin's shoulders and asking him why he had lied about a lottery bill scheme.

What a Difference

between the WOMAN who is wedded to old-fashioned ideas and she who is bright enough to appreciate a new one. Everybody is striving to get something to make life easier—often it's right beside them—those who are bright enough to embrace it get the benefits, those who don't go backwards—their work grows harder. Pearline makes life easier and cleaner. Washing and cleaning done with Pearline has about enough work in it to make it good exercise—but not enough to tire the body or ruffle the temper.

Not ours, but the word of the millions who use it as to whether it hurts the hands, clothes or paint—probably your neighbors can tell you all about PEARLINE.

Send it back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, the honest thing to do is—send it back. 167 JAMES PYLE, New York.

The FORUM

A MONTHLY REVIEW OF LIVING SUBJECTS

By the Foremost Writers in the World.

THE FORUM has won the highest place reached by any periodical; for it publishes articles by more authoritative writers and by more workers along instructive lines of activity than any other publication. It contains eleven studies of great subjects every month. It is impartial, giving hearings alike to each side. It is financially independent, and it belongs to no sect or party or "interest." It is never sensational, but it aims always to be instructive.

The FORUM is of great value to that part of my college work which deals with practical politics and current questions. Two sets are hardly enough for daily use by students.—Prof. ALFRED BUSHNELL HART, of Harvard.

I consider THE FORUM as furnishing the most intelligent and sympathetic audience that a thoughtful writer can find to address in any land.—Prof. ALEXANDER WINCHELL, of the University of Michigan.

THE FORUM continues to hold its place as the foremost of our magazines, for the variety, the value, and the weight of its contributions.—THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There has come forward no problem of grave importance since THE FORUM was established that has not been discussed in its pages by masters of the subject. Announcements of forthcoming articles can seldom be made long in advance, for THE FORUM'S discussions are always of problems of present concern. Every such problem that the year 1890 will bring forward will be discussed, whether in politics, or religion, or social science, or practical affairs. The January number will contain a reply by ex-Speaker J. G. CARLISLE to Senator Cullom's recent article on "How the Tariff Affects the Farmer."

HUMAN NATURE.

If you are interested in the study of HUMAN NATURE and Character, and the improvement of yourself and others in any way, we would like to call your attention to the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL AND SCIENCE OF HEALTH, a well-known magazine which has been published for fifty years, and is devoted to all that will improve men Mentally, Morally, or Physically. It is the only magazine of its kind published in this country, and in every way the most important.

The specialty of PORTRAITS of distinguished, or notorious persons, with studies of their character and sketches of their lives, which has always been a marked and attractive feature of the JOURNAL, will still lead the host of good things prepared for the reader.

No one can study themselves or others and not be greatly benefited by the results, and therefore no one can afford NOT to read the JOURNAL. A knowledge of HUMAN NATURE would enable us to understand ourselves and others and to avoid many of the disappointments in life.

TERMS.—Monthly at $2 a year, or 20 cents a Number. To each new subscriber is given either the PHRENOLOGICAL BUST or NEW PHRENOLOGICAL CHART Premium. When the premiums are sent, 15 cents extra must be received with each subscription to pay postage on the JOURNAL and the expense of boxing and packing the Bust, which will be sent by express, or No. 2, a smaller size, or the Chart Premium, will be sent by mail, postpaid. Send 10 cents for specimen Numbers, Premium List, Posters, Catalogue of books, etc. Address

Mattie Rappleye, of Dundee, made her parents a short visit last week.

A heavy thunder and snow storm visited this section Thursday night.

Prof. H. W. Daniels accompanied his sister home Monday to spend his vacation.

The winter term of school closed Friday afternoon after a very successful term.

Several of our senior students attended the teachers' examination at Adrian Saturday.

Lou Arner returned from a week's visit with friends at Tecumseh, Saturday.

Miss Fannie Kelley, of Holloway, was the guest of Marcie Kelley last Thursday.

William Andrews has been confined to the house for the past week by poor health.

Miss Millie Kelley, of Holloway, spent several days at the home of her brother, Morris Kelley.

Master Clarence Jackson, of Tecumseh, is enjoying his vacation with relatives and friends here.

Albert L. Arner, of Detroit, spent a few days with his mother, Mrs. Louise Arner, returning Monday.

To Mr. and Mrs. Darius Curtis a fine Prohibition baby boy on Thursday. All doing well.

Prof. and Mrs. Martin Palmer, of Flat Rock, are home for a few days during their vacation.

Leila Sutton spent the Sabbath in Monroe with friends, returning the first of the week.

Hattie Daniels, of Onsted, spent the Sabbath with her brother, Prof. Daniels, at the home of H. J. Williams.

Arthur Reynolds, of Laselle, Monroe county, was the guest of his sister, Mrs. F. J. Temple, last week.

C. W. Pelham, of Woodstock, Michigan, agent for the Fleming reversible road machine, was in the village Friday in the interest of that machine.

Earnest Coller, of Tecumseh, was the guest of Mrs. John Arner and family Friday of last week. He is tuning and repairing pianos and organs.

F. E. Pocklington rejoices over a birthday present from his wife. He being a woman suffragist she presented him with a fine girl baby, Sunday, March 30.

The spring term of school begins next Monday, April 7th, with Prof. H. W. Daniels and Miss Clara Temple as teachers. It is hoped there will be as good an interest taken by the students as has been taken in the past.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Miss Delia Kerr is visiting friends at Adrian.

James Campbell has come to spend a few weeks with his parents.

Miss Susie Osgood, of Macon, visited friends in Holloway and Raisin this week.

Mrs. John Hollister and Mrs. Dora Crumb, of Adrian, spent the Sabbath at Benj. Kelley's.

Miss Alice Bethel, operator at Munson visited her sister at this station last Tuesday.

Rev. Peter Zeller arrived on Monday to aid Rev. Begel in conducting the meetings this week.

Miss Eliza Burnham, who has been visiting at A. M. Sleeper's for some time, returned to her home on Wednesday last.

Palmyra Grange gave an excellent entertainment at the Hall on Saturday evening. Owing to the stormy weather the attendance was only fair. But should they present the drama again at this place we doubt if the Hall will be large enough to accommodate the crowd, as the people are just waking up to understand what Palmyra amateur talent really is.

Alvah Raymond was able to ride to the station to meet his daughter, Mrs. Bell, on Tuesday morning.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

RAISIN RACKET.

School closed at the Seminary Friday for a week's vacation.

Quite a number in the vicinity attended the teachers' examination at Adrian Saturday.

T. G. Mead drives a new Banker colt, bought of Tom Kyle, of Tecumseh.

School commenced in district No. 6 Monday, with Phœbe Osgood, of Lake Ridge, as teacher.

Spring work has now begun in earnest. It looks as though March and January had changed around.

Miss Susie Osgood, of Macon, spent the latter part of the week with her cousin, Mrs. A. C. Green.

Mrs. B. I. Laing, of Palmyra, a former resident of Raisin, is very sick with typhoid pneumonia. She is the mother of Mrs. Chas. Slayton and Mrs. John Richards, Jr. It is the termination of the la grippe. Her many friends in the Valley are anxious as to the final result of her illness.

One of the pleasantest occasions of the season occurred last Wednesday evening in the Valley at the residence of Samuel Brown, it being the marriage of his daughter, Susie E., to George Willitts. The gathering will long be remembered by those who were present. There were about seventy-five guests present and many congratulations were extended to the bride and groom. They were ushered into the room with instrumental music, Miss Eva Kirk, of Adrian, presiding at the piano. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. E. Wilbur, of Adrian College. The presents were a very choice and beautiful selection, from silver to china and from antique oak to linen. She had been teaching several terms of school in Fairfield and her scholars remembered her with an elegant silver water pitcher. The bride was a graduate of the Raisin Valley Seminary class of 1884. They left on the eleven o'clock train over the Wabash to Niagara Falls via Detroit and on their return will occupy the former home of the groom one-half mile north of the Friends' Church.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

School will commence in district No. 3 April 7.

The lyceum will meet next Friday evening at the home of J. S. Allen.

Sadie Taylor has been very sick the past week with the measles but is better now.

Robert McCollum moves this week to Gratiot county. They carry with them the regrets and best wishes of their friends and neighbors.

L. E. Taylor and wife are expected home this week from Orion, where Mrs. Taylor has been treated for a cancer. The cancer has been removed and the sore is healing rapidly.

Last Wednesday Edith Spalding lost her identity, becoming Mrs. Willie Smith. Mr. Spalding thinks it uncertain whether he has lost a daughter or gained a son, but concludes to make the most of the situation by claiming both son and daughter. We doubt not that the young people themselves are happy and well pleased with the arrangement.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Harvey and Webbie Pearce called on Tipton friends a few days since.

Ethan Allen, whom we noted having a paralytic stroke a few weeks ago, is no better.

Burt Poucher moves this week on the Horace Eaton farm, two miles east of Tecumseh.

Spring has surely come. Last week, as John Dunn was going across lots to Tipton, he found a nest of young meadow larks and took one of them with him as a proof of his story.

Mr. Maltby, father of Mrs. Frank Mangus, died at the home of his daughter last Friday morning. Funeral services were held at the house Sunday, Rev. Mr. Patchen officiating.

A party at the home of Simeon Whelan last Saturday evening was a pleasant affair, the occasion being the twenty-first birthday of his daughter Maggie. She was the recipient of many useful and ornamental presents, and all went away wishing her many happy returns of the day.

We Caution All Against Them.

The unprecedented success and merit of Ely's Cream Balm—a real cure for catarrh, hay fever and cold in the head—has induced many adventurers to place catarrh medicines bearing some resemblance in appearance, style or name upon the market, in order to trade upon the reputation of Ely's Cream Balm. Don't be deceived. Buy only Ely's Cream Balm. Many in your immediate locality will testify in highest commendation of it. A particle is applied into each nostril; no pain; agreeable to use. Price 50 cents.

BRITTON BUDGET.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

WHEREAS, Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, saw fit to remove from our midst that beloved young man, Clayton Smith, whose life promised much of good for mankink,

Resolved: That while we deeply mourn his loss, in behalf of the bereaved parents and friends, we humbly bow our heads in tears of submission to Him who doeth all things well.

Resolved, That as we shall greatly miss our dear young friend in our society, yet remember his exemplary deportment among us and as a society of Christian Endeavor believe that our loss is his gain. therefore,

Resolved, That as a society we shall hold his name in grateful remembrance and to our young friends say: Regard the example of the deceased as one worthy of imitation.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved parents and relatives, also to the district school and friends, our heartfelt sympathy in this great affliction.

Resolved, That these resolutions be printed in the TECUMSEH HERALD. Adrian Times and Michigan Messenger and that a copy of the same be transmitted to the family of the deceased.

By order of committee of Society of Christian Endeavor.

JAMES WRIGHT,
MAMIE BOWERMAN,
EZRA SINK.

Card of Thanks.

We extend our thanks to the friends who so readily manifested their sympathy in preparing for memorial services so voluntarily engaged in and well conducted in the Christian Church Sunday morning, March 30th, expressive of deep sympathy for us in the loss of our darling son, Clayton Smith.

CHARLES AND ALICE SMITH.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Miss Sadie Taylor is quite sick with the measles.

The many friends of Mrs. L. E. Taylor will be delighted to learn that she has so far recovered as to be expected home this week.

Jas. Sloan closed his school in the Hurry Dist. last Friday; the spring term will soon begin with Frank Lambkin as teacher.

The old Wisner farm has recently changed hands quite rapidly; owned a few days since by Fisk Beebe who bought it of Wm. Wisner just before he left for Nebraska, it has now been divided up; Ed. Wisner taking a 40, Deming the 10 acre sugar bush, Mrs. A. B. Wisner 110 and Mr. Beebe retaining 30 acres.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Witherall for a brand new boy.

Don't Feel Well,

And yet you are not sick enough so consult a doctor, or you refrain from to doing for fear you will alarm yourself and friends—we will tell you just what you need. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which will lift you out of that uncertain, uncomfortable, dangerous condition into a state of good health, confidence and cheerfulness. You've no idea how potent this pecular medicine is in cases like yours.

ONSTED ODDS.

Roads are again quite muddy.

Charlie Reed and wife now occupy Thomas Curtis' house in North Rome.

Quite a large quantity of maple syrup and sugar is being made in this locality this spring.

Bayard Taylor (not the poet) has moved onto his mother's place in North Rome.

Fred Glenn has gone with his family to Chicago to locate, if he can find employment.

Our doctor had a touch of la grippe a while ago, so now he knows how his grippe medicine tastes perhaps.

A Mr. Smith, from Rome, has rented the widow Fleming farm, just vacated by Bayard Taylor, and has moved thereon.

The funeral services of Mrs. John Lee, an old pioneer of this vicinity, were held at the church on Tuesday afternoon of last week.

The concert at the church last Sunday evening was very slimly attended on account of it's not being duly advertised—also very bad roads.

Most of the farmers are now employed sowing their clover seed these days when the wind don't blow too hard.

Mrs. Perkins has renovated and repainted her store and this week is in Toledo buying up a large assortment of first-class millinery goods for the spring and summer trade. She is worthy of the patronage of the whole community.

Harry Hawkins has captured the world's fair, or rather has captured one of Chicago's fair ones, and they were married a few days ago at the great city and he brought her triumphantly home. We wish them success.

EAST TECUMSEH TALK.

C. F. Morley is moving back on his farm this week.

School commenced last Monday with Frances Kehoe as teacher.

David McWilliams is moving on the F. V. Horton farm this week.

Report says that Frank Clarkson has bought part of the Jehiel Davidson farm.

B. J. Bond is the latest addition to the T. and M. Telegraph Co. Mrs. Crowell, of Brownville, has also lately placed an instrument on the T. and M.

We would like to have the Lake Ridge correspondent explain who the Professor is that had the big crowd following the elephant, so graphically described in the HERALD of the 20th. The Lake Ridge correspondent told us in a former communication that Manager Bowen would have his hands full etc., and again the Macon Center correspondent mentioned Manager Benedict as putting in the instruments. Now, up in this neck o' the woods, when we want to give the two managers high-sounding titles, we call them Cyrus and Jay, respectively; consequently it could not have been either of them. Now, we sometimes think that possibly the Lake Ridge man is the Professor mentioned, as we have heard of his going over the line looking up the mistakes. Come, now, Alec, rise and explain.

DEVILS LAKE DOINGS.

Miss Betta Parkhurst returned Saturday from a visit with friends in Rollin.

Ed. Pierson has been seriously ill with a swelling under his arm, but is some better at present writing.

Please pass the cigars this way, Jerry. A brand-new girl came to the home of Jerry Lucas to stay, last Wednesday.

A fortune teller is making his home here for a short time and every one is having his fortune told. One young widower is nearly crazy because the F. T. told him that there were two ladies living near that wanted him very much and he cannot find out who they are.

Deafness Can't be Cured

By local applications, as they can not reach the deceased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, APL. 3.

The month of March kept up its reputation to the last.

Major McKinley's tariff bill is'nt advancing Major McKinley's political prospects worth a cent.

The Republicans in Congress are fixing up a record that will produce a tidal wave in 1890 which will eclipse theone of 1874.

The Philadelphia Times hits the nail on the head in saying: This is the slogan for 1890. Tax reform, ballot reform, civil service reform.

Congressman Seney of Ohio, thinks that Gov. Campbell of Ohio will be on the national democratic ticket in 1892. Cleveland and Campbell would be a winning ticket.

The Michigan Congressmen are opposed to a reduction of the tobacco tax and favor a heavy cut on sugar. They are beginning to see which way the wind is shifting.

The new year is already making a record for great calamities. The cyclone which swept over Louisville last week was one of the most terrible visitations that this country has ever known.

Louisville was not the only town damaged by the terrible storm of last week. Several towns in Kentucky, and Southern Indiana and Illinois were visited, resulting in considerable loss of live and property.

Sergeant Dunn of the signal service predicts a great flood in the Mississippi Valley within the next two weeks. He claims it will be the greatest calamity that has ever befallen that section of country.

Gov. Hill has appointed Gen. Dan. Sickles sheriff of New York City in place of Flack, who has resigned to escape impeachment. Gov. Hill showed a level head in this emergency, to say the least.

Mr. Springer got mad one day last week and scolded the house because so many members were absent. Mr. Springer did not reflect that Speaker Reed was there and hence the other members were not needed.

Senator Sherman's anti-trust bill has been shelved in the Senate. When the United States Senate shall pass an anti-trust bill, it will be time to look for an ice crop in Florida, or a shipment of oranges from Greenland.

If we are to adopt the policy of lifting ourselves over the fence by the boot straps, should'nt we all take turns in tugging at the boot straps? If it be right to tax the farmers to help the manufacturers, is'nt it right to tax the manufacturers to help the farmers?

An Exchange says: Whilst farmers are waiting for the "benefits" of a home trade in tin plate manufacturing, they will have an opportunity of figuring out what they lose in the meantime by the abstraction of millions of dollars from the spending power of the people by the increased cost of all the tinware they use and lower prices for certain of their produce.

The Republicans will not shut out foreign wool or foreign hides or any form of Western raw materials used in Eastern factories, but they will cheerfully shut out foreign eggs. The sensible thing for Western farmers to do is to parch their corn and feed it to their protected hens instead of burning it. They will thus realize the benefits of protection for farm products. If they can't sell the eggs, they can save them until they are ripe and use them in the next campaign on the stump.—St. Louis Republic.

The tax placed upon farm products by the McKinley bill is admission that for twenty five years this class of producers have been kept out of their rightful share of the benefits of tariff taxation. What the other fellows have been collecting from them while they got no return benefits would make a pretty big round sum. This is what tariff reformers have been preaching these many months, and it is now conceded that the campaign orators who strove to convince the farmers that they received full benefit for the tribute they yielded up, were telling a positive untruth.—Toledo Bee.

THE McKINLEY TARIFF BILL.

The more Major McKinley's new tariff bill is examined and discussed, the more apparent it becomes that the passage of any tariff bill this session is very doubtful. Public sentiment has undergone a radical change, even since the last election, on this subject. The manufacturers of New England are clamoring for free raw materials. The overburdened farmers of the Northwest are demanding reduced taxes on manufactured goods. The special beneficiaries of the tariff are unwilling to surrender any portion of their plunder; in fact, like Oliver Twist, they are crying for more. Then too, if the extravagant schemes to which the Republican party is pledged are to be taken care of, it will be dangerous to reduce the revenues of the government; a deficit is threatened, even with present revenues. It is an easy matter to humbug the voters with the free trade bugaboo during an election campaign, but when it comes to adjusting the schedules of the tariff so as to both raise revenue and afford protection, so as to raise prices to the seller and reduce prices to the buyer at the same time, the high tariff doctors discover that this is no easy task. The angel Gabriel himself could'nt fix a war tariff in these days of peace, in such a manner as to satisfy all sections and all classes.

* * *

But it will be seen that the influences which elected Tom Reed Speaker, and which furnished the "fat" to grease the wheels of the party machine in the last campaign, are taken care of in the new tariff. Whatever changes may be made no harm will come to them. First note the articles on which reductions are made. The tax on snuff is repealed. How thankful the octogenarian matron will be, as she sits in her arm-chair knitting socks for the grandchildren, to know that the powers that be have condescended to give her untaxed snuff hereafter. Farmers and planters growing tobacco will be untaxed, while the tax on manufactured tobacco will be reduced one half, from eight to four cents per pound. There is also a cut of one half in the sugar tax. Alcohol used in the arts is made free. This will give the "arts" a boom, without doubt. Snuff and alcohol used in the arts will be free hereafter. Let us be thankful for small favors. The reductions on tobacco and sugar will curtail the government receipts no doubt. They may reduce the prices of these articles to the consumer, but more likely not. In both cases the cut is made on the raw material and retained on the manufactured product. Thus sugar refiners and tobacco manufacturers will obtain their raw material free, and they in turn, by combination, can still hold up the retail price and exact the same tribute from the consumer as heretofore. The only exception to this general arrangement is that Connecticut seed leaf is protected more than at present, which is done to help out a handful of tobacco growers in the Connecticut valley.

* * *

The tax on all other articles, yielding revenue to any amount, is left unchanged or increased. Earthen ware and glass ware, which are among the highest taxed goods on the schedule, are unchanged. The tariff on crockery ware, now 70 per cent, is about four times what it was before the war, when this industry was in its infancy. A few weeks ago, the factories at Trenton, N. J., were offered to an English syndicate, and a sworn statement of the combine showed the average profits to be 22 per cent. To counterbalance the reductions on rum, snuff and tobacco, the tax on tin plate is raised to 2,2 10 cents per pound which will yield a revenue of $14,000,000. The tax on pocket cutlery is increased. The tax on barley, hops, potatoes, hay, and eggs is increased, but this increase will have but little influence on the revenue, either way. If it shall help the farmer at all it will be scarcely appreciated, and will increase the cost of living to laboring men in our villages and cities. If it shall not help the farmer, then what will become of the boasted benefits of protection on farm products. No prophet can foretell exactly what the result of these taxes would be, but reasoning from the analogy of wool and wheat, it is very doubtful whether all these taxes together would benefit the farmers one single dollar.

* * *

In another direction Blaine's fine Italian hand is seen in this business. A brief item in a Washington dispatch a few days ago contained these words: "It has transpired that in the debate on the report of the Committee on Customs Union in the Pan-American Congress, the United States delegates, on the authority of Secretary Blaine, offered full reciprocity with the Argentine Republic, Dr. Saens Pens, a delegate from that country, having advocated free trade."

So Brother Blaine himself, the chief apostle of protection, is becoming a free trader! The exports of the Argentine Republic are chiefly wool and hides. Under a treaty, Mr. Blaine will secure these raw materials free for the benefit of eastern manufacturers, while the farmers of the west will have their noses held to the grindstone by Major McKinley's tariff schedule. It is a beautiful little scheme, but will it succeed?

A TOBACCO TRICK.

Our estimable fellow-countrymen of the New England States have so long been the beneficiaries of a protective system devised mainly for their special advantage, and have profited so largely by it, that they have come to think it one of their inalienable prerogatives, and that to withhold its special favors from them would be an unendurable injustice; and whenever the tariff is to be tinkered with, any body of them, however small, may be relied upon to be there to plead for their prerogative. The handful of farmers living in the Connecticut River Valley in Massachusetts and Connecticut raise less than 3 per cent. of the tobacco crop of the country—13,500,000 out of 500,000,000 pounds; nevertheless the present tariff on tobacco is so cunningly devised as to single them out for special benefits that do not extend to the other farmers who raise 97 per cent. of the crop. The kind of tobacco they produce is seed leaf, used exclusively for wrappers for cigars—and the trick of protecting it while the bulk of the crop is left unprotected is effected by a high duty on Sumatra tobacco, which is used for the same purpose. This duty is 35 cents a pound, but the Connecticut River tobacco farmers managed several years ago to secure a ruling which increased it to 75 cents—a ruling which one of them boasted in a tobacco farmers' convention put $1,500 a year into his pocket.

But even this is not enough to satisfy them They have represented to the House Committee on Ways and Means that cigar smokers are a class of persons whom it is perfectly safe and legitimate to rob for the benefit of cigar leaf raisers, and the compliant committee have provided in the McKinley bill for a duty of $2.75 a pound on Sumatra tobacco—which will probably double the selling price of Connecticut seed leaf and put another $1,500 a year in the pockets of each of the well favored farmers engaged in raising it.

Raising tobacco in Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, Kentucky and Missouri is a business the government does not think it worth while to take note of, but raising it in the Connecticut valley is a classic and exalted vocation that deserves the government's distinguished consideration.—St. Louis Republic.

THE PAN-AMERICAN FAILURE.

The Pan-American Congress has practically reached a conclusion on the only subject of importance which it is called upon to consider. It has decided that it will be impossible to arrange any commercial treaty with a country which builds around itself such a Chinese wall as our tariff system. That this would be the result has been predicted by The World and ought to have been realized by any one who is at all conversant with the state of South American commerce. Those who have been favored with an occasional bit of information concerning the proceedings of the secret sessions of the Congress have known for some time that Castelar's opinions have been shared by a great many of the delegates.

It is impossible to comprehend how any sensible man could have expected a different result. The chief article of export, for instance, from the Argentine Republic to this country would be raw wool, which our own enlightened rulers shut out by a prohibitory duty, to the destruction of commerce and the injury of our own wool-growers and woolen manufactures. We might get some grocery sugars which would cheapen the poor man's cup of tea or coffee, if we did not so abundantly protect our sugar trust.

It ought to be a clear prima facie case that we cannot have commerce with countries with which our tax-eating industries are afraid to compete, and to the plain mind it seems as though the holding of a Congress to discover this axiom has been a useless expense—another method of the party in power to waste the surplus.—New York World.

PROFITS OF ONE TRUST.

The sugar trust has just got leave from a New York court to pay a quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent. on its $50,000,000 amount of certificates. The actual value of capital in the trust is not over $16,000,000, and the actual profits of the sugar men, therefore, are 20 per cent. a year. Facts have just come to light showing that the "big four" pork packing combine in Chicago made 20 per cent. last year. Millions of American farmers, who raise the hogs that are dressed by the pork trust and eat the sugar that is refined by the sugar trust, and who paid these men a profit of almost one-third on their capital, saved nothing at all from their year's work. How pleased the farmers should be to know that the trust Representatives in Congress are proposing to increase the tariff, raise the cost of living, kill off the foreign sale of our manufactured goods, tax the farmers more than they paid in war times, and also to pass a sham anti-trust bill, of which Senator Morgan on Tuesday truly declared, that "it is merely a brutum fulmen, a shell, a tub to the whale."—National Democrat.

SHOULD HIDES BE UNTAXED?

An Open Letter from a New England Shoe Manufacturer to a Congressman.

James Means is one of the largest shoe manufacturers in the United States. The "James Means" shoes are sold by our Tecumseh dealers and are found in every town of any importance throughout the country. Although a resident of protection New England, he has seen the practical business advantages of free hides, and as a result he has become a zealous tariff reformer. This open letter to one of the Massachusetts Congressmen gives a pretty good picture of the McKinley tariff juggle.

BOSTON, Mass., March 21.

To Hon. Elijah A. Morse, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C:

DEAR SIR: You are reported as opposing the levying of a tax upon imported hides; you have said that the duty, if imposed, would work injury to your constituents in Brockton.

I am not one of your constituents, but I have had my factory in Brockton for a good many years and I have paid taxes there ever since 1878. On the strength of this, acting for myself alone, I write to ask you NOT to oppose the duty on hides.

My reasons for making this request are the following:

1st. Because wool is the keystone of your protection arch, and if we can knock that out your whole flimsy structure tumbles down.

2d. Because "consistency is a jewel," and if you protectionists wish to be consistent you ought to put a duty on hides so long as you keep a duty on wool.

3d. Because the people of this country do not yet fully appreciate the fact that a duty on wool is an oppressive burden upon them all, and this fact will be appreciated when it is taught by a proper object lesson. Such an object lesson will be furnished by a duty on hides; this duty, if imposed, will demoralize the whole shoe and leather industry for about six months and thus expose in its nakedness the mischief working scheme which your party chooses to call "protection for American labor."

4th. Because the thing which you call protection has been and is nothing more nor less than a government pudding. The pudding seekers swarm to Washington, each one trying to see how much he can get. The pudding distributors are vainly trying to satisfy the seekers. The impossibility of harmonizing conflicting interests will make it impossible for you to continue the distribution of favors to those who come to Washington falsely claiming to represent the people.

5th. Because I have been taught by practical business experience to believe that our country cannot attain the highest possible industrial prosperity until every particle of the protection element is eliminated from our tariff schedule, and because I believe that the placing of a duty on hides will quickly bring about this result.

6th. Because I believe in a tariff for revenue only, while you believe in a tariff for politics only, and because I would like to see you and your protectionist friends commit political suicide by an act of supreme folly.

7th. Because it is beautiful to see advocates of a tariff for politics only tying themselves up in a knot, and because the tighter you tie the knot the better it is for the interests of the people.

8th. Because you protectionists have it in your power to make the hide an instrument for the salvation of our industries. If you put a duty upon it, we shall struggle and suffer for a few months, and after that American industries and American labor will be able to entirely throw off the burden of all oppressive tariff taxation, and will enjoy the prosperity which your party now denies them. I remain, dear sir,

Respectfully Yours,
JAMES MEANS.

A Peculiar Case.

Dr. H. C. Edmunds, of Elberton, Ga. writes: "A very peculiar and strange case of blood poison came under my attention a short time ago. A gentleman came here from Athens, Georgia where he had been bitten on the hand by a vicious mule that he was breaking to work. The hand was in a horrible condition, and the inflammation was rapidly extending throught his entire system. Every knuckle on his hand was an ulcer that was deep and slough ing. He stated to me that he had consulted several physicians, and taken their medicines without deriving any benefit. I gave him a course of Specific (S. S. S.) and in a few days he reported to me a marked improvement, and in one week from the time he commenced taking S. S. S. the hand was healed up and the poison entirely eradicated from his system. It is my opinion that he would have lost his life had it not been for the health-giving properties contained in Swift's Specific. He frankly admits himself that S. S. S. did the work."

Spring Medicine

For a good spring medicine we confidently recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. By its use the blood is purified, enriched and vitalized, that tired feeling is entirely overcome and the whole body given strength and vigor. The appetite is restored and sharpened, the digestive organs are toned, the kidneys and liver invigorated. If you have never tried do so this season. It is a thoroughly honest and reliable preparation, purely vegetable, and contains no injurious ingredients whatever. Thousands who have taken it with benefit testify to its peculiar curative power.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"I take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring tonic, and I recommend it to all who have that miserable tired feeling." C. PARMELEE, 349 Bridge Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Makes the Weak Strong

N. B. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, do not be induced to buy any other preparation.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Juniper Berries, and other well known vegetable remedies, by a combination, proportion and process peculiar to itself, and by which the full medicinal value of all the ingredients used is secured. Hence it possesses superior and positive curative power.

Purifies the Blood

"Every spring for years I have made it a practice to take from three to five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, because I know it purifies the blood and thoroughly cleanses the system of all impurities. That languid feeling, called 'spring fever,' will never visit the system that has been properly cared for by this never-failing remedy." W. H. LAWRENCE, Editor Agricultural Editorial, Indianapolis, Ind.

LEAVES BERLIN.

Bismarck Departs Into Retirement.

THE EX-CHANCELLOR ACCORDED A BIG DEMONSTRATION.

Visits the Tomb of the Dead Emperor William—The Mystery of His Resignation—Bieberstein's Appointment a Guarantee of Peace—German Gossip.

BERLIN, March 31.—Prince Bismarck has left Berlin for Friedrichsruhe, his country seat. He visited the imperial mausoleum at Charlottenburg, in which the remains of Emperor William I. are interred, and placed a wreath upon the coffin of his old master. Prior to his departure from Berlin he paid farewell visits to the royal princes. Later in the day thousands of persons gathered in the Wilhelmstrasse and along the route to the railway station, to witness the final scene in the BISMARCK DRAMA.

Wearing the uniform of the cuirassiers, Prince Bismarck left the palace of the chancellor at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and entered an open carriage that stood in waiting. As soon as he appeared he was greeted with stormy enthusiasm. The windows of the houses in the vicinity were crowded with spectators. The entire route was a sea of waving handkerchiefs. The crowd was so dense that the ex-chancellor's horses were compelled to walk the entire distance from the palace to the station. There was a continuous roar of cheering. Following the Prince's carriage came another carriage occupied by Princess Bismarck and other members of the family. A third carriage was filled with members of the American legation. A number of other carriages, filled with friends and admirers of the Prince, closed the procession. When the party arrived at the station a squadron of cuirassiers, with a band, formed a guard of honor. All the ministers, the diplomatic corps and the court and state officials were waiting to bid farewell to the prince, and there was a great mass of people outside the station. Mountains of bouquets for the prince and princess were piled in the waiting rooms, which were gaily decorated in honor of the occasion. Prince Bismarck, in a hearty voice, bid all farewell, Mr. Phelps, the American minister, and Chancellor Von Caprivi being among the last to shake hands with him.

MANY TEARS WERE SHED,

and it was altogether an affecting scene. At 5:40 the train started amid renewed cheering, singing and the strains of the band. In connection with the regard evinced by Prince Bismarck for Phelps, it is worthy of note that on Tuesday last he denied himself to all others and received the minister at a private audience. They spent a large part of the afternoon in a discussion, the object of which has excited curiosity here. Rumor says that the prince made a careful statement of recent events with a view to the future.

The real history of the chancellorship crisis is still wrapped in mystery, which the emperor shows no intention to unveil. The intervention of the Grand Duke of Baden and other influential personages has, to a large extent, stopped the newspaper polemic on the subject. The North German Gazette, Prince Bismarck's organ, announces on behalf of the prince that the addresses and assurances of sympathy received by him have been so numerous that, without official assistance, and in the troublous confusion incident to his departure, it is impossible to reply to them singly. He requests the senders collectively to accept his thanks.

THE APPOINTMENT

of Baron Marschall Bieberstein as foreign secretary of state has not been gazetted, but the appointment is regarded as definite. He was born in 1842. He is a hard worker. The baron was formerly public prosecutor, and has never been in the military service, though he has had a long experience in the Reichstag. He is a good debater, and has represented Baden in the Bundesrath since 1883. He is an affable man and a popular favorite at court. He has a strong tendency toward state socialism.

The Cologne Gazette says that he is intimately acquainted with Prince Bismarck and his policy. His appointment, the paper says, is a GUARANTEE OF CONTINUED PEACE.

He will make no change in the diplomatic service.

It is stated that the emperor accepted Count Herbert Bismarck's resignation with the greatest reluctance, because Prince Bismarck trusted nobody but his son thoroughly in his policy and ideas. This reason in many quarters is held to justify the emperor's action as an anticipation of the fast approaching inevitable retirement or death of Prince Bismarck, and the necessary release of the ministers from the Bismarckian bondage and jealousy of Count Herbert.

Emperor William has received M. Jules Simon. Throughout the conference the Emperor treated the French plenipotentiary with

MARKED DISTINCTION,

This being the great feature of the meeting. The workingmen here and in other towns are organising great Socialist demonstrations for May 1. It is reported that they will be prohibited by the central Executive Committee.

The municipal authorities are organising a grand formal reception to the American riflemen with an evening garden fete and a "Commers" to close the meeting. A trip will be taken on the Rhine, to Rudersheim and Bingen, where a two days' rifle meeting will be held.

WHY NOT!

At the last State concert Mrs. Phelps, wife of the American minister, was seated among the wives of the ambassadors. The Prince of Wales asked Sir Edward Malet, the British ambassador, to present him during an interval in the performance. They conversed together until the performance was resumed. This is significant, as showing the desire of the government to compensate the American minister for his inferiority in rank, which precludes his admittance to the more private festivities of the court to which ambassadors are invited.

A grand torchlight procession in honor of Prince Bismarck is being arranged to take place in Hamburg tonight.

Two Fatally Hurt and Four Scalded.

WHEELING, W. VA., March 31.—In the afternoon the boilers in Spears large axle works in this city exploded with terrible force, totally wrecking the building and damaging adjoining property. Anthony Riley and Joseph Armbruster were fatally injured. Four other men were seriously scalded but will recover.

THEIR LAST ARGUMENT.

SOME MORALS DRAWN FROM THE ENGLISH MINERS' STRIKE.

Facts Which Show That Duties on Iron Are No Longer Needed—Prices in That Country Are Higher Than Here—The Mine Owners Get the Profits.

The strikes among British coal miners, which have just begun, at once offer valuable testimony to the prosperity of the foreign iron and coal industries under free trade, as compared with the stagnation in this country that has been caused by the restrictive tariff, and furnish the New England manufacturers who are pleading for a little relief from present duties with a valuable argument, by demonstrating that no such reaction in prices abroad is to be found as should lead the Pennsylvania monopolists to be at all timorous about granting the very slight sop asked for. Small as this is, however, being only a reduction on crude iron that would be utterly inadequate to making an effective competition between foreign iron and the product of domestic mines, it is well understood that the ways and means committee will refuse to relax any of the present duties, although these have become entirely prohibitive as the result of important changes in the character of the business.

During the past year the iron market has assumed a most unprecedented shape, and one which superficially bears out a part of the protectionist contention; but at the same time it does away with all need of further protection, even from a protectionist standpoint. Our labor being so much cheaper than foreign labor, by reason of superior efficiency, we have always been able to compete with foreign manufacturers on even terms, despite dearer material, in highly finished forms of iron and steel.

For some years back our imports of these were comparatively small, but up to a very recent period the domestic price of pig iron was maintained to just a little less than it would cost to import foreign pig with duty added, and the manufacturing industries which furnish the consumption of pig iron were compelled to pay about $7 a ton—the amount of duty—more than they would have had to do but for the tariff, their own trade and consequently their power of consumption being thereby lessened to at least a proportional degree.

Makers of pig iron on their part, although enabled by the tariff to charge high prices for their product, the demand for which was necessarily smaller on that account, were forced to pay correspondingly high prices for their material. The large percentage of waste mineral carried in iron ore as a rule forbids its being transported long distances, except when—as in the case of the rich Lake Superior or Lake Champlain ores—it is nearly pure metal; and consequently each district of iron production is to a great extent dependent upon local supplies solely. Furnaces, being human handiwork, are susceptible of indefinite multiplication and in many sections have been erected injudiciously and out of proportion to the neighboring ore supplies, which are the product of nature, and, therefore, an absolutely limited monopoly.

Whenever furnaces were many in proportion to the ore within reach, as throughout the east was the case, the cost of the latter was enhanced to the full extent of the tariff on pig iron, the latter operating, not as an encouragement to manufacturers, but as a bounty to the ownership of mines. When furnaces were comparatively few, as is even yet the case in the south, the advantage in the division of tariff spoils lay with the furnacemen. A knowledge of this fact caused an eager scramble to utilize the mineral wealth of the south almost as soon as the reconstruction period was fairly past and the fears of further political troubles there were removed; and the first comers, hampered as they were with the expensive labor that low daily wages produced, yet amassed wealth nearly as fast as had those who had skimmed the cream of eastern iron deposits before these had acquired an excessive value through the imposition of a protective tariff. But there was no market whatever for raw iron in the south, and the new supplies, sent northward and eastward, found only customers whose operations were so shackled by tariff exactions that they had not the ability to absorb an extra quantity of iron except at lower figures.

Prices therefore steadily fell, not as a result of an improvement in processes stimulated by a beneficent system of protection, but simply because the activities of the American people had been so limited and constrained through tariff laws, the masses had been robbed of so large a part of their earnings, that they had not the money to pay, or rather the goods to exchange, for more iron, at the old prices. Latterly, therefore, we have seen American iron prices no higher than foreign ones, even with a total elimination of either duties or freights from the comparison.

It is true that foreign prices are considerably higher now than they were two years ago, as a result of the great expansion of trade which has been enjoyed by those countries whose industries were not repressed by governmental interference. Making due allowance for this, it has yet been conclusively demonstrated by the steady increasing of new enterprises at the low average values of the past three years, that the real cost to make iron is no greater in this country than anywhere else; that when artificially high prices prevailed it was not the manufacturers who were benefited at the expense of the rest of the nation, but only the mine owners, whose power of levying toll upon the whole people has alone been restricted by the recent decline; and, further, that if we were to wipe out all tariff on iron, and thus abolish even the slight existing margin that still keeps us out of the world's market, the iron industry proper, instead of being destroyed, would gain by complete freedom of action just as it has by the partial freedom which came through the opening up of southern ore deposits, and that the monopoly interest alone, of all these concerned, could possibly suffer.

TACKLING THE LOBSTER.

A Tariff Drag Net with Exceedingly Small Meshes.

Daniel Webster once told his friends, after returning from a visit to Europe, that the sublimest thing he had heard while abroad was spoken by Sir Robert Peel. The great English statesman was making his speech in parliament accompanying the annual budget for raising revenues. A dry enough theme, certainly; and perhaps no one but Webster saw the sublimity of the sentence referred to.

Sir Robert was giving in detail the various sources from which money was to be raised. He had enumerated all the more important articles of taxation, and had come to speak of the comparatively insignificant miscellaneous articles usually grouped together in our tariff schedules as "sundries." Finally drawing himself up, he said:

"And now we come to the onion seed."

It struck Webster as really sublime that the mind of a man like Peel, who was then directing the affairs of the greatest empire on earth, should be so comprehensive and show such a mastery of details as not to overlook the "onion seed."

And now our Mr. McKinley seems to be in a fair way to rise to the same sort of sublimity. He is searching about for all possible subjects for protection, whether on the earth or under the earth or in the waters which girdle the earth. He has cast his great tariff net, with meshes exceeding fine, into the seas, and has brought up our old friend who meets us at church festivals and gives us dyspeptic nights as a reward for our devotion to him. Mr. McKinley has fished up the lobster, and finds, to his unspeakable horror, that this popular crustacean does not bear the brand of protection.

"Go to," says Mr. McKinley, "then we will protect him."

But the lobster packers of Maine do not relish this at all. They want the cheap lobster of Canadian waters to pack for the American markets.

Lobsters are very cheap up in Nova Scotia. In Halifax they tell of an Englishman who came there some time ago and was determined to eat enough lobster "for once." So he handed the waiter a dollar and a half and told him to lay it out in lobsters for him.

"What! all this?"

"Yes; all that."

The waiter took the Englishman at his word, went out into the market and soon rolled in two barrels of lobsters before the astonished traveler.

Now the packers of Maine object, and so they have sent a committee down to Washington to fight the "protection" which Mr. McKinley proposes to give them. But the packers, although they did not ask for "protection," are to have it forced upon them. They found things at Washington even worse than they had supposed. Not only is the lobster to be protected, but the tin cans are also to be provided for by bills now in the hands of the committee. These duties will cause a considerable increase in the cost of lobster, and the consumption will be thereby limited. The packers have already sold for future delivery at fixed prices, and if these duties should be imposed they would be compelled to fill their contracts at a loss.

The packers are not likely to be allowed what Robert Burns calls "the glorious privilege of being independent." Their representatives at Washington found that the tariff tinkerers are bent on protecting everybody and everything, whether protection is wanted or not by those concerned. Higher protection and greater appropriations are now the watchwords at Washington, and the appeals of merchants for lower taxes meet with little consideration.

As a last resort, from which they themselves hope very little will come, the packers and dealers are now circulating a petition for signatures urging that the lobster be let alone.

The high carnival of protection at Washington meanwhile goes forward in educating the people for the approaching elections. The disgust of decent citizens cannot for a much longer time spare this mad revel of the gleeful protectionists.

To Make Less Carpets.

The manufacturers of carpets in New England are talking of stopping one-fourth of their looms for nine months. There is a glut in the market which the manufacturers hope to relieve. Not having access to foreign markets by reason of the high duties on wool, the manufacturers are compelled to confine themselves to the "home market," which some wiseacres tell them is the only market that they need to concern themselves about, and which, they say, is amply sufficient for our manufacturing capacity. So greatly are the manufacturers of carpets hampered by these wool duties and hindered from competing in foreign markets that their exportations of carpets last year amounted to only $5,044, which was a falling off of $77 from the previous year. These are certainly not imposing figures.

Facts of this kind, however, are not enough to convince Mr. McKinley's committee to lower the duties on wool. It is now proposed to increase the duties on carpet wool three cents a pound on grades above twelve cents a pound, and to the grades below twelve cents one cent a pound is to be added. Carpet wools costing twelve cents or less pay now two and one-half cents a pound duty, which Mr. McKinley proposes to make three and one-half cents. Those above the twelve cent limit pay five cents, and Mr. McKinley puts this up to eight cents.

This will of course confine the carpet manufacturers to the home market more completely than ever—if this can be said in a case where our exportations are now practically nothing. If these New England establishments reduce their capacity by one-fourth, that will mean a reduction of their force of operatives by about the same figure. While out of employment these workingmen will be able to prepare themselves for the fall elections by indulging in wholesome reflections on the beauties of protection and home market theories.

Epoch

The transition from long, lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is greatfully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of the Great Alterative and Tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of Kidneys, Liver or Stomach, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at

IMPROVING THE HIGHWAYS.

Paper Read at the Farmers Institute in January by Marshall Reed of Cambridge.

Would it be to the best interest of our highways, to change the present system to a money tax, and have the work of each township under one management?

From the report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for 1888, we glean the following relative to the public highways.

"A wise and well regulated system of public roads and highways throughout the United States is daily becoming a greater necessity for the material development of the resources of this country, and merits the earnest attention of Congress. The common roads of the country are the veins and arteries through which flow the agricultural productions, and the commercial supplies, which are the life blood of the nation, to those great ducts of travel and transportation, the railroads of our country." He further says:

"While our railroad system has become the most perfect in the world, the common roads of the United States are inferior to those of any other civilized country in the world."

While the American may proudly boast of our perfect railway system, of our free school system, of the general industries of our country, etc., this latter phrase relative to our common roads, is a stigma that shades the lustre of our reputation in the line of providing convenience and comfort for the migrating public.

That this may be an undeniable truth adds to our chagrin, yet whoever would attempt to controvert the statement. would be emptied of his delusion before he had completed a round trip between Onsted and Adrian. Probably our roads were never in a sadder plight than for a few past weeks, save in very early days.

In seeking for a remedy, and what means to adopt for improvement, it may be well to first consider the cause of the present condition, and where rests the responsibility. While the soil has much to do with the condition of the roads, much also depends upon the fitness and energy of such as have charge of the work of repairing the same.

The manner of electing overseers of highways, long ago established, and still prevails, is well known to all voters at township meetings, which should be subjected to rigid reform. The announcement for the election of this grade of officials hurries together a hilarious crowd who represent the several districts, and feeling assured that the first nomination is equivalent to an election, names his man with stupendous alacrity at the call of the number of the district he represents, often times without regard to fitness or qualification, and the consequence of such indiscretion is, many times, a laggard disposition to interest themselves in the fulfilment of duty. Though the statute prescribes the time when such labor shall be performed, too many consult their own convenience, and the work is done at a season when it avails little or no worth. Again the statute provides that acceptance to office shall be compulsory upon the officer elect before assuming the duties appertaining to the office, yet I am cognizant of the fact, that in a certain township of this county, of forty-two overseers of highways elected last spring, the number that complied with the statute requirement is enumerated by a unit. Under such a state of things who is responsible for defective roads? and how repair the wrong? Let each district solve the problem by their own reasoning.

Let us now consider what is accomplished in the districts where an effort is made to accede to the statute limitations in canceling the highway tax. Eight hours constitutes a days work with either scraper, plow, wagon, team or man. These rank in value, we will say, from five dollars to an indefinite sum, man of course taking the superlative, and to price him while engaged in the service of Uncle Sam, would be humiliating to the working class. With these implements to employ in the work, and counting eight hours to every one thousand dollars of the assessed valuation, the probable amount of work performed may easily be computed.

Let the cry of 'Civil Service Reform' resound in every niche of our union, let it embrace every department of the public welfare, reaching down even to our system of improving the highways and may the touch of its sinewy fingers incite us to increased energies in the performance of this important work. May the time be near when we as a people, will take more pride in our roads, for next to churches and schools, a good road is a mark of enterprise that the stranger who explores our country never fails to note.

The change sought in the subject head of this paper, i.e. "labor performed under one management and paid by direct tax, has been agitated for considerable time, and I am satisfied, growing in popular favor, and I believe if the method were once adopted, we need have no fears of reversion to the abandoned mode. Many remember the strong opposing element to the change to the present free school system, and now, after a quarter of a century, very few could be induced to return to the rate bill plan for raising school funds.

Before advocating a radical change, we should be able to present an acceptable substitute. While the present system may seem extremely faulty to one, another may claim for it absolute perfection, and the pros and cons that may arise, may in turn seem reasonable, yet I believe the majority will admit, that more work would be accomplished under one manager, with the money at one dollar a day for the assessed tax, than is rendered under the present system, and it would be more uniform in character. I believe too, that a man, team and wagon could be employed ten hours for the sum now allowed for eight hours work, thereby giving six hours each day in favor of the proposed method. A more thorough and more uniform system would be followed, and the labor done where most needed.

Cambridge has eight hundred and thirty days spread upon its road warrants. Some districts need but little work to keep in repair, while in other localities, if the tax were doubled, or even thribbled, it would fail to do justice. In such portions of a township, where a road is much used, and proper material can be had within reasonable reach, it would be well to consider permanence and durability in the construction, though it takes from the general fund, and the remote portion of the township may be slightly benefitted.

Much has been written of the McAdam and Telford roads, but I have yet failed to find the estimated cost of construction. The principal material is stones, and I also fail to find an account of the cost of breaking to suitable size. In some localities, unlimited quantities of this material can be had for the hauling, but the expense of pulverizing may forbid their practical use. We do not expect by the proposed reform to build an Appian Way, nor a Roman structure which history tells us has withstood the traffic of two thousand years without material injury, yet we sadly see the need of better roads, and if the proposed system has found favor in other countries, why not adopt the measure and carefully watch the result.

It is only the part of wisdom after the admission is made, as it generally is, that negro suffrage has not been a success, to at least avoid exploded remedies. If Grant's soldiers could not hold the Republican Legislatures in their places, Harrison's soldiers cannot. The art of popular self-government has not changed. The fabric of our institutions falls apart when the electors are illiterate. When an artist puts ivory black into Chinese white he does not lose his temper because the mixture is not still a pure white. What can be said of those Republicans who, having added a million ignorant votes to the vote of the South, denounce the Democrats because the quality of the electorate has deteriorated? All things considered, it is a wonder that the Southern situation is as good as it is.—Springfield Republican.

She Tells Her Friends.

GENTLEMEN :— The Zoa-Phora which you sent me some time ago, greatly benefitted me, so much so that I have been visiting some who I know need it, and telling them about it. I used to live in Michigan until 5 years ago, and I know the reputation of Zoa-Phora there. That is how I came to send so far for it. I now know its worth by my own experience. I live near the Normal School here and room a great many lady sudents. I learn of a great many who need just such a friend as Zoa-Phora. I never lose an opportunity to recommend it to them, because you see I believe it will do all that you claim for it.

Yours respectfully.

THE STATE UNIVERSITY.

The University calendar, which has lately been issued, is the largest calendar ever issued. This is in keeping with the fact that the University is now the largest college in America. There are 2,153 names of students in the calendar. The literary department contains 1,007 students; the law department, 583. the medical, 3,72; the school of pharmacy, 83, the homeopathic college, 73, the dental college, 103. Seventeen names are counted twice in this summary, which brings down the number of names actually in the University to 2,153. Of this number Michigan sends 1,019, or almost one-half. Forty-three states and territories are represented, establishing the University's right to call itself a representative American institution. Fifteen foreign countries and provinces send students here. Japan sends 21 students; England, 5; Germany, Hungary, Italy, Russia, Mexico, Manitoba, and Nova Scotia send one each. The Hawaiian Islands, New Zealand, New Brunswick, Porto Rico, and Quebec send two each. Ontario sends 45. Illinois comes next to Michigan in the number of students, sending 223. Ohio comes third with 175 students, and Indiana fourth with 103. New York sends 84. Utah even is represented by 18, and the new state of Washington shows its appreciation of higher education by sending 10. The list of members of the faculties contains 116 names.—Ann Arbor Argus.

HISTORY OF THE ANGELUS.

Jean Francois Millett, the painter of "The Angelus," finished the marvellous work at Barbizon, France, in 1859, and being in want at the time, sold it for 1.800 francs. It was afterwards resold for 38.000 francs and later sold at auction for 160.000 francs, and was finally, in July, 1889, purchased at auction in Paris by the American Art Association for 553.000 francs ($110.600) and brought to New York, where it was placed on exhibition and was visited by 74.000 people paying $37.000.00 for the privilege of looking at it.

The painting is 21 1-2x25 1-2 chs in size. Art is not measured by inches. Here is a brief description of the picture:

It represents a young man and a maiden pausing from their work in the field to listen to the tolling of the "Angelus," themselves joining in evening prayer. The sun has already sunk below the horizon. The sky is still luminous with the warm golden light which gives a peculiar glowing light to the surrounding fields. The young couple have been busy harvesting the potato crop. They stand quietly in the foreground, their figures clearly cut against the vivid background. Their attitudes express the devout religious sentiments of rustic piety. Both send in silence a feeling prayer to their Maker, while the bells are ringing the "Angelus" [the evening prayer] in the belfry of the quaint little village church which is seen far away on the horizon, clearly defined against the golden sky.

BURGLARY AT HUDSON.

D. D. Nichols, who resides in the brick house opposite the school building on Washington street, was unable to find his trousers, Tuesday morning He had left them in the room where he slept. An examination of the house revealed the fact that the pantry window in the rear of the residence had been opened. The catch was broken and it could be pushed up without difficulty. Mr. Nichol's daughter, who was sleeping up stairs, said she thought she heard some one at the window about one o'clock. Then with his mind's eye Mr. Nichols could see a burglar slipping from the sleeping room and through the window with a pair of pantaloons in his grasp. With the pantaloons went a gold watch, $12 in cash, a note for $200 upon which $25 was still due, and other valuable papers and all his keys. He was out at least $75, and there is no estimating the trouble the loss of the keys and the papers will cause him—Hudson Gazette.

TARIFF REFORM CLUB.

A meeting for the purpose of organizing a Tariff Reform association was held at Holloway, Tuesday evening of last week. The night was black and free tradewinds howled, nevertheless about 50 persons were present and an association was organized and officers chosen, half being Republican and half Democratic. They are as follows:

President. W. Chatfield; Vice Pres., James McIntire; Sec'y, George Kelley; Treas., A. D. Macham; Reporter, John Haney.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday evening. The question for discussion will be: "Resolved that the restrictions placed upon commerce by the United States government are n the main detrimental to the interest of the farmer.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

Mrs. David Berger started yesterday for Elgin, Ill., for a two-weeks visit with her children, all of whom, six in number, are now living in that city.

Mrs. Libbie B. Bentley, of Eaton Rapids, has been attending the R. C. Convention at Adrian this week. She will be the guest for a few days of Mrs. Horatio Keyser, where she will be glad to meet her old Tecumseh friends.

DeWitt Martin, of Macon, has become a Benedict. Although we have no acquaintance with the bride we can congratulate her upon her good luck, and we do not know a bachelor who better deserves a good wife. Here's health and happiness to both.

We made a short call yesterday at Zimmerman's tool factory and found him up to his ears in business. He has a standing order from Buhl & Sons the big hardware firm of Detroit to take all the handles he can make and he intends to make the machinery hustle this summer.

John VanGelson leaves Tecumseh this week with his family, and will take up his residence on a farm near St. Johns. He has been for several years connected with the firm of Temple, McClure & Co., and has proven a valuable member of the firm. We regret exceedingly to have the family leave Tecumseh.

M. E. Conklin is in the field already with a full line of the Walter A. Wood harvesting machinery, and he intends to make it hot for all competitors this season. We shall have more to say on this subject as the season advances. There are improvements every season on harvesting machinery and farmers should keep themselves posted thereon.

Mr. J. R. Malone of Lansing gave a temperance lecture at Cheever's hall last evening. He opened by repeating the Lord's Prayer and then read the parable of the good Samaritan. Taking for his text the words "I am my brother's keeper," he gave a red-hot prohibition sermon and a very eloquent talk. He deserved a larger audience.

With the purchase of the Charlevoix Journal by Hon. Chas. S. Hampton, the Democrats of that county are pleased, as it gives them a strong county organ. Mr. Hampton proposes to make it eight pages in size and identical in style and make-up with his other paper, the Petoskey Independent Democrat. This makes four papers to come under Mr. Hampton's control, which is doing fairly well for a violent anti-monopolist.—Evening News.

MARRIED.

KERR—LOWRY.—On Thursday, March 20, 1890, by Rev. Wm. H. Babbitt, at the residence of Mr. David Young, Tecumseh, Mr. Robert Kerr to Miss Eliza Lowry, both of Tecumseh.

CAREY — FULLER.— At Tecumseh, Mich., on Thursday, March 27, 1890, by Rev. Wm. H. Babbitt, Mr. John G. Carey to Miss Hattie E. Fuller, both of Macon, Mich.

MARTIN—BRADLEY.—On March 20, 1890, by Rev. E. W. Borden, John DeWitt Martin and Miss Ida May Bradley, both of Macon.

DIED.—At Detroit, March 26, 1890, Robert William, infant son of L. M. and Kate D. Ide, aged 11 months. The remains were brought to Tecumseh for final burial, and the interment took place on Friday, the 28th.

DIED.—In Detroit, March 29, 1890, at their residence, 464 Fourth-ave., Helen Mildred, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Slayton. The interment took place at Tecumseh on Monday, March 31st.

DIED—On Sunday, March 30th, Gertrude Lurette, twin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. M. P. Brown, aged 2 years and 12 days. She was never very rugged and whooping cough, combined with teething, proved too much for her vitality. The funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon by Rev. W. H. Babbitt, assisted by Mary C. Wood.

A rosebud has been gathered
To grace the bright boquet,
That on our Saviour's loving heart
His trusting followers lay.

It blossomed but a little while
In this fair world of ours,
Then angel hands transplanted it
To bloom in fairer bowers.

Card of Thanks.

To our many kind friends we return our heartfelt thanks for their loving acts of kindness and words of sympathy during the past few days. You have helped us to carry our burden and we thank you, one and all.

Louis Brown, the city baker, has been keeping bachelor's hall for about two weeks. His wife and daughter are visiting at Spring Hill Ohio.

What has Gen. Alger done that the Adrian Times should libel him by the awful portrait they printed last Tuesday, purporting to be the General's picture?

The Gospel meetings at the Friends Church last week were liberally attended through the week and the church was crowded at the Sabbath services.

The Presbyterian Sunday School will give an Easter Concert next Sabbath evening. A fine program has been prepared, and a cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend.

A large number of our citizens attended the Higgins concert at Clinton last Monday evening, and enjoyed a rare musical treat. What a shame that Tecumseh cannot support such a lecture course!

B. C. Knapp has returned from his northern trip. He went as far north as Cheery, Crawford Co., made a purchase of a one half section of pine; thinks sometime in the future he will go up there and do some lumbering.

The Tecumseh Coal and Mfg Co., took one order last Tuesday from a Pittsburg man for sash and doors to the amount of $1090. Orders are multiplying and their extensive sheds will soon all be used for glazing purposes.

R. A. Heesen has invented a substitute for shellac to be used as a furniture finish. It has been thoroughly tested and found to be a superior article. He is making arrangements to manufacture it on an extensive scale for the trade.

The revival services at the Friends' church of this place are still in progress, and will continue at least all this week and over Sunday, April 6th. All are invited to attend.

Have you visited Mrs. Freeman's new millinery rooms? If not, just step in and see how neat and tidy they are. They are ever so much nicer than her old rooms.

A. W. Slayton, of Detroit, was in town Monday. He came on a sad errand this time,—to bring the remains of his infant daughter for burial in the old home cemetery.

The engine room and appurtenances of the Table Co. are about completed. The work has been done under the personal supervision of Hudson Conkling, which is enough said on that point.

The new High School paper, The Breeze, is receiving a good many compliments since its publication last week, and it richly merits all of them. The board of editors are to be congratulated on the marked success of their maiden effort.

Tariff and taxation are public questions in which every voter is interested. We purpose discussing these questions pretty freely during the next few months, and shall devote a reasonable amount of space each week to their consideration. Our first installment of single tax matter appears upon an inside page this week.

An exchange says very truly: "The local paper may cost a few cents more at the close of the year than the city papers, but it is the local paper that advertises your business, your schools and your churches. It is your local paper that mentions the thousand and one items during the fifty-two weeks in which you are interested and that you don't find in the city papers.

The Forum for April is a very strong number. Among the articles,—all of which are meritorious,—are two that will attract wide attention, "The Degradation of Our Politics," by ex-President Barnard of Columbia College, and "Why the Farmer is Not Prosperous," by C. Wood Davis. The latter article gives some valuable statistics in regard to the present agricultural depression.

The Century for April is remarkable for the variety of its contents. Two of Mr. Cole's charming artistic engravings accompany a paper on Giovanni Bellini, by Mr. W. J. Stillman, in the series on Italian Old Masters. One of these engravings is printed as a frontispiece, and the conductors of the magazine claim that American wood-engraving has never before been put to such important use as in this series.

The masquerade party given on Thursday evening of last week by Prof. Skinner proved to be a very pleasant social affair. The attendance was good, the music was good, the costumes were good, and it was a good thing all the way through. The two prizes for gentlemen went to Jas. Clark, of Tecumseh, and John Steger, of Clinton. The lady's prizes were awarded to Mrs. Mertie Cummins, of Tecumseh, and Miss Fuller, of Clinton.

Fred Landgraf, of Adrian, was in town last Monday.

The next regular meeting of the Womans Relief Corps occurs April 7th, at 7:30 P. M. Mrs. Emma Stark Hampton, Past National President will be present. A full attendance is desired.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Ide of Detroit were in town a couple of days last week. They brought the remains of their little son for burial in our beautiful evergreen cemetery. Their Tecumseh friends will deeply sympathize with them in their affliction.

One American author at least is not without honor in other countries than his own. The London Spectator recently declared "There are passages in A Hazard of New Fortunes, which, unless we are very much mistaken, entitle Mr. Howells to be ranked among men of genius."

Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Brown will receive the profound sympathy of all who know them in the loss of their twin daughter. The twins were bright beautiful children. It is the first time that the dread angel has invaded their little family circle. It seems hard sometimes to reconcile ourselves to such a dispensation but the silver lining of this affliction is the thought that little Lurette rests in her Savior's arms, safe from this world's toil and trouble.

A word from Mr. Gladstone, on any subject that is of interest to him, is sure of a welcome from Americans generally. But when Mr. Gladstone writes concerning the Book of books, an added interest attaches to his words in the minds of all. The first of a series of articles on the Bible, from his pen, appears in the last number of the Sunday School Times. Other articles in the series are to be given at intervals of a month. These articles are, by special arrangement with their writer, to appear on the same day in The Sunday School Times in this country, and in Good Words in London.

At the Prohibition caucus held last Monday, the following town ticket was placed in nomination:

THE RUINS.

Pen Picture of the Louisville Calamity.

THE DAMAGED DISTRICT DESCRIBED BY STREETS.

The Outlook is Bright, the People Are Cheerful, and Work of Removing the Debris Preparatory to Rebuilding Already Begun—The Loss of Life and Property.

LOUISVILLE, KY., March 31.—The telegraph company has been badly crippled. Yesterday morning a wire was in working order to Indianapolis, and during the afternoon four more wires were working to Indianapolis. All the Nashville and Memphis wires are in working order, and the eastern business is being sent via Nashville and the sea coast lines. There is no wire to Cincinnati. Manager Smith has sent out a special train over the Short Line to restore the wires between Louisville and Cincinnati. There are numerous working gangs employed in the city erecting wires and poles. All Indianapolis and northern business is being sent from the Fourteenth street station and from Jeffersonville. There was one Cincinnati wire working from Jeffersonville. Today the Western Union will be ready to take all business that may be offered. Communication from most all of the interior Kentucky towns is cut off.

The latest estimate of the dead made, places the figures at between 120 and 150. One hundred bodies have been recovered up to the present hour, and there are but few persons not accounted for. The damage to property approximates $3,000,000 in Louisville alone. In Jeffersonville it is about $750,000. Many of the wrecked houses are a menace to life and to property that escaped the fury of the storm, and they have been ordered torn down. Gangs of men, under direction of city officers, are clearing away the debris from the streets. The outlook is bright and cheerful, and efforts are being made to have the damage assumed by the community, without the aid of outside help.

CENTER OF FURY.

Perhaps the most destructive work done by the tornado was on Market street. For three squares north of Ninth street nearly every business and dwelling house was devastated. Houses were hurled into the street, and the debris in many places was piled thirty feet high. The picture of sorrow and desolation to be witnessed on Market street yesterday, where houseless women and children were wandering about viewing the places from where they so narrowly escaped the night previous, baffles description. Every house from Ninth to Eleventh street was almost totally demolished. West and east of these streets the tornado did frightful damage, but the destruction of property was hardly so great. Not till daylight dawned upon Main street could the extent of the devastation be fully comprehended. The cyclone struck the city's main thoroughfare at Eleventh street and veered to the north at Seventh. Not a half dozen houses were left intact throughout the entire extent of the four squares. The tobacco warehouses suffered terribly, and the big wholesale houses fared little better. Main street is still thronged with people contemplating the ruins. Little work is being done except at the tobacco warehouses, where as many men as could be secured are employed in removing the thousands of hogsheads of tobacco to places of shelter. Should a heavy fall of rain occur in a day or two the loss of property on Main street will be doubled. Next to Market and Main streets, Jefferson street probably suffered most. From Ninth to Twelfth street the destruction was complete. The sidewalks and streets were a network of wires, telegraph poles, trees and remnants of houses. In many places the street was totally blocked by the roofings torn from the stores, some of which had been carried by the hurricane two squares, or more. Wagons were unable to reach many of the homes of those who were anxious to move the remainder of their furniture. All yesterday men were busy cleaning the streets and they were to all transportation, and placards were posted on many of the houses and trees offering $3, $4 and $5 for laborers.

The side streets leading into Jefferson, Market and Main were thronged with sight-seers from the time the newspapers appeared on the streets until late at night. Between Tenth and Eleventh streets, the destruction to property was small in comparison with the total destruction on the square below.

The track of the tornado across Walnut street was confined principally to the squares between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets, and within this limit only the houses on the north side of the street were greatly damaged, with the exception of the colored Odd Fellows hall at Thirteenth and Walnut, which is a complete wreck.

The casualties on Walnut street were few. The only death ascertainable so far was that of a colored boy, Moddy Davis, who was attempting to cross the street at Thirteenth and Walnut in the midst of the fury of the storm. A large pointed rafter, which had been torn from the roof of a neighboring building, pierced him just below the right shoulder, and, passing clear through his body, came out just above the right hip, killing him instantly. He was picked up by trembling hands and borne to his home on Magazine street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth. Marvelous to relate, there was not a man, woman or child hurt seriously enough to mention in the track of the tornado extending from Thirteenth to Seventeenth on Chestnut.

The devastation on Chestnut street begins half way between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets and extends to the middle of the block bounded on the east and west by Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets. On the north side of the street, not more than six buildings in the three blocks escaped, and most of them were so irretrievably damaged that they will have to be razed to the ground, as they can not be repaired.

The Loss Beyond Computation.

LOUISVILLE, March 31.—A special to the Times from Hopkinsville, Ky., says: Reports of a most distressing nature continue to be received from the section of this and adjoining counties that were swept by the cyclone. In some places entire farms, houses, barns and fences were laid waste. The loss in property is beyond computation. The town of Caledonia was entirely destroyed. A freight train was wrecked by a tree being blown across the engine, and Peter Burns, the engineer, and William Howell, a brakeman, were both killed.

A great deal of valuable stock was killed in every section of this county. There are also reports of a number of persons being injured by falling trees and houses.

A special from Gallatin, Tenn., says: The news of the terrible storm of Thursday night is slow coming in, and it will be tomorrow before a full list of the dead and injured can be had. It is positively known that every house between Bledsoe and Eulia in the path of the storm, is blown away, and hundreds of people are injured and without food, shelter or treatment. It is reported that the whole town of Dixon Springs, in Smith county, thirty five miles distant, was swept out of existence by the angry cyclone.

In the path of the storm are to be found horses and cattle lying upon the ground in great numbers, killed by falling trees and missiles of flying timber. The Chesapeake and Nashville road suffers more from loss of property than could hardly be imagined. In two places about six hundred feet of high trestle-work was destroyed, and two three hundred ton iron bridges were blown from their pillars. They were broken and twisted into thousands of pieces and are a total loss. A mile of track was torn up by the cyclone. The loss of stock and other property in this district is estimated at two million dollars.

A special to the Post from Marion, Ky., says that a large portion of that town was destroyed and 18 lives lost. A family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Montague and four children and the mother of Mrs. Montague, living in the country eight miles from Marion, were crushed to death by the falling of their dwelling.

At Enterprise, Ind., the M. E. church and four dwellings were demolished, but no lives are reported lost.

A dwelling at the mouth of Race creek and two farm houses near Spottsville, Ind., were destroyed.

A family boat, moored in a field about five miles above the mouth of Green river, was dashed to pieces against a tree, and a man named Frazier and his wife and sister were drowned.

Many Buildings Ruined.

LOUISVILLE, KY., March 31.—A reporter who made a tour of the wrecked district, kept a hasty account of the wrecked buildings. He estimates that two hundred must be rebuilt. Many that look only partially damaged on the outside show serious injury side, as if the hand of the storm had reach in and broken joists and beams. The Third Presbyterian church is found to be more seriously damaged than at first supposed, and is practically a wreck.

Complete List of the Killed.

LOUISVILLE, KY., March 31.—The following is a list of the killed up to Saturday night: Rev. S. E. Barnwell, recter of St. John's church; Dudley Barnwell, Sister Mary Pius, Father Disney's church; Mrs. Mary McComb, Ben Schildt, William Deemer, Robert Sullivan, John Emerick, Professor Andrew Steubling, William Stephan, Gustave Kutzleb, jr., Charles Schaeffer; the Gaddy family (colored), father, son and wife; Henry Lengs, James M. Stephens, John Reihl, J. Fleischer, —— Williams, Clarence Loeser, Geneva and Louis Simms; James Smith, Mrs. Smith, his wife and three children; Mozes Lazarus, Philip G. Kemm, John Horan, Minnie Stands, George Schmitt, Theodore Engelmeier, Jacob Baumer, Richard Deuker, Emma Hostetter, James Fitzgerald, William Geissett, John Kelsall, Henry King, William Holoy, Mrs. Mobley, Peter Fuller, John Heeb, William Clifford, Walter Davis, Lulu Brown, Elmer Barnes, Wm. Sterns, H. Moore, Edward A. Horan, William Foster, A. R. McKee, Mercer county, Ky.; James McCulline, Maggie McClure, Mary Ryan, Bridget Crow, Maggie Campbell, Mary McGinter, J. D. Hathaway (Chicago), John Paul, —— Hill, John Raidy, William Sabrie, Bud Lusher, Walter Davis, infant of Mrs. Austin, Mrs. Joseph Niles, Mrs. Mary Hasson, Miss Annie Niles, Mrs. Belle Lelloff, Mrs. Patterson, Tom Puff, Thad. Mason, Theo. Angermeir, Mrs. E. Hoffstetter, Miss Castleman, Moody Davis, J. B. Schildt, Park Cornell, Pat Raidy, Charles Jenks, Mrs. McLaughlin, Mr. Johnson, Frank Paine, August Fleisher, two unknown colored women, unknown negro, Christ Miller, Carrie Baker, Professor Gustave Kutzleb sr., John Remont, Mrs. Bishop, Rodl Lyps, —— Clairborn, Mrs. Nannie B. Rock, Mrs. Hom, Moses Abraham.

Through the Country.

CINCINNATI, O., March 31.—Trainmen arriving on the southern roads say that central Tennessee suffered severely from Thursday's storm. Emory river seemed to leap out of its banks and did vast damage to farm property for miles. Oakdale forests look as if a giant scyth had mowed the trees down. The loss on timber lands will be very great, and there are many rumors of death among the woodmen. From Lexington south to the Tennesse line there are evidences of a storm on all sides. Trainmen say they hear that fifty lives were lost between High Bridge, Ky., and Oakdale, Tenn., on the territory contigous to the railroad.

The Storm in Virginia.

DANVILLE, VA., March 31.—In Patrick county seven small houses were blown down. At Stella, Rev. O. S. Minter was teaching a class in the public school building when a large tree was blown across the house and crashed through the roof. Mr. Minter's arm was broken but others fortunately escaped injury. A conductor on the Danville and New River road reports his entire train came near being blown from the track.

In Tennessee.

ROGANNA, TENN., March 31.—Thursday's storm after striking here took a northeast direction, and for twenty-five miles carried everything before it. All the houses beyond Bledsoe, up to Eulia, Macon county, were blown into atoms, and fully a hundred persons are injured in that section, which is now described as a barren waste. Only one house was left standing here and many persons were terribly injured. Gallatin was badly damaged. It is impossible as yet to give a correct list of the dead and injured.

In Illinois.

MURPHYSBORO, ILL., March 31.—About twenty-five people are reported killed through Jackson county. Sixteen are said to have been killed in the vicinity of Shiloh and several about Poplar Ridge. Four were killed at Grand Tower and three children are missing.

In Missouri.

BLOOMLDALE, MO., March 31.—This little town suffered badly from Thursday's storm and ruin was spread everywhere. Five dwelling houses were literally blown to pieces and the Catholic church was wrecked. No loss of life is reported but several persons were injured.

Another Tale of Horror.

HENDERSON, KY., March 31.—Most discouraging reports come here from Petersburg, Blackford and other points in the path of the cyclone. In West Louisville every business house and half the residences were either wrecked or swept away. Tommie Logan, aged eight years, was killed, and thirteen others were hurt, two fatally. At Pooltown, John Wilson, John Babb and two children were killed and many injured. At Petersburg several buildings were unroofed. Blackford was all but wiped out. Twenty-one lives are known to have been lost in this locality, and four times as many injurnd. Among those dead are the following: Mrs. James Franklin, Mrs. James Mitchell and two children, Mrs. William Taylor, William Hooper and two children, Charles Hancock and one child, Henry Sandefnr, wife and three children, blown into the Green river with their house and drowned.

An Insurance Company to the Rescue.

NEW YORK, March 31.—The Mutual Life Insurance company of New York has authorized its general agents in Louisville to drew on the head office for necessary aid to policy holders who have suffered by the cyclone.

Killed and Wounded at Golconda.

GOLCONDA, ILL., March 31.—The cyclone of the 27th struck this place from the southwest being accompanied by rain and hail in floods.

The two story farm house of Jonathan Robinetta was riven to pieces, and its inmates were tossed about like play things. All were more or less seriously injured, Mrs. Robinetta fatally. Miss Lucy Robinetta was struck by a flying timber and killed outright. George Taylor's residence was torn to pieces. His wife was killed and other members of the family were seriously injured. All his outbuildings were wrecked. A German boy, name unknown, was drowned. Rumors are constantly coming in of residences destroyed, barns wrecked, fences washed away, orchards ruined and men women and children killed or washed away by the rushing waters.

Bridge Down Down—21 More Killed and 30 Injured.

EVANSVILLE, IND., March 31.—Three spans of the Newport News and Mississippi railway bridge across the Cumberland river, near Kuttawa, Ky., were blown into the river by Thursday's cyclone. The loss of property in the vicinity of Kuttawa, is estimated at $50,000. Twelve persons are reported to have been killed and about thirty seriously injured.

At Eddyville, Ky., nine persons were killed.

Hail Storms—65 Killed and Injured.

MORGANTOWN, KY., March 31.—A terrible hail and wind storm visited Uniontown, Ky., and Union and Webster counties Thursday at 5 p. m. At Sturgis hail one inch in diameter fell, and the wind unroofed several barns. At Sullivan the wind was worse, destroying many buildings and wounding ten or twelve men and women. For several miles in Webster county, between Clayville and Dixon, it swept everything away. The wife of W. B. Taylor, a son of Henry Hammock, a German unknown and others were killed outright. Houses and barns were totally destroyed. Beds, furniture and clothing have been found all along the road from Morganfield to Dixon. The killed and wounded at Webster will number not less than fifty.

TO THE RESCUE.

THE GOVERNOR ISSUES A PROCLAMATION

Requesting Aid for Louisville Sufferers—The Mayor of the Devastated City Responds to Governor Campbell's Kind Offer and Asks for Financial Assistance.

COLUMBUS, O., March 31.

As soon as possible after the receipt of authentic information of the nature and extent of the Lousville calamity, Governor Campbell wired messages of sympathy and proffers of aid to the mayor of Louisville, and in response last evening received the following telegrams:

LOUISVILLE, KY., March 29, 1889.

To His Excellency, James E. Campbell.

Our citizens will appreciate most kindly the loving words of sympathy from the people of Ohio. We are doing all that is necessary for burying the dead and housing the living. Money alone would serve us, but we will leave that to the generosity of your people, and for which we will be deeply grateful.

[Signed] CHARLES D. JACOBS, Mayor.

LOUISVILLE, KY., March 29, 1890.

To His Excellency James E. Campbell;

One could judge of the devastation of the tornado only by traveling through the district destroyed. No estimate can be made. Money alone is needed.

[Signed]. CHARLES D. JACOBS, Mayor.

Governor Campbell last night issued the following proclamation:

A PROCLAMATION.

To the people of Ohio:

Your generosity is appealed to through the desolation caused by a tornado which recently swept over Louisville, Ky. The Mayor of that city has telegraphed that the local authorities can house the homeless and bury the dead, but that money alone can alleviate the suffering and administer to the necessities of those who are injured or desolate.

In this emergency prompt action is needed. The people of Ohio have ever made ready response to the call of distress, and it is now their duty to again extend a helping hand.

I therefore call upon the mayor of each city and incorporated village in the state to proceed forthwith, by the appointment of committee or otherwise, to inform the people fully in regard to this calamity which has overtaken a great city in a sister state, and to secure from them such contributions as they may desire to make.

I suggest that all contributions be forwarded directly from the local committees to the mayor of Louisville, or to the authorities in the smaller towns which share her misfortune.

The responsive and liberal citizens of the rural regions are requested to send their contributions through the committee in the nearest city or village.

In witness whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the great seal of the state to be affixed, at Columbus, the 29th day of March, 1890, and in the one hundred and fourteenth year of the independence of the United States of America.

JAMES E. CAMPBELL.

By the Governor:

DANIEL J. RYAN, Secretary of State.

LO, THE POOR INDIANS.

Colonel Grierson Thinks He is Now Subdued on the Pacific Coast.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—A dispatch received at the war department from Colonel Grierson, commanding the troops which pursued and captured the renegade Indians in California, says it was one of the most successful affairs that has occurred on the frontier for many years and will effectually quiet the Indians of the San Carlos reservation.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January, A. D. 1884, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife, of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan, of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A. D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages, on page 591, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1885, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 20th day of January, A. D., 1890, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in Liber 118 of Mortgages, on page 609; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-one and 12-100 Dollars ($1751.12) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale, and the statutes of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now, as aforesaid, due and owing on said mortgage, together with interest to accrue thereon, and the costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Thirty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the 21st day of April, A. D. 1890, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5) town five (5) south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

Dated Jan. 23d, 1890.

MOSES BARTLETT, Assignee of Mortgage.

Pains and Aches

19 YEARS OF PAIN

PERMANENTLY CURED BY

St. Jacobs Oil.

THE CASE.

Milroy, Mifflin County, Pa.

Editor of The World, New York, N. Y.—Dear Sir: The case of Mrs. Gemmill presents a striking example of suffering and marvelous cure. She has lived in and near Milroy for 30 years, and is 69. In 1864 she was thrown from a wagon, sustaining serious injury to her spine. From that time till 1883 she was a helpless cripple, unable to walk.

THE CURE.

During these long 19 years of suffering, she found no relief from the numerous remedies she had tried. In 1883 her daughter read the advertisement of St. Jacobs Oil, and she bought two bottles. The oil was applied, and before the second bottle was exhausted by Mrs. Gemmill she was able to walk about, and has been completely cured.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

EVAN JONES' MESSAGE.

From the Memphis Single Tax Association column in the Weekly Appeal, published at Memphis, Tenn., we extract the following:

There have been a good many Presidents' messages lately, but none more important has been issued than that which Evan Jones, President of the Farmers' and Laborers' Union of America, read at the St. Louis convention. From this message, as published in the Weekly Toiler, the official organ of the Union, we extract the following:

LAND.

"There is perhaps no question that demands more serious attention at this time than the present condition of our land. From its many resources flow all the wealth of our nation, and upon its proper and just distribution depend the prosperity, contentment and happiness of the yeomanry, a class upon whom all nations most largely depend for strength and support.

"During the greatest prosperity of Rome about 85 per cent. of her population owned titles in land. It was then that she was founded upon a rock and was mistress of the world. But in the course of her history, through the monopolization of her lands by the few, through unjust legislation, the homes were wrenched from the hands of the masses. And when the dark death ford was reached, upon which civilization was to die, less than 2 per cent. of the people controlled the land, and it is said that about 1,500 men controlled the wealth of the world.

"To-day we find in America millions of acres of her fertile lands bought by the lives and efforts of her forefathers, which should have been held sacred for homes for their posterity, squandered upon railroads and other corporations, and millions more are owned and controlled by domestic and foreign syndicates, while a large per cent. of our homes are hopelessly mortgaged, and about 50 per cent. of our sons are tenants.

"This wh sale absorption of land by aggregated capital must be checked, or it will finally enslave the honest yeomanry of our country and inevitably destroy our much-loved republic.

"The hope of America depends upon the ownership of the land being vested in those who till the soil.

"Give the people homes, theirs to improve, theirs to cultivate, theirs to beautify and theirs to enjoy, and our grand republic will stand as the acme of modern civilization and national greatness."

It is worthy of remark that the Union at last addresses itself to the solution of

THE LAND QUESTION.

The hope of America does depend, as Evan Jones has said, upon the ownership of the land being vested in those who till the soil. This happy condition was once ours. It is so no longer. The question of questions is this: Why has the ownership of the land been slipping away from the working farmer, and how may be it restored to him? If we can find out what causes have brought about the present unfortunate conditions we have only to reverse these causes and the old conditions will return. If I have come pretty straight from Nashville to Memphis, and I don't like Memphis and want to go back to Nashville, but am not sure which road to take, it will be pretty safe for me to take the same road I came by—if I can find it. My first duty, therefore, is to look for the road I came by. When I have found this, I will at least have the general direction, and if there were certain specially bad spots of road I can try to avoid them on my way back. Now, I believe that the main difference between this country now and fifty years ago is that there was an abundance of good public land—now there is none that is of any account. Then "Uncle Sam could give every man a farm," as the saying went, but to-day he has nothing but desert wastes and mountain peaks to donate—land that no one can use. There were land speculators then as now, but the presence of vast tracts of public land made it impossible for them to oppress the people much, while to-day they hold the farmer as in the hollow of their hand. Then if a farmer wanted a farm of his own it cost him the merest trifle. If the land speculator who resided in the neighborhood wanted more than what he thought a proper price the farmer went straight to Uncle Sam, who always suited him, and after the speculator had seen this happen a time time or two he put down his price. But now if one speculator charges too high a price, the farmer can't go to Uncle Sam—it's no use. He must go to—whom? Why, bless you, to another speculator, who will in all probability ask him as much as the first. And so it is that the working farmer is between the devil and the deep sea.

But the farmer must make a living, and to do that he must agree to the terms of the land speculator. He will either buy the use of the land by the year (in other words he will rent it), or he will buy it outright and give a vendor's lien to secure the purchase money. In all probability he will have to pay out all his ready money as a cash payment. This leaves him flat, and so he must go to the store and pay credit prices; he must be cramped for work stock and cash to hire hands at critical periods when a few extra hands can do so much to save a crop. He must also have fewer and inferior tools. All this is natural, for he has little or no security to give except his labor, and the proceeds of that are practically mortgaged for years to come in payment for the land. Besides, in interest on the purchase price, the farmer pays each year what amounts to a fair rent. Is it any wonder that the poor farmer, between the high credit prices on the one hand and the interest on the other, finds it hard to reduce the principal? But the land speculator gives him time, for his security is growing each year as the farmer clears and improves his place. In good crop years the indebtedness is reduced, but in bad crop years the store account is not fully paid up, and so the farmer gives the storekeeper a second mortgage on the land. The storekeeper is finally forced to take up the first mortgage, and, finding that too large a share of his capital is being taken away from active business, he forces the farmer to borrow elsewhere. The farmer goes to a mortgage company and borrows on long time, but unless extremely fortunate he never pays up. But the company does not care much about the principal so it is secured, and the farmer goes on from year to year paying an interest that would amount to a good rent, and though he thinks of himself as a landowner, he really is a tenant, and some year, when from poor crops or illness, he falls farther than usual behind, the mortgage will be foreclosed, and he will become in name as well as in fact a tenant. And as he takes up his work again—for his family must live—he will ask himself what his work and saving during all these years have brought him. He has cleared a place and built cabins on it and fenced it, and now it has all gone to the mortgage company and he is paying rent on his own improvements. His feelings toward the mortgage company that has taken from him the land made fruitful by his toil can be better imagined than expressed; and when the election comes he will vote for the candidate who promises to pass the most severe laws against all mortgage companies.

But has our friend found his real enemy? Think it over, friends. Who ruined him? He has dealt with three men, the land speculator who sold him the land, the storekeeper and the mortgage loan company. Which one of these is at the bottom of his trouble? Think this over, and next week we will take the matter up again where we left off. In the meantime remember the words of Evan Jones, "THE HOPE OF AMERICA DEPENDS UPON THE OWNERSHIP OF THE LAND BEING VESTED IN THOSE WHO TILL THE SOIL."

We Will Stand United.

The St. Louis meeting has passed into history; the proposed consolidation of the agricultural organizations has been effected, and a plan of co-operation with the Knights of Labor in matters of mutual interest has been agreed upon. The result is not only encouraging in itself, but it marks the beginning of a new era in the history of industrial reform. It was the simple and hitherto silly giant, Labor, taking a lesson from the follies of the past. It voiced to the world the recognition of the identity of interests of all classes of honest workers, and gave promise of their future solidity in every effort to relieve the producers and elevate labor. Previous to the meeting many had dreaded, many others openly predicted failure. The history of the past afforded little ground for hope. Folly and faction had hitherto kept the workers divided into warring fragments and left them the easy prey of every cunning, scheming combination, financial, political or industrial. Moreover, it was feared that intolerance of opinions, sectional prejudice or imaginary diversity of interests might intrude and block the path to union and progress. "Will it be union and strength, or disunion and weakness?" was the expressed or unexpressed thought of every earnest mind whose hopes were centered in the new movement. But the men who met at St. Louis rose equal to the emergency; they rose superior to every other consideration but the supreme question of consolidation. The majority of those present were determined that a union should be effected, fully believing that without this there was no hope for economic reform. In the deliberations of the united body there was not the slightest evidence of sectional prejudice shown, not even the least trace of it felt. No such spirit will be tolerated in the ranks of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, and it is the duty of every member to discountenance that selfish, cowardly and unmanly feeling wherever or in whatever form expressed. Now that this consolidation is effected and co-operation agreed upon, it should be remembered by every officer and member that it was not done for mere show, but for active, useful work. That work must be done.—National Economist.

The Standard, a weekly paper published in New York City by Mr. Henry George is the organ of the single taxers of this country and of the world, in fact. Much in these columns now and hereafter will be from the columns of that splendidly edited and interesting paper; sometimes we will credit it with articles so borrowed and sometimes, especially where articles are small, we will not do so. But in so doing our disposition is to save space, not to detract from the Standard

CHRIST'S LAW OF LOVE.

LESSON I, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 6.

Text of the Lesson, Luke vi, 27-38—Commit Verses 35-37—Golden Text, Luke vi, 31—Commentary by the Rev. O. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

After the healing of the palsied man, as recorded in our last lesson, Jesus called Matthew to be one of His disciples, and was entertained by him at Capernaum. He then visited Jerusalem, healed the man at the pool of Bethesda, and uttered the discourse recorded in John v. We next find Him healing a man with a withered hand in the synagogue at Capernaum on a Sabbath day, thus greatly provoking the Pharisees, who determined to kill Him (Matt. xii, 13, 14). Shortly after this He went out into a mountain and continued all night in prayer to God, after which He called His disciples to Him and from them chose twelve apostles, that they should be with Him, and that He might send them forth to preach, and to have power to heal sicknesses and to cast out devils (Mark iii, 14, 15; Luke vi, 12, 13). Then follows the discourse of which our lesson today forms a part. It is a repetition of a portion of the sermon on the mount (Matt. v-vii), but delivered under different circumstances.

27. "But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you." See this in the Old Testament in Ex. xxiii, 4, 5; Lev. xix, 17, 18; Prov. xxv, 21, 22. See it also repeated in verse 35 of our lesson, with the encouragement that our reward shall be great and we shall be "Sons of the Most High" (R. V.), or, in other words, "as Christ Himself" (Luke i, 32, R. V.) Observe that these precepts are not for any who are not Christians, as if thereby they might win heaven, for "by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in His sight" (Rom. iii, 20); but for those who profess to be His followers, having received Him as their Saviour and Lord; that thus they may prove the sincerity of their discipleship.

28. "Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you." Putting together the four precepts of this and the preceding verse, we have only to say with the poor Indian to whom a missionary read these words: "This Indian can't do it; if God will make a new Indian perhaps he can." The natural man cannot do these God-like acts, but the Spirit of Christ in any man, woman or child can do again what the same spirit did in Christ Himself.

29. "Unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek offer also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloak forbid not to take thy coat also." The previous precepts may include only thoughts, looks and words on the part of our enemies, but here is personal violence and the spoiling of personal property, and are we still to be quiet? Peter reminds us that Christ suffered for us, leaving us an example that we should follow His steps; and Paul says, "Why do ye not rather take wrong? Why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauded?" He also commends those who took joyfully the spoiling of their goods (I Pet. ii, 21; I Cor. vi, 7).

30. "Give to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again." Stier, in his "Words of the Lord Jesus," says that we are to say with our hearts as well as with our lips to the impetuous maker of these demands: "Although I am not bound by any obligation of external right or law, yet am I, according to the spirit and law of love, both willing and obliged to serve thee and every man; that which thou art disposed to enforce from me, I will do for thee in free will and double measure, preventing thy sin by my kindness." Yet it is not the Lord's will to impose it upon His disciples as an absolute necessity to render every service that may in this evil world be demanded of them, any more than He requires them to allow all their property to be taken from them, or to tolerate every kind of personal insult. He enjoins only the requisite disposition of mind. We must, of course, oppose the sinner as such, and his sin, even as we resist the devil, the wicked one, whose malignity shows itself in each individual sinner.

31. "And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." In Matt. vii, 12, He adds, "For this is the law and the prophets." To love one's neighbor as one's self is the sum of our whole duty to our fellow man, but back of this lies the command to love God with all our heart and soul and strength and mind; and yet farther back, and first of all, a knowledge of the love of God to us in giving Himself for us.

32. "For if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for sinners also love those that love them." Yet many people give as a reason for thinking themselves Christians that "they love the brethren," not considering this verse, or that unless their love extends to their enemies they have nothing to boast of in the way of evidence. All these things are traits of a love which has no native origin in human hearts, but emanates from the being of God, descending into the hearts of His own and passing back through them to Him again.

33, 34. "What thank have ye?" Here is the same question asked a second and third time, emphasizing the fact that if we seek here in this life a return for all we do, we are nothing different from the sinners about us who know nothing of a better life, an endless life, an age to come. Jesus said to the Pharisee into whose house He went one Sabbath day to eat bread, that when He made a feast He should invite the poor and such as could not recompense Him again, content to be recompensed at the resurrection of the just (Luke xiv, 13, 14). If we seek a present reward, riches for their own sake, and the praise of men, and obtain it, that is all there is to it and with this life it ends; but if we seek the approval of God, we shall have His blessing in this life and eternal rewards at the resurrection.

35, 36. "Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful." We shall ever have to do in this world with unthankful and evil people, and if we expect a meet reward from those whom we serve we shall often be sadly disappointed. Many a time we shall fail to receive common gratitude. We may often be abused for our well doing and have the most selfish motives attributed to us; but all this will only give better occasion to prove the reality of our love. Mercy includes not only kindness but loving kindness, as it is often translated in the Old Testament; and when we by the Spirit of God are able to show loving kindness to the unthankful and evil we will prove ourselves to be children of God, great shall be our reward in the resurrection, and we shall be acknowledged as sons of the Most High when the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever (Dan. vii, 18.)

37, 38. "Judge not, condemn not, forgive, give." "Judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts" (I Cor. iv, 5). Inasmuch as we cannot always discern people's motives, we are not capable of judging nor authorized to condemn their conduct. The day will reveal all.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refun the purchase price, it satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co.

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidney, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles should remember that no other remedy in the world will so speedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

CLINTON, MICH., APRIL 3, 1890

Election next Monday.

Mrs. Marstellar visited Detroit Wednesday.

A. F. Freeman, Esq., of Manchester, was in town Monday.

D. M. Bainbridge returned from New York state last Friday.

H. W. Stevens of Tecumseh was on our streets Monday.

Abe Anthony visited Toledo from Saturday till Monday.

Fred Brainard went to Adrian Wednesday morning.

M. L. Calkins has moved into C. S. Burrough's house on Mill street.

Miss Kittie Drew came down from Norvell last week and will work for Ella Markiss.

Miss Anna McMaster went to Flint Wednesday. She will make that city her home this summer.

Chas Parker came down from Eaton Rapids, Wednesday. Mrs. Parker has been visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Muir, for a few days.

The Clinton Woolen Mfg. Co., shut down Monday to take stock. The invoicing was completed in time to commence running Tuesday morning.

Prof. Hopkins entertained his pupils at his home last Thursday Eve. The time was pleasantly spent with charades, games, an elegant repast, etc.

Bainbridge & Hause, the enterprising furniture dealers, have temporarily moved their stock in E. R. Smith's large store and are painting and papering the interior of their rooms.

John Lancaster, who has been spending the winter in this village, started Tuesday for Helena, Montana, where he has held a situation during summers for the past ten years.

The donation at the Baptist church last evening was well attended and notwithstanding it was the first of April, and may have weighed some what heavily on the minister's mind as to its outcome, it was a success. The receipts were $57:35.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Downs entertained a few couples of young people for their son Frank, last Friday Eve., at their pleasant home. The usual games were engaged in, a splendid supper served, and when the company bid the genial host and hostess good night, all were delighted with the evening just spent.

The Good Templars efforts in trying to secure some suitable place to hold their lodge meetings are not very successful. The committee asked W. C. Rogers if they could rent his hall, and he said they could have it for $20 a year, but Peter Jacob got wind of the deal and went them several better, gobbling up the whole building and leaving the good Samaritans out in the cold.—Clinton Local.

The G.A.R. Encampment at Adrian this week has been a brilliant success. Tuesday and Wednesday were beautiful days, the clerk of the weather being in his most amiable mood, the streets were gaily decorated, the attendance large and the exercises intensely interesting, while the public procession has rarely if ever been surpassed in Adrian. Many Clinton people attended.

Our popular druggist, M. L. Calkins, has moved his stock of drugs across the street into the Silver's block. The exterior and interior of the building had been painted and brightened up generally until now it presents a very modern appearance. Mr. Calkins added a very complete line of groceries to his stock, making a very neat and well regulated store. L. K. Davis, jeweler, can be found in the east window.

The Chas. F. Higgins Concert Co., gave the seventh entertainment on the Lecture course to a crowded house last evening. The citizens of Clinton and vicinity were fortunate indeed in having an opportunity to listen to such a talented company. They are by far the best musical company that ever visited Clinton, and in any future course, they will be eagerly sought after. The next on the course will be Miss Olive Logan, an impersonator and will occur the 11th of April.

Writes a Clinton correspondent to the Free Press: "I notice that Oceanna county is the only place that is likely to give Michigan a crop of peaches this year. I am pleased to differ with that statement. Southern Washtenaw and Northern Lenawee at this date never had a better prospect for a full crop. Although we do not have the extensive orchards of the peach belt, yet we furnish many thousands of bushels, and make very little noise about it, as we have no trouble in finding plenty of markets and very satisfactory prices."

The Spring Medicine.

The popularity which Hood's Sarsaparilla has gained as a spring medicine is wonderful. It possesses just those elements of health-given, blood-purifying and appetite restoring which everybody seems to need at this season. Do not continue in a dull, tired, unsatisfactory condition when you may be so much benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood and makes the weak strong.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

A project for a business college has been started at Hudson.

The ducks are said to be plenty at Devil's Lake this spring.

An "observation" social was held at Addison last week. What is that, pray?

The Dundee cornet band will give a dramatic entertainment April 10th and 11th.

The Rollin S. S. Association held an interesting day's session at Addison last week.

An Adrian man will make a business of shipping frogs to the eastern market this summer.

Hudson is stirring up the project of a soldiers' monument. She ought to have had one years ago.

The voters of Monroe County will vote on building a new jail at the coming township election.

The ladies of the Hudson Baptist church will soon present an entertainment known as the "Temple of Fame.

Regular services were resumed in the Methodist church at Hudson last Sunday, the repairs having been completed.

It is understood in fashion circles that the new spring bonnet will be four dollars taller and seven inches wider than last season.—Ex.

Will Carleton will lecture in Hillsdale April 2d. It costs fifty cents to hear the illustrious poet who used to sit on the hard benches of a Hudson school house.

Gilbert M. Smith, of Ypsilanti, died in jail at Ann Arbor Saturday. He drank whiskey to cure the grippe, had an attack of delirium tremens, lay out all night, and the combination was too much for him.

The Hudson Post young feller who scribbles locals complains that while the other boys walked up the hill to save the horses, "the county seat chap rode with the girls." Pretty rough on the County seat man.

Answering a caviler, who objected that ice should not have been gathered on Sunday, the Hudson Gazette asked: "What would the church socials have done for ice cream next summer?" The silence that followed was awful.

Rev. W. K. Spencer, of Adrian, who was called to Peoria, Ill., told his people that if they would promise to attend the meetings more regularly he might decline the Peoria call. The members promised and Mr. Spencer will remain at Adrian.

Lloyd Brazee, a former Lenawee county newspaper man, is in hot water. He has of late been publishing Chaff, in Chicago, which has been suppressed by the authorities because it contained matter unfit for publication. Brazee's arrest may follow.

The "Adrian Browns" have reorganized for this year, with the folowing players: Tom Carlton, W. Carlton, E. Sorter, C. Sorter, A. Miller, W. Burch, L. Lay, Harry Cole, John Sands. They would like to get dates from any club composed of players under 17 years of age for this year. —Adrian Times.

A school teacher says that pupils who have access to newspapers at home, as compared with those who have not, are better readers, better spellers, better grammarians, excel in pronunciation and read more understandingly, and obtain a partial knowledge of geography in almost half the time required by others.—Adrian Times.

The (Adrian) Messenger lashes Tom Hunter for alleged official misdeeds, the Times swears it's a libel, and wants vengeance. The Press thinks it's policy for Applegate to keep shady, and the prospects are fair for a triangular newspaper feud of no mean proportions at the Judicial seat. It's "ring rule" or ruin vs. beat bosses or bu'st.—Addison Courier.

Plans for spring are in order, for it is near at hand, and may come earlier than usual this year, winter being off on a vacation. Now is the time to sow spring advertising, to practice a little root pruning on the business boom, to get ready for picking new industries and arbutus together. Put on your thinking caps and renew your grip on the lines and pull.

The annual meeting of the executive committee of the G. A. R. Association of southeastern Michigan will be held in Adrian on Wednesday April 2d, the second day of the department encampment. The hour and place of meeting will be announced from the platform. Towns desiring the next encampment are requested to make the invitation at that time.

The Citizen's Telegraph line of Lenawee seems to have been heard of as far north as Ft. Pitt, British America. Manager Bowen having received an order for instruments from that point. He is surprised and doesn't know how the C T. line became known up there. Why, bless him, 'tis known from Greenland's Icy Mountain to India's Coral Strand" and to the Hottentots of Central Africa. Their children cry for it.—Adrian Press.

Dundeeans are not much interested in the "Race Problem," though often much may be heard on the subject at times from members of different political parties. Wednesday evening a colored orator from the South, intelligent and highly recommended, was advertised to lecture on the subject at the opera house. The crowd that turned out to hear him numbered one man, only one, and he was a leading prohibitionist.—Dundee Reporter.

Does advertising pay? J. W. Southard is prepared to positively answer that question in the affirmative. Last week he missed some money and, like a wise man, at once sought the Observer to help him recover his lost lucre. Just after the paper with his advertisement was printed, upon his retiring to bed, he found the money safely lodged in one of his stockings, where it had dropped through a hole in the pocket of his trousers. Does anybody now have any doubt as to whether advertising pays?—Morenci Observer.

THE WILCOX HARDWARE CO.

A Few Facts about a Flourishing Adrian Firm.

It is not many months ago that the Wilcox Hardware Co. came into existence in Adrian, succeeding to a business that had been founded away back in the pioneer eras of the city, and accepting as a part of their inheritance a rock-rooted reputation for business energy and progressiveness, coupled with a character for commercial probity that could not be excelled.

But change and progression are the order of the day, and while the parent concern always had a place in the van of industrial advancement in that community, the infusion of newer and younger blood must always lead to the betterment of business conditions. The developement that has marked the career of the Wilcox Hardware Company in the comparatively short period of its creations is an indubitable evidence of this fact, and to-day the patrons of the firm find themselves environed on every side with changes and conveniences that they had not thought possible in the past.

Aside from the increased comfort and elegances that the ascending tastes of the day demand, and which no firm that pretends to hold a place in popular esteem can afford to ignore, it is the little conveniences in the practical arrangements of a store, that are an essential source of economy, saving money to the proprietors, and proving a cause of appreciable satisfaction to their patrons. The new company manifestly realized this fact, and for the past few weeks have been actively at work largely increasing their storage room and business facilities, until to-day they have one of the most complete places of business, in all its appointments, to be found in any place that makes the slightest pretentions to progress.

One of the earliest improvements, it will be remembered, was the remodeling of the front. To-day, with its massive panes of pellucid plate glass, its improved entrance, and almost gorgeous display of glittering novelties in household and builders' hardware, the show windows mark a pleasing contrast to the old-fashioned style of hardware store, and offer attractions that rise to the altitude of an art display.

The ground floor of the store has just been entirely rearranged, and the facilities for showing goods to the best advantage very considerably increased by the removal of their stock of iron, steel, chains, and kindred goods, to the capacious wareroom in the rear of the main place of business, comprising Nos. 7 and 8 Maiden lane. The store proper, there fore, in addition to the handsome business office, is now used entirely for the display of shelf and builders' hardware, samples of the various kinds of stoves and ranges, wood, coal, gasoline, parlor, cooking, etc., in endless variety and of the standing makes controlled by this company. The effect in this department is pleasing, and the sturdy farmer, the busy mechanic, the careful housewife, or the daintily dressed lady of fashion must all feel equally at home, and find themselves all treated alike, on a basis of considerate courtesy and commercial equality.

The basement portion of the house is utilized for the storage of building paper, horse-shoes, nails, and other heavy goods of that grade.

In the front part of the second story is placed the mantel and grate departments, in rooms tastily adapted to showing goods, of such a standard to the best advantage, and where they have constantly on exhibition a fine display of wood and slate mantels, art tile facings, and hearths. In this particular line their facilities are not excelled by any firm in the state, for supplying their customers with mantels, and suitable accessories of any grade, at prices to suit the requirements of the customer.

The rear portion of this floor is used for the storage of belting, and the usual surplusage of the lighter grades of stock.

Over all, in this building, is a large and well-lighted workshop, most completely equipped with modern labor-saving tools and machinery, and manned by a force of workmen whose skill and fidelity is testified by the fact thas they have been with this house for many years. The sheet-iron, tin and copper work turned out by these busy experts cannot be surpassed, and people who want this class of work, and study the demands of durability and perfect workmanship, will patronize the Wilcox Hardware Co.

Having exhausted the main building, a visit would be incomplete without stepping across Maiden lane to the large double wareroom which serves as an annex, and on the first floor of which we find a complete line of agricultural implements and machinery, in all their multifarious requirements. Previous to this season the company's sales in this direction have been confined to the lines of sulky and hand-plows, wheel rakes, disc harrows, cultivators, etc. To these they have now added grain drills, mowers and binders, and such agricultural machinery, handling only the most standard makes, and constituting this a leading feature of their business.

The second floor of this building is used for the glass room, and the accommodation of sash, doors, steel goods and wooden ware, while in the celler are stowed agricultural implements, ready to be erected at any moment, to meet the emergency of the farmer who wants to equip himself with the best that is made, or suddenly finds he has to replace some dissabled or inferior machine.

In all their changes and modifications the firm have not been actuated by a desire simply to embellish, but by improved facilities, better room better light, and better avenue of approach, to facilitate their own business, and accommodate their wide range of patrons. With an increased force of clerks and assistants, who treat all comers with unexceptional courtesy, and under the improved conditions we have just enumerated. THE WILCOX HARDWARE COMPANY, 13 WEST MAUMEE STREET, can justly claim the most complete hardware store in Southern Michigan.

Does it hurt the Clothes?

We hear that some woman said of Pearline—"it's the greatest thing I ever saw for easy washing and cleaning, in fact it does so much I'm afraid of it." She recalls the old saying, "too good to be true."

How absurd to suppose that the universal popularity of Pearline is due to anything but wonderful merit.

How absurd to suppose that millions of women would use PEARLINE year after year if it hurt the hands or clothing.

How absurd to suppose that any sane man would risk a fortune in advertising an article which would not stand the most severe (and women are critical) tests.

That's just what PEARLINE will stand—test it for easy work—quality of work—for saving time and labor—wear and tear—economy—test it any way you will—but test it. You'll find PEARLINE irresistible.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—they are not, and besides are dangerous. 166 Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

ESTATE OF ELIZABETH BURNETT.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Saturday, the 29th day of March in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Elizabeth Burnett, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John Hunter, a creditor of said deceased, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this court purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to Joseph Hunter, the executor in said instrument named, or to some other suitable person.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the 28th day of April next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

The next meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of Mrs. Morris Kelley on Thursday afternoon of next week.

There was a large attendance at the Library Circle Tuesday evening of last week and a very pleasing and interesting program carried out.

Louise H. Arner went to Wellington, Ohio, last week, to see her son, C. W. Arner. We understand there is an heir there was the cause of her visit.

Mrs. Lewis Miller returned from Whitehall on Thursday, where she was called several days ago by the illness of her daughter, Mrs. Kennedy.

The person who found a striped red and black shawl Sunday evening will confer a favor if they will leave the same at the drug store, as it belongs to Mrs. Wm. Larkin.

The L. C. S. will give a maple sugar festival at the parlors of the church on Friday evening of the present week. The ladies are requested to furnish biscuit and such other eatables as are usually provided.

It is reported that the wind blew with such force Sunday night that it caused the plaster to fall off from John Sherman's house and shook up several other houses in the vicinity. Some think there was a small earthquake.

The program that is being prepared for the public entertainment to be given by the Library Circle is receiving special attention and promises to be one of the best entertainments the Circle has given. The date fixed for the occasion is April 22. A cordial invitation is extended to all to be present.

The General Supply Co. has sold its business to David Corvell and S. P. Smith, who will continue the undertaking, furniture and house furnishing supplies, the same as the firm of whom they purchased it. It is useless for us to say anything, as they are both well-known throughout the community and are known to be men of uprightness. We wish them a successful and prosperous business.

Last Friday being Mrs. Emeline Smith's 68th birthday, while she was at a neighbor's calling, her son, S. P. Smith, and daughter, Mrs. David Coryell, and their families stole a march on her home and prepared a sumptuous repast, and when everything was in readiness sent for their mother, who was very much surprised to see such a jolly gathering waiting to hear what she would say. The afternoon was spent very pleasantly by all.

Easter Sunday was duly celebrated, the church being appropriately decorated. In front of the altar an royal arch was erected, decorated with flags bearing the national emblem of the country they represented. A motto of evergreen, "missionary fields," was fastened to the arch. In the center of the arch was a cross of white lilies. The arch and cross rested on a bank of house plants, forming a base. Suspended from a wire running from the arch to either side of the church was the following quotation in gilt and scarlet letters: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." A beautiful basket of flowers, an Easter present from C. L. Waring to his mother, helped to beautify the decorating. In the morning the pastor gave a discourse suitable for the occasion. In the evening exercises were furnished by the Sabbath School. Everything passed off very pleasantly all day. The attendance was very good, both morning and evening. The collection for the mission cause amounted to $127—nearly $20 better than last year.

MACON MUSIC.

Henry and Eddie Miller are on the sick list this week.

Sabbath School will be reorganized at the M. E. Church next Sunday, April 13th.

Garret Derby and family, of Tecumseh, visited Mrs. Derby's parent's, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Maples, last Saturday and Sunday.

John Frost, Sr., went to Deerfield last week on business. It is rumored that those widows down there are very attractive.

There was a good deal of patching tickets at the polls Monday. The Democrats elect treasurer. Bolt Pennington was elected supervisor by thirty-six majority.

The W. C. T. U. held a box social at Cotton's Hall last Friday night, one of the features of the evening being a sham trial. The complaint was assault and battery; Bert Day, plaintiff, and Milton Kriedler, defendant. The attorneys were Will Hatch for the plaintiff and Joe Howell for the defendant. The case was hotly contested and the young attorneys did credit to themselves in bringing out the fine points of the case. The decision of the jury was "not guilty."

SPRINGVILLE SIFTINGS.

Simon Shultis still continues in a very critical condition.

The corner drug store and medical laboratory, lately vacated by M. F. Turrell and Co., has been refitted and stocked with tobacco and cigars; J. H. Clayson, dispenser.

Mrs. Josie B. Kemp, of Tipton, will be present at the debating society Saturday evening, at which time she will give an exhibition of her talents, with a view of organizing a class in elocution.

The next meeting of the Cambridge farmers' club will be held at the residence of Arnold Graves, Saturday afternoon, April 26. This organization promises to fill a long-felt want in the social circles of the community.

The candidates on the Democratic ticket, with one exception,—that of Chas. W. Billmyre for justice of the peace—were elected. Frank P. Sheeler, candidate for supervisor, received a majority of thirteen over the present incumbent, J. E. Gibbs. Rep. Harmony once more reigns in the Democratic household. The Prohibitionists report a gain of twenty over the last election.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Miles Drouillard has moved to Deerfield.

Mrs. A. M. Sleeper spent the Sabbath at Manchester.

Miss Clara Judson, of Raisin Center, was in town Monday.

T. C. Osgood, of Toledo, visited his brother at Holloway this week.

Mrs. Nay has moved on the place formerly owned by Jacob Wright.

Miss Fan Kelley visited at Tecumseh last week as the guest of her sister, Luella Sutherland.

Bertha Smith and Nellie Sleeper, of Adrian, visited in the village two or three days last week.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The Best Salve in the world for cuts, Bruises, Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains Corns, and all skin Eruptions, and postively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box FOR SALE BY C. A. Wright & Co.

Dyspepsia's victims are numbered by thousands. So are those who have been restored to health by Dott's Sarsaparilla.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Dr. Hendershot has moved into Edgar Exelby's house.

Jim Pocklington and wife spent Monday with friends in Britton.

Chas Lenardson, of Blissfield, spent Sunday with his parents at Britton.

Miss Susie Osgood spent Sunday with the families of her cousins, Will and Elmer.

Owen Lenardson now occupies the house formerly the residence of Dr. Hendershot.

That dirty, malaria breeding slough on the Post Office corner has not been put in a healthy condition.

Mr. and Mrs. Keifer, of Morenci, have been visiting friends in this village during the past week.

We understand that Mrs. Herbert Cranshaw, who has been sick for some months, is no better.

Morris D. Britton, formerly night operator at the station, is now joint agent of the Wabash and the Lake Erie & Western Rys. at Denver, Ind.

The hottest election we can remember in old Ridgeway was that of Monday. The Pickerel Hill district, the prairie corner stone, and bursting the ring, brought about a regular Republican cyclone.

A baloon race will start from Britton next Saturday afternoon. The Kickapoo Medicine Co. will start two 30 foot baloons from the school campus after the afternoon performance. Come and see the show.

The Ladies Home Missionary Society held a very interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. John Zeluff last week. We understand they have some very interesting entertainments in view. New England supper, old folks something, etc., etc. We'll be there.

Mertie, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cheever, who had long been a sufferer, was buried on Friday last. Mertie, always an invalid, had endeared herself in the hearts of her friends and relatives, and her death is keenly felt. All sympathize with the bereaved parents.

The beautiful memorial service last Sunday week, is still one of the topics. The decorations were very handsome, and we believe were photographed by Mr. Heck of Tecumseh, after the services. This opens the way to obtain a souvenir which will be cherished by a large number of people in the community.

DOT! the Miner's Daughter, or, One Glass of Wine; the great Temperance Drama, will be played by the Britton Dramatic Club, on Friday and Saturday evenings, April 18th and 19th, at the Exelby Hall, Britton.

MERTIE CHEEVER.

The deceased was the only daughter of Althea and Andrew Cheever, of Britton, Mich., died Wednesday morning April 2d, 1890, about two o'clock, after two weeks and one day sickness. Aged five years, two months and four days. While the bereaved parents have the sympathy of the community in the death of their daughter Mertie, they also carry a remembrance of the sweet countenance and intelligent features of this child so good and patient, yet from a bodily deformity, having never walked, nevertheless, through all was a peaceful, contented child. It mattered not, sick or well, Mertie was the same good child. And how affectionately attentive were the parents of the dear little one to her every need while she called forth so much attention from them. Since she is gone to her Heavenly home where there are no bodily deformities how often father and mother will miss little Mertie in the earthly home. The funeral services were conducted by the pastor of the Christian Church, in the home, on Friday at 10 o'clock A. M; text, Revelations XXI-4. Her remains were borne to Ridgeway for burial.

CARD OF THANKS.

We express our thanks to the neighbors and friends who were so kind in the sickness, death and burial of our dear little daughter Mertie.

ALTHEA AND ANDREW CHEEVER.

TIPTON TOPICS.

J. Goff and family have moved into Wm. Lambkin's house.

B. F. Lambkin renewed his labors in district No. 2 Monday.

School commenced at the Center Monday, with Miss Eva Wheeler as teacher.

John Burtless was connected with the Commercial Telegraph last week. His call will be "C. G."

Election passed off very quietly. The Republicans had it their own way, there being but one ticket in the field.

John Burtless expects to deal in agricultural implements this season and will be glad to have his friends call and examine his stock.

Mrs. John Stout, whom we noted some time ago as being very ill, died at her home on Thursday last. The funeral services were held at the M. E. Church Sunday, Rev. Palmer officiating.

DEVILS LAKE DOINGS.

Ed. Pierson is again able to be out.

A. Harlow has moved into his own house again.

School commenced here Tuesday with Miss Anna Jenkins as teacher.

Lightning struck the cellar wall of Mrs. Parkhurst's barn Tuesday morning, doing no other damage than the killing of a sheep.

Mr. Fred Duel, of Tecumseh, is here getting the machinery out of his boat, preparatory to enlarging it so that it will carry more passengers.

Mrs. C. E. Copp, of Hillsdale, occupied the pulpit at the F. B. Church last Sunday. The pastor, Mr. T. C. Lawrence, has gone to his home in New York for a short vacation.

Nearly every one attended town meeting at Addison. The Republicans are feeling quite jubilant over the fact that they elected their supervisor, Mr. Warren Parker, and several other officers.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, APL. 10

The voters of Illinois and Wisconsin are tumbling over into the Democratic pasture like a flock of sheep. It will take several pocket boroughs like Idaho to offset the loss of these two states.

Senator Allison says "conditions have changed" since the senate tariff bill of two years ago was formed. The Senator is not strictly correct. The people have changed, rather than the conditions.

The recent local elections in the West show that the Democratic revolution is growing. Milwaukee elected a Democratic mayor by 5000 majority and the town elections in Chicago, (Cook county) went over 8000 the same way.

Protection may sometimes protect but oftener it does not. Prohibition may sometimes prohibit, but oftentimes it does not. These be sober, candid facts, and sober, candid men are coming to this way of thinking very rapidly.

Senator Ingalls of Kansas is likely to have something to do besides fighting an imaginary insurrection in the South. The Farmers Alliance of that state, numbering over 100,000 voters, has come out in opposition to his reelection.

The kicking and squirming and faltering of the Committee on Ways and Means is amusing. Major McKinley should take to heart the old adage: "The man who tried to please everybody, pleased nobody and lost his beast in the bargain."

"Susan B. Anthony, U. S. S." wouldn't look so bad on a package of garden seeds or on the cover of a pub. doc. There are worse men than Susan B. in the Senate, and there is no telling what the State of Wyoming may do. Young women, go west.—Washington Post.

The Toledo Bee says: Michigan's farmer governor made an address in favor of high tariff tax protection the other day, and showed himself well posted on the latter phases of the question by saying, he had heard that Senator Sherman, of Ohio, had introduced an anti trust bill in the senate, but he had not read its provisions!

The Massachusetts "Home Market Club" is opposed to the duty on hides. Ten years ago Gen. Hancock was laughed at for saying that the tariff was a local question, and now we se the big high tariff club of New England favoring free hides. The tariff is properly a local question, but the farmers of the Northwest have never been able to get that fact through their wool.

The outrageous character of the new House rules was fully illustrated in the vote on the Idaho admission bill. The affirmative vote was only 129, but the speaker "counted in" enough Democrats to make a quorum of 165 and declared the bill passed. If 129 votes can admit a new state, 100 votes, or even 50, would possess the same power. Talk about majority rule. This is the most arbitrary and tyrannical kind of minority rule.

In the Forum for April is an article by C. Wood Davis in which he seeks to prove that the chief cause of the present agricultural depression is the over production of farm products. Whether intentionally or not it is a most emphatic argument in favor of free trade. If the home market is now glutted, which is true, what the farmer most needs is a foreign market for his surplus crops, and it is impossible to extend our foreign trade under the present high tariff system

An exchange says: Converts among Republicans and protectionists to the doctrine of free raw materials are numerous. They are coming forward like anxious souls in a great revival. They are flocking to the standard unfurled by Cleveland in 1887. They have so appalled and terrified the Ways and Means Committee in Congress that its aimless pottering and tinkering indicates that the Committee has lost its head. It is "rattled," confused, unable to act, because thwarted at all points, and showing signs of discouragement, dismay and a weary disgust.

MAJOR McKINLEY'S TARIFF VENTURE.

The new tariff bill, after several months incubation in a closet by the light of a dark lantern, has finally been presented to the full committee and become public property. Never before has a financial measure been presented in Congress that has caused such a storm of protests in the house of its friends. The sugar men are up in arms, the boot and shoe manufacturers of New England are crazy, the tobacco men are disgusted, and the great army of consumers, who pay all the tariff taxes, are mad clear through. And, yet, one cannot examine the bill critically without asking himself what all this hubbub is about. Major McKinley was the author of the Chicago platform of 1888. He is also the author of the new tariff bill, and the bill is simply an honest effort to fulfill the pledges of the platform, that is all. The bill is framed especially to promote high taxation. It is a tariff for protection with incidental revenue. The very object of the bill is to tax the people for the benefit of the trusts. The men who voted to put the present leaders in power should be willing to take their own medicine without making such wry faces.

* * *

A few examples will serve to illustrate the character and objects of the bill. Hides are now on the free list. The committee at first put them on the dutiable list. Then they were put back on the free list, but in the final report they are subjected to duty. For 18 years hides have been on the free list to the great advantage of American labor and commerce. The price of foot wear has been reduced to every consumer, and an export trade of ten million dollars annually has grown up under this beneficent free trade policy. Our commercial relations with the South American States have been stimulated and enlarged thereby. The tax on hides will endanger this export trade, cripple the boot and shoe manufacturers, and increase the retail price of shoes to the consumer. It will not benefit the farmers in general to any appreciable amount. Take Lenawee County thro' we doubt whether the farmers average a sale of two hides to each farm annually. But the four beef packing concerns of Chicago and the big cattle syndicates of the far west demanded this tax, and as they "fried out" liberally in the last campaign their demand has been heeded.

* * *

The woolen industry has been in a more depressed condition during the past year than ever before. Failures have been unprecedented. The carpet industry has especially suffered. Yet in spite of these facts, and in the face of the demand for free wool on the part of the carpet manufacturers, the duties have been raised on all grades of wool. An attempt is made to compensate the mill owners by an increased duty on all woolen products, but this will simply increase the retail prices to the consumer. The increased tax on wool will be of no benefit to the ordinary farmer. A handful of large wool growers in Ohio and a few big ranch men in the west may receive some benefit, but no one else. The increased prices which the manufacturer will be compelled to charge will restrict his sales, increase the demand for foreign importations of woolen goods, and thus reduce the demand for American wool and hammer down its price. In two years time both the woolen manufacturers and the general farmers, who keep small flocks of sheep, will be worse off than they are now. But the big wool growers can be subjected to the "frying" process, and hence their demands must be satisfied.

* * *

The duty on tin plates is largely increased, which will raise the price of all kitchen utensils, of canned goods and vegetables, of every tin and sheet iron roof. Houses will be increased in cost by an increased duty on lime and cement, brick and tiles, and glass. The poor man's kitchen is made more costly by an increased tax on pottery and glass ware, that on common glass ware being increased more than one hundred per cent. The poor man's clothing and bedding are made more costly by an increased tax on blankets and nearly all kinds of cloths needed for either summer or winter wear. On common window glass the duty, already from 60 to 160 per cent, is largely increased. Table cutlery is raised from 50 to 150 per cent. Penknives, pocket knives and that class of cutlery, now paying a duty of 30 per cent are raised from 65 to 100 per cent. On bottles the duty is increased 50 per cent. On glue, paint oils, flax seed and paints, there is a heavy increase. The duty on oranges, lemons and limes has been trebled.

* * *

These are a few examples culled at random. The same principle runs through the entire bill. It is a bill to rob the consumers on all articles of household and farm use; to extort tribute from the masses for the benefit of a few privileged classes, to help the dressed beef trust, the cattle trust, the glass trust, the tin plate trust (which is only waiting the passage of this bill to organize) the starch trust, and so on to the end of the chapter. The interests of the big syndicates, which were subjected to the "fat frying" process in 1888, have been thoroughly "protected" in the McKinley bill.

AN IOWA VIEW OF THE TARIFF.

Even Republicans Think it is Time to Reduce Taxes.

Jacob Funck, of Fairfield, Ia., publishes in the Burlington Hawkeye an open letter to Congressman Gear, Member of the ways and means committee, in which he explains that he writes to Governor Gear because the tariff question is one that "more than anything else concerns the Western farmers at this time. He says:

"To my mind there is no other political question on which the masses in the rural districts of the West are changing their minds so rapidly as on this one."

Farm values and the value of farm products are at the lowest, he adds, and other interests are suffering. But the law makers persistently refuse "to reduce the tax levy."

"Every President from Grant down has called the attention of Congress to the fact that we were collecting about a hundred million from the people more than was needed for the legitimate demands of Government. What have we done to remedy the evil? Absolutely nothing, except to hunt some sink hole or another into which to throw the surplus. As a result our people are still compelled to pay war taxes, and some of them have even been made to believe that the more they were taxed the richer they would get."

He directs Governor Gear's attention to the recent elections in Iowa, and asks him if it is not time to do something for agriculture. The people of the West, he says, who "voted for Harrison and high tariff, with a promise of good times and good prices, are "getting their eyes open" and "will stand no more foolishness." With oats that cost 20 cents selling at 15, and corn that costs 25 cents selling at from 16 to 20, and pork barely paying for the corn it takes to make it, what are the farmers going to do? They are not going to be deceived again, as they were in a tariff commission and a Congress that "manipulated" the tariff so they believed a reduction of 20 per cent, had been made. What is the remedy? he asks, and replies as follows:

"Reduce the tariff to the wants of the Government. Taking the tax off of tobacco, whisky, and sugar will not satisfy. The duties must come off of the necessaries of life. Let us get back to a peace footing and reduce the levy until the surplus is wiped out. Hunting sink holes to put it in will not satisfy the Western farmers.

So long as the West must sell her produce in the open, unprotected market, we of the West will demand the same open market in which to purchase our goods. * * * Under existing circumstances the West has very little interest in a protective tariff, and about all she will stand will be a tariff sufficient for the legitimate wants of the Government, with incidental protection, unless it be in some new industries not yet tried. The old infants, with their millions, must learn to care for themselves, especially those that are selling their wares cheaper in Europe than they do at home, as well as those who can by the aid of machinery drive the foreign manufacturers out of their own markets. We are willing to stand a reasonable share, but we can't stand present rates much longer."

And then he makes these remarks about "war taxes," ignoring the convenient assertions of so many of his fellow-protectionists that the only "war taxes" are those which yield the internal revenue:

"You yourself must see that the Western farmers are losing faith in a war tariff 25 years after the war is over. They are just beginning to call to mind the fact that this high protective tariff was put on to protect our manufacturers against foreign competition so as to enable them to pay the enormous taxes imposed on them during the war when we not only made them pay a license for the privilege of manufacturing, but also charged them a heavy specific tax on every article manufactured by them. When the war closed we relieved them from the burden of paying license and also from the specific tax, and should have at the same time reduced our tariff tax to a peace footing. Had we done so a few men would perhaps have a few millions less, while many of the common people would have a few hundreds of thousands more and all would be happier."

He suggests that while the committee is "going through the farce of having those infant millionaires come before you and tell you how hard it is for them to pay living wages to their laborers and yet squeeze out a living for themselves," some member should ask the witnesses to show their books. He would not spare even Judge Lawrence, who speaks for the wool growers. "Ask him," he says, "where he got his money if wool-growing doesn't pay." He has no consideration for those who "raise sheep by proxy and farm on horseback or in a carriage." "You hear," he says, "no such bowling about tariff on wool from the men who take care of their own flocks. It's the proxy farmers and speculators who do the howling." And then, without regard for the opinions of Senator Hoar and Senator Dawes and Senator Edmunds, he declares that he will not believe that the foreign manufacturer pays the duty, and incidentally defines his political faith:

"Now, don't call me a free trader or a democrat. I am neither. I still stand on the old Republican platform, and expect to remain there, True. I did not run after strange gods and try to pursuade myself that a tariff is not a tax, nor do I take any stock in the idea that the tariff is only a tax paid by the foreigner to get into our market. I do not believe that an importer will pay 47 per cent. on his importation and then not charge that up as part cost. I believe he will do just as you did when in the grocery business; he will figure our just what his goods cost him, and then sell accordingly, charging profit on cost when laid down in his own house. I don't believe any business man is such a fool as to pay out 47 per cent., or any other per cent. and not charge it up on cost on which to reckon his per cent. of profit and by which to fix the selling price of his goods. I believe in applying common sense and business principles in all such matters; and if I must be read out of the party for such a belief, so be it; I will still contend for the right."

THE TARIFF PROVED TO BE A TAX.

The McKinley bill has rendered one service of immense value to the cause of tariff reform. It has proved to the country beyond a question that the tariff is a tax. How any one could ever have denied it passes comprehension, but the Republicans as a body have been denying it all along and most of them were honest in so doing; that is, they supposed they were; they did not believe it was a tax. Since Speaker Reed changed front so radically in the question of what constitutes a quorum we decline to commit ourselves to his sincerity in anything. But whether he believed it or not, he has been particularly fond of denying that the tariff is a tax, paid by the consumer. The Protestant theologian does not see how the Catholic can believe in transubstantiation; the infidel does not see how either Catholic or Protestant can believe in the Trinity. But theology makes no such demands upon human faith as the protective system does when it demands that its votaries shall believe that the tariff is not a tax. Most of the Protectionists have believed it, and those who have not believed it have pretended they did.

Now, the McKinley bill has confronted the nation with the evidence that the tariff is a tax. It proposed to levy a duty of one cent and a half a pound on hides. The entire leather and boot and shoe trade of the country, regardless of party affiliations, have vehemently protested against this as a heavy tax on their business. We presume that the gentlemen who manufacture leather, and who, from leather, manufacture boots and shoes and harness, are the best possible judges whether a duty on hides is a tax or not. They say it is.

The McKinley bill proposes—or did propose for a few minutes; it is changing so fast it is impossible to keep up with it—to levy a duty of $1 a pound on raw silk, and all the New Jersey and Connecticut silk manufacturers protested against it because it was a tax on them, and if they do not know, who does?

The bill proposes to raise the duty on tin plates from one cent to two and one-fifth cents a pound, and the canners and manufacturers of tin goods in Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York and the country at large strain every nerve to defeat this proposition, on the ground that it is a tax on them. If these gentlemen do not know whether the duty on tin plate is a tax, who does know?

Of course, if these taxes shall be levied, the manufacturers will raise their prices to a point that will reimburse them, if they can. But manufacturers are trying to reduce their prices and increase their sales; they do not want their expenses increased; they do not want to be compelled to advance or try to advance their prices. And if they should succeed in reimbursing themselves, as they probably would, it would only be by making the people pay the tax.

Do the people want to pay any more taxes?—National Democrat.

Best Thing He Ever Saw.

The following is an extract from a letter written by Mr. D. A. Reynolds editor and proprietor of Hearld, Lyons Mich., under date of January 11th, 1890:

"You will observe that I have given your advertisment position on the first page of the Herald, while other proprietary medicines have had to take the run of the paper. The reason for doing this is, that upon receiving your "copy" a number of the cures effected seemed similar to that of which my little son was suffering, a case of blood poison, or irritable sores breaking out all over his body. To-day he is entirely free from disease, and one bottle of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) did the work.

Now this is the reason for giving you the position, as I consider Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) the best medicine I ever saw. I wish you unlimited success in your business."

The above is a sample of letters which are coming to us all the time. S. S. S. is nearer infallible than any remedy made, and has probably done more good than any medicine known to mankind. We will mail a Treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases to all who will send there address.

SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

March April May

Are the best months in which to purify your blood, for at no other season does the system so much need the aid of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, as now. During the long, cold winter, the blood becomes thin and impure, the body becomes weak and tired, the appetite may be lost. Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiarly adapted to purify and enrich the blood, to create a good appetite and to overcome that tired feeling.

Hood's Sarsaparilla will cure, when in the power of medicine, scrofula, salt rheum, sores, boils, pimples, all humors, dyspepsia, biliousness, sick headache, indigestion, general debility, catarrh, rheumatism, kidney and liver complaints, and all diseases or affections arising from impure blood or low condition of the system.

DOWN IN DIXIE.

Ten Persons Drowned in the Flood.

THE ECHOES OF MISSISSIPPI'S INUNDATION.

Very Destructive, Though Not of Wide Extent—The Catfish Point Planters Ruined—A Hundred Houses Washed Away—Breaking of the Levees.

ARKANSAS CITY, April 7.—As soon as the news of a break at Catfish Point reached here, the government steamers Speed and Graham took several barges to that point and brought away about 150 people and their effects; also a lot of stock, etc. Captain Tollige, of the government service, is on the ground doing everything he can to save life and property.

Those who wish to come will be brought here by the government's boats, and quarters provided for them. Parties who visited the scene of the disaster state that the torrent coming out of the opening has about spent its force. Although this is much the largest break that has yet occurred on the Mississippi side, the territory that will be affected by it will be comparatively small. Outside of the Catfish Point peninsula the water from this crevasse will reach but little territory that is not already inundated by the crevasse at Mound, Huntington and Offut's, but the destruction of property in this little peninsula is fearful.

The planters who owned the plantations around Catfish Point are almost ruined. It is estimated that over a hundred houses have been washed away, and there is very little hay, corn or planting seed left. The planters will be so badly crippled that they will meet with considerable difficulty in making a crop even if the water recedes in time. The flood has left almost nothing. The whole bend was filled with water as than in the river, within a few hours after the break occurred. The backwater broke through the levee at Eutaw Landing, in the lower end of the bend, and it is now running back into the river. It is thought that several lives were lost.

Seven Negroes Drowned.

VICKSBURG, April 7.—A raft containing twenty negroes, who were trying to escape from the flood, was capsized in the mouth of Bayou Falaya, the rapid current having carried the frail craft against a tree. Only thirteen of the crew reached the shore alive. The survivors were brought here by steamer. All were Alabama negroes and not much aquainted with such vicissitudes.

Three Women Perish.

GREENVILLE, MISS., April 7.—While a man with three women in a skiff were fleeing from approaching flood on the Bogue country, the skiff commenced to leak, and before any assistance could be rendered them the whole party went down, and the women were drowned.

Rolling Fork Submerged.

ROLLING FORK, MISS., April 7.—The water in Deer Creek has risen four feet in the last thirty-six hours, and is now running over its banks on the east side, and is still rising at the rate of half an inch an hour. Every foot of dry land in Rolling Fork will be under water before morning. The passenger train from Memphis, due here last night, did not arrive till morning, and could go no farther.

Government Bulletin.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The Ohio and Lower Mississippi will rise.

7 Killed—52 Hurt.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., April 7.—Adjutant General Vance, sent to investigate the damage done by the tornado, reports to Governor Fifer that at Metropolis one woman was killed, and fifteen persons wounded, none mortally. The damage to property is $80,000, and to farmers in that vicinity $20,000. At Grand Tower two persons were killed, four mortally wounded (two of whom have since died), and thirty-seven more or less seriously wounded. Nineteen houses were destroyed.

High Water in Texas.

DALLAS, TEX., April 7.—The Trinity river is overflowing its bottoms and much damage is reported by the drowning of stock.

MOUNTING UP.

The Defalcation of State Treasurer Archer Approaches $200,000.

BALTIMORE, April 7.—The legislative committee authorized to investigate the accounts of State Treasurer Archer is prosecuting its work in this city. A number of bank presidents, cashiers and stock brokers, with or through whom Archer disposed of the state's securities, were examined. One witness, C. C. Shriver, president of the Metropolitan Savings Bank, swore positively that the first transaction, $6,000, was made with Archer in the safe deposit building, wherein the state securities were kept in a vault, and that the state treasurer handed him the bonds there as collateral. The amount of the defalcation is now known to be at least $192,700. The deeper the committee probes, the larger the peculations appear to aggregate.

A despatch from Annapolis to-night to the American, says that Barnes Compton (lately congressman from the Fifth district), will not accept the state treasurership.

A LITTLE GIRL OUTRAGED.

Terrible Deed Of a Tramp—A Lynching Bee Organized.

AKRON, O., April 7.—At Cuyahoga Falls, a few miles north of this city, as the 11 year old daughter of night watchman Rhodes was passing along an unfrequented street she was caught by a tramp, who stifled her cries with his hand and carried her in a wood, where he kept her for three hours. The child was discovered last night and taken to a physician who pronounced her recovery as very doubtful. A posse of 100 men at once organized to search for the tramp and all the roads are guarded by horsemen, while the woods and fields are being scoured. Capture means lynching.

Tit For Tat.

DULUTH, MINN., April 7.—The Duluth board of trade, which has handled seventeen million bushels of wheat since September, is determined to get even with the Chicago board of trade. Saturday it succeeded in getting direct quotations from New York. The directors at the meeting voted to instruct the Western Union and North American telegraph companies not to furnish the Chicago board with Duluth quotations until the Chicago board consents to furnish the Duluth board with quotations.

THE STEEL RAIL INFANT.

LOUD WAILS ABOUT PRETENDED DANGER TO THE INDUSTRY.

Copious Shedding of Useless Tears—Some Interesting Information Concerning the Equality of Prices in England and the United States.

A protectionist trade paper of New York city, The American Metal Market, scores the steel rail makers for whimpering over a rumored intention to reduce the tariff on rails from the present duty of $17.92 per ton to $10 per ton, and tells them that they can get along perfectly well so long as their protection is not less than that on pig iron.

The rumor alluded to has since been denied, but setting it on foot has served the useful purpose of calling attention to the rank absurdity as well as injustice of this duty, since our mills have long since demonstrated their ability to compete with foreign makers on even terms, whenever they can obtain raw material as cheaply; their true interest lying, therefore, in free ore and pig iron, rather than in higher but ineffective duties on rails.

So long as the business of making rails was hedged about by patents as well as tariff laws, it remained an absolute monopoly in the hands of the few who controlled the patents and who, being shielded by these from domestic competition and by a high tariff from foreign competition, grew fat on the excessive prices which they compelled the American public to pay for their product. The spoil thus accumulated still acts in their hands as a club with which to retain the manufacture within the old ring by force; but the possibility of home competition as soon as the essential patents expired quickly reduced the blackmail margin; so that for some years past the difference in selling price between the finished rails and that of the material used has been no greater in America than in England.

The hackneyed plea that the tariff is maintained primarily for the benefit of workingmen, and that a cut in wages must follow any reduction of duties, is even less excusable in this branch of the iron industry than in any other. Not only is the wage cost per ton no higher at home than abroad (as is the case in so many branches of manufacturing, where high wages being paid for more efficient work really results in cheap labor), but it is no secret that even the daily wages at American mills are a trifle less than at foreign ones.

Of the two concerns whose managers made the loudest outcry the other day against a reduction of the tariff, claiming that it would necessitate lower wages to save the princely dividends from any shrinkage, that at Scranton has repeatedly of late years exported rails to Canada in competition with Great Britain, and could undoubtedly have extended the business much further had they not been given by governmental generosity a more profitable field to work at home. The owners of these works, as well as of that other sturdy beggar whose lamentations were likewise so piteous at even a hint of danger to the $17.92 duty—the Carnegie aggregation of mines at Pittsburg—are also large owners of ore and coal lands, which fact may cloud the eyes to the truth recognized by Maj. Bent, of the Pennsylvania Steel company, that what the rail making industry proper needs is not high tariffs, but cheap materials.

In the present state of the market the pig iron and spiegel which go to make a ton of rails cost about $26 in England, but are worth $28 in the United States, owing chiefly to the necessity of importing most of our spiegel, and the price of rails in both countries is about $35. It is seldom that so exact a parity has existed, and it is now due in great measure to the wider prosperity enjoyed by England at present as a consequence of its broader markets; but it vividly illustrates how absurd is even a $10 duty. Even when the two markets were furthest apart of recent years, rails bringing only $20 in England against over $30 in America, the foreign makers got their material for $12, while domestic ones had to pay not less than $20; the owners of the complete natural monopoly vested in mines being able to exact from the comparatively open industry of manufacture the full amount of the tax that the latter was enabled, under the shield of the tariff, to levy on the people.

At first sight it would appear that only the superstition born of degrading dependence upon government pap had led these manufacturers to plead for retention of their swaddling clothes rather than to insist upon being given free materials with which to challenge the world. When we reflect, however, that so many of these iron lords who talk of cutting down wages at the same moment that they are lavishing wealth on their personal enjoyment are owners of mines as well as mills; that it may easily pay them to run the one on a small margin for the sake of the enormous profits to be taken out of the other, and that, although the plunder is not very great at the moment, they may be looking forward to a change in prices with the determination that whatever befalls they shall not suffer, we may give them credit for more shrewdness than appears on the surface.

The thing most to be wondered at is that other rail manufacturers who have not the cream of the trade in the ownership of raw material should submit to having their business limited by a tariff out of which they no longer get anything; and perhaps even more that there should still be any workingmen that are deluded into believing that a tariff of $17.92 a ton is needed to maintain wages in an industry where the total cost of transforming raw material into finished goods averages $7 to $8 a ton and is never more than $10 a ton.

In Providence, R. I., there are four woolen mills which consume more wool than the entire state of Ohio produces. That is why the movement for free wool has become so strong among the manufacturers.

INDIGNANT ABOUT HIDES.

Leather Dealers Rising Against McKinley's Propositions.

A storm of indignation has been aroused among the leather dealers of New York by Mr. McKinley's proposed duty of a cent and a half a pound on hides. The proposition is spoken of as "preposterous," "ridiculous," "monstrous" and "outrageous." There is no division of sentiment among the dealers, Republicans as well as Democrats entering their protests against the measure. Mr. Nelson, of the firm of Palen, Nelson & Co., said: "I went about Boston previous to the presidential election crying protection as a good Republican should. I have seen what the Harrison administration has done, and I am satisfied with my experience with it. I don't want any more protection. I am not a Mugwump in any sense. But I am, after this exhibition of legislation on the part of a committee whose avowed intention was to reduce taxation, a free trader."

What makes this proposed duty entirely characteristic of the Republican party is the fact that the duty comes as the result of pressure from the rich and powerful. It is understood that the "big four" among the Chicago packers, Messrs. Armour, Swift, Lawrence and Hammond, brought all the influence at their command to bear upon the ways and means committee in order to secure this duty. These four men are the greatest among the packers and dressers of beef, and they sell more than 2,000,000 hides a year.

With such promising subjects for fattrying in the exigencies of future campaigns the committee could not do less than heed their demand, especially so since in yielding to it they could make it appear that they were throwing a sop to the farmer. The protective tariff is growing more and more irksome to the farmer, and his loud and frequent complaints have made it necessary for the Republicans to go through with the hocus-pocus of giving him his slice of protection, too.

Almost the whole value of a beef is its flesh, and no one can pretend that the addition of a few cents to the price of the hide will stimulate the cattle raising industry. The big packers will reap large additional profits by this measure; but nineteen-twentieths of the farmers of the country will never feel the difference. Or if they do feel the difference it will be in the increased price of shoes.

Everybody knows how shoes have been cheapened and their quality improved in this country during the past twenty years. Our experiment with free hides has been so gratifying that it would seem utter folly to take a backward step now.

Hides were put on the free list in 1872, and our exportations immediately went up with a bound. Our exports of leather and leather goods last year amounted to $12,228,000, against $9,677,000 in 1888. Last year we exported 10,000,000 pounds more of sole leather than the year before; the exports of boots and shoes showed a gain of 90,000 pairs. This exportation of leather and the manufactures of it has grown up under the stimulus of free hides and of the great expansion of the beef packing business in this country.

When hides were placed on the free list in 1872 there were predictions of ruin in such a center as Gloversville and Johnstown, N. Y. These are twin villages, largely engaged in leather dressing and in glove and mitten making. It is confessed by everybody there that free hides have been the making of these villages.

The only feature about Mr. McKinley's tax on hides which tariff reformers may welcome is that it is so evidently a step backward and against the best interests of the country that it will serve as another valuable object-lesson for the people in the educational campaign against the humbug of protection. The more outrageous protection becomes the sooner it will cure itself.

The Pan-American congress is now approaching its close. Mr. Blaine showed plainly, by his great government excursion last fall to impress the South American delegates with our manufacturing industries, that the congress was to be used to promote our export trade with our southern neighbors. The proposed tax on hides, which is almost prohibitory, will not be viewed by the delegates as a very kindly farewell, and certainly not as a measure which will promote the ends arrived at by Mr. Blaine. Hides are largely shipped to New York by these states south of us in payment for our manufactured articles, and if we force them to sell their hides elsewhere they will also buy their goods elsewhere. We cannot thrust trade from us with one hand and draw it to us with the other, however we may vote subsidies for this purpose.

The efforts of the New England manufacturers to get free coal have been defeated. Mr. McKinley's committee, of course, did not dare to incur the displeasure of the coal monopolists. Thousands of miners in Pennsylvania, nevertheless, are either out of employment or working on half time and less and at very low wages. Reports come from New York that the mine owners are busily taking up recently arrived Hungarians for the anthracite region. These coal monopolists figure in Republican campaign speeches and before congressional committees as the special friends of American labor.

Mr. Phelps and Mr. Kasson, the two Republican commissioners who signed the Samoan treaty, actually gave the South Sea Islanders free trade. Are they not afraid that the savages will have their markets ruinously invaded and made a dumping ground for American and European nations?

In view of Mr. McKinley's blow at our commerce with Canada, what does Mr. Butterworth think now of his beautiful scheme for reciprocity with Canada on a free trade basis? The Canada papers are already saying that the trade of Canada will have to go entirely to England hereafter.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind, testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at.

DR. ALBRASH'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means it controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years.
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates it cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

HINTS ON DRAINAGE.

It may be well to mention a few of the benefits accruing from drainage which are of actual money value to the farmer. These benefits are not hidden away in the soil, but may be seen by any one who will compare a well-drained field with one which is wet and undrained.

First, there is no failure of crops on account of excessive rains. Almost every farmer may put down among his losses the partial or total failure of several acres of land to produce a crop because, during some part of the season, the land was too wet.

Second, the soil is in condition to receive the crop at the proper season of the year, and it begins a healthy growth at once. This will add many dollars to the value of the field each year, and cost no more labor.

Third, the labor which produces a poor crop on undrained land, will produce an excellent one on the same land when properly drained. In this way crops are often doubled on what is called average farm land.

Fourth, by reason of the absence of surplus water in the soil, grain and grass are not "heaved" and frozen out in winter time.

Fifth, whatever fertilizing material is put on the land is made more available for plant food, for the reason that the soil is more porous and not surface-washed, and fertilizers are at once incorporated in the soil. Undecayed matter put upon the soil decays more rapidly and becomes sooner prepared for the use of plants. Fertilizing gases held in the air are carried by the rain into the soil, making it more rich, instead of being washed away or taken with vapor into the air again.

KINDS OF LAND REQUIRING DRAINAGE.

Ponds and sloughs are wholly unfit for cultivation, even in the dryest years, without drainage. Ponds are basins which seem to have been provided by nature for receptacles of surplus water flowing from the surrounding high land, and are reservoirs for the drainage of land which gives the farmer his profits. These ponds are generally covered with aquatic plants, which are very tenacious of life in wet soils, but easily killed when deprived of their natural nutriment by drainage. Sloughs are the natural water-courses of prairie land, being to level land what creeks and rivers are to more rolling and hilly sections. These are often broad and flat, allowing water to spread over rods of valuable land, where by suitable ditches it might be confined to a much narrower space and many acres of valuable land reclaimed.

Flat land under cultivation is usually the first land which directs the farmers' attention to draining. A season which is drier than usual shows to him that such soil, when not too wet, will produce a crop equal to his best fields. On this land the natural drainage is not rapid enough in the spring-time to fit it for the growth of plants. It is generally cultivated when too wet, which causes the soil to become too compact and in time of drought it shrinks and cracks, resulting in the ruin of the crop and re loss of the labor; for the soil is in a worse condition than it was in the spring before the plow was started.

Channels or runs through cultivated land are often common where the land is rolling. Water flows down the slopes and oozes from the banks until these runs are so wet that they rarely produce a crop, and are a great inco venience in cultivating.

An exchange tells of the following sharp swindling operation: Another swindler is getting in his work in some parts of Michigan. The sharper has a double fountain pen which is so arranged that it uses two kinds of ink. One will fade and the other will remain. The sharper writes out an agreement with the farmer using the ink that fades. The unsuspecting granger is then handed the penholder to sign his name, but by a turn of the knob the durable ink flows. By this arrangement the words of the contractor soon disappears, while the signature remains. The sharper then writes out a note for whatever amount he sees fit above the signature, and has the instrument discounted at the local bank.

The year 1889 eclipsed the record as the year of great calamities. But if the year 1890 shall continue as the first three months have begun, it will take the ribbon.

OBITUARY.

Alexander Turner, the subject of this humble tribute, was born in Seneca County, New York, Dec 15th, 1834, and died at his home in Tecumseh, March. 22, 1890. In his early boyhood his parents joined the tide of emigration then setting westward, and settled in the town of Macon, in this County, where the deceased continued to reside until his enlistment. In October, 1863, he enlisted in the army as a private, and served with credit, until rheumatism unfitted him for active duty. After thirteen months' service he received an honorable discharge. On the 14th of December, 1865, he was united in marriage to Mary E. Owen, who survives him. During the same winter he joined the M. E. Church at Ridgeway and retained his connection with that Church at different places until called to join the Church Triumphant. He was also a member of Beers Post, G. A. R., active and zealous in the performance of all his duties, always taka special interest in the welfare of the order. The funeral services were conducted from the M. E. Church in this village on the 25th of March last. The pastor, Rev. J. S. Joslin, officiated. The G. A. R. and W. R. C. organizations attended in a body and also a large congregation of sympathizing neighbors and friends, who followed his remains to the tomb. The deceased was a kind and loving husband, always striving to make his home pleasant and happy. He leaves a wife to mourn his departure. It will be a sad blow to her, but she can find consolation in the thought that her earthly loss is his eternal gain.

RESOLUTIONS BY BEERS POST.

The pale horse and his rider have again passed through and broken our ranks. Another trusted comrade has been smitten and disappeared from our field.

Alexander Turner was born in Steuben County, New York, in 1835. His parents removed to Michigan when he was a child. He entered the army in 1863, where he contracted the disease which terminated in his death. He was married to Mrs. Mary E. Owen in 1865, who now mourns his loss. He has been a resident of Tecumseh for the past twelve years.

Our departed comrade was for six years a faithful member of this post. His genial manner and fraternal spirit endeared him to his comrades and served to strenghen us in the exercise of the spirit of fraternity among ourselves. His devotion to our glorious flag was an inspiration to our own spirit of loyalty to our country and his grave will ever be to us an altar of patriotism.

Resolved, That we deeply mourn his loss as a comrade and are not unmindful that in his death we have lost a good citizen and a true Christian.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved widow in her great affliction our sincere sympathy and commend her to the care of our Heavenly Father who careth for all.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to our afflicted sister, published in the local papers, and preserved in the records of this Post.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C., also to the many friends and neighbors who so kindly sympathized with and assisted us during the sickness and death of our beloved husband and brother.

MINE.

Among the many letters of condolence received by Mrs. M. P. Brown since the death of little Lurette were the following lines from Mrs. Alice M. Slayton. Years ago she copied them from a source now forgotten. They are so beautiful and appropriate that we have obtained permission to publish them.

I closely held within my arms
A jewel rare.
Never had one so rich and pure
Engaged my care.
'Twas my own, my precious jewel;
God gave it me;
'Twas mine—who else could care for it
So tenderly?

But the dear Master came one day
My gem to take;
"I cannot let it go," I cried,
My heart would break!"
Nay, but the Master came for it
To bear above,
To deck his royal diadem—
He comes in love.

But, Master, it is my treasure—
My jewel rare;
I'll safely guard and keep it pure,
And very fair.
"If thou keepest my gem," He said,
"It may be lost;
The threshold of my home, no thief
Has ever crossed.

And where the heart's rich treasure is
The heart will be;
Your jewel will be safe above—
Gone before thee."
He said these words and gazed
With pitying look,
While in his arms of love
My gem he took.

Close to my heart that morn I held—
Tears falling fast—
An empty casket—the bright gem
Was safe at last.
Master, Thou mayst keep my own,
For it is Thine;
Safe in the house not made with hands,
'Tis Thine and mine.

EASTER SERVICES.

Easter Sunday in Tecumseh was a beautiful Sabbath day,—mild, warm and pleasant. The religious exercises incident to the day were more elaborate than usual, and were marked by a large attendance and much interest.

At St. Peter's church the regular morning service from the church ritual was recited at 6 o'clock a. m. Notwithstanding the early hour the church was filled with worshipers. At 10:30 the usual morning services for Easter took place, with a sermon. At 4 o'clock p. m. a special session of the Sunday-school was held and an Easter service rendered. At its close badges and Easter eggs were distributed among the pupils. The chancel and choir rail were decorated with potted plants and flowers. All the services of the day were deeply impressive, and especially adapted to Eastertide.

The M. E. church was beautifully ornamented with flowers and plants, the rostrum being transformed into a veritable floral bower. The special services here were held at the regular morning hour, and consisted of an Easter concert by the Sunday-school. Liberal selections were made from a special Easter service, together with other music and recitations. We append the program as given:

Closing chorus and Benediction.

Deafness Can't be Cured

By local applications, as they can not reach the deceased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

She Tells Her Friends.

GENTLEMEN:—The Zoa Phora which you sent me some time ago, greatly benefitted me, so much so that I have been visiting some who I know need it, and telling them about it. I used to live in Michigan until 5 years ago, and I know the reputation of Zoa-Phora there. That is how I came to send so far for it. I now know its worth by my own experience. I live near the Normal School here and room a great many lady sudents. I learn of a great many who need just such a friend as Zoa-Phora. I never lose an opportunity to recommend it to them, because you see I believe it will do all that you claim for it.

Yours respectfully.

Navigation on Lake Huron will be opened on Monday, April 14th.

The April Magazine of American History is notable for the timeliness of its topics and the clever style in which they are treated. The opening paper by the editor conducts the reader into a fresh and untrodden field, and no one who glances over the first page will be inclined to lay the periodical aside without making the complete tour of South America. It is rarely that so much of information and suggestion is condensed within so brief a space. "Our South American Neighbors" has for its text the bright new book of travels by Frank Vincent, but the article is in no sense confined to the modern outlook: the picturesque past is brought into view with descriptions and illustrations, glimpses are given of the ancient Peruvians and other early peoples. This great historical monthly, the only one of its kind in the country, and the best in the world, grows more and more popular every year, exerting an educational and healthful influence in every branch of literature and study. The six departments of which no mention is here made for want of space, are worth in themselves the entire subscription price, $5 a year. Published at 743 Broadway.

THE TOWNSHIP ELECTIONS.

The Township election came rather later than usual this year, as the first Monday of April fell on the seventh day. A light vote was polled, and there were three tickets in the field. Although considerable hustling was done by the friends of the respective candidates yet the majority of the voters took the election quietly, went and voted and then went about their usual avocations. Personally considered the tickets were all composed of excellent men, and hence there was nothing to incite people to extra exertion, as the township was certain to obtain good officials however the election might go. The result is somewhat mixed, although the Democrats gathered in the four leading officers, while the Republicans captured School Inspector, the Board of Review and Drain Commissioner. The honors were easy on constables. The Democrats have Supervisor and the Republicans both members of the Board of Review. Laying aside all political bias this is a very equitable arrangement. Below we give the result in detail with the number of votes given to each candidate. The first name under each office is democrat, second republican, third prohibition.

IN OTHER TOWNS.

In the neighboring towns the vote was a light one and there was considerable shaking up of the former status. Clinton elected the Democratic ticket without opposition, as there was no other ticket in the field. Franklin did the same by the Republican ticket, as the Democrats failed to come to the scratch. Raisin elected the entire Democratic by good majorities. Ridgeway flopped and elected nearly the whole Republican ticket, the Democrats getting two or three of the minor offices. Macon had four tickets. The Republicans carried most of the offices by small majorities, the Democrats getting treasurer and highway commissioner. The Prohibitionist vote was 21 and the Farmers Alliance ticket got 11 votes. The proposition for a new town hall was carried. The Democrats cleaned the platter in Adrian, electing the entire city ticket, and the same party has made a considerable gain on the Board of Supervisors.

A MAN OF PEACE.

BISMARCK IS NOT A "MAN OF BLOOD AND IRON"

As Shown by a Recounting of His Public Career—British Holidays—The George Davies Decision—European Labor News, Etc.

[Copyrighted by the United Press.]

LONDON, April 7.—Herr Woermann, a long friend of Prince Bismarck, in an interview, said that the allusion to Bismarck as the "Man of Blood and Iron" is altogether unjustified, as the whole political career of the ex-chancellor shows him to have been a man of peace. "Prince Bismarck's experiences at the Diet of Frankfort," Herr Woermann continued, "convinced him that there was not room enough in Germany for both Austria and Prussia. It became his object to turn out Austria, and he never concealed his intention to accomplish it. He was ready to make a bargain so long as he was required to concede nothing essential. When a bargain on these terms was not to be had he accepted a conflict, for which he knew Prussia was ready, and the result justified his foresight. In the settlement after Sadowa, he exerted self-restraint, which was perhaps his greatest achievement. The soldiers were against him, for they trusted their strength. Bismarck, looking far ahead, advocated moderation as the right way to secure the future good will of temporary enemies. In this way he gained over South Germany within a year or two and Austria a few years later.

"The conflict with France was held to be inevitable after the defeat of Austria. The military leaders were able to take it up at any time. Indeed, the general staff was ready even in 1866 to enter Vienna, at the risk of having the French army on their flanks. But Bismarck preferred moderation. In 1868, when the Luxemberg dispute arose, the military administrations were for accepting the French challenge. Bismarck was for a compromise if it could be effected honorably. He held that a war postponed may be a war prevented. In 1870 the conditions were different. The challenge was given to Germany in a manner which left no alternative. The theory that Bismarck had conjured it up by some deep laid plot is a fiction of his enemies. In the work that followed, of giving political form to German unity, the chancellor kept the most moderate program. When the terms of peace with France came to be settled Bismarck was again for moderation. The annexation of Alsace-Lorraine was forced upon him by the soldiers and by the public opinion created by the historical school.

"His chief object since the treaty of Frankfort has been to keep the peace while consolidating the power and influence of Germany. He has never taken a narrow view of the means to secure this end. In 1878 he made every possible concession to Russia. When he afterwards saw that he had gained nothing by this course except an uncertain peace, he made the alliance with Austria and Italy which still exists. This enabled him to weather the very dangerous crisis occasioned by the union of the two Bulgarias. It is the simple truth that for twenty years Prince Bismarck has been a power working for peace."

The German emperor has in view far more sweeping legislation than the ex chancellor would have tolerated, and will use the resources of the state for the benefit of the working classes on a scale hitherto untried, thus outbidding the Social Democratic agitators for the support of the masses. Such a program will not be acceptable to the well to-do classes, who feel that the pocket of the state is their pocket, and that what is given to the "have nots" must be contributed by those who have.

Preparations are already in active progress at the Champs de Mars, Paris, for the installation, in May, for the new Societe Nationale des Beaux arts. M. Messionier is displaying, notwithstanding his advanced age, even more than his usual energy in preparing for the event and seems determined that his devoted adherents among the painters and sculpters of France shall not have cause to complain of his having led them into a quagmire. He will himself exhibit no less than ten new works, including one of the largest and most important of his later performances, "Napoleon at Jena," in which the emperor is seen on horseback on a in the foreground, surrounded by his staff, following with concentrated interest the tremendous battle going on in the distance. M. Theodore Ribot will also be represented by ten important canvasses, among which are "Au Sermon," "Une Flamande," "La Femme Aux Lunettes" and a portrait of Madame Ribot. The celebrated Flemish painter, M. Alfred Stevens, who has not been seen at the saloon for years, will also exhibit in the galleries of the Societe Nationale. It will thus be seen that the salon, despite its advantages of position, will have a dangerous competitor.

The British people are generally engaged in holiday making, the season of vacation having begun on April 3rd, and will last until April 8th. Meanwhile the Crystal Palace and the suburban resorts on the Thames are thronged with visitors daily. The weather has been delightfully summerlike, and everybody who could do so has taken advantage of it.

The decision of Home Secretary Matthews respiting George Davies and permitting the sentence of the court to stand in the case of the elder brother Richard, has caused a general murmur of dissatisfaction at its injustice. The action of the Home Secretary is everywhere regarded as a very weak compromise in the face of the public pressure brought to bear in behalf of both boys on the strength of the extenuating circumstances attending their killing of their father. It was almost absolutely proven at the trial that the fatal blows were struck by the younger brother, George, yet his life is spared, while the less guilty son is deemed. The foreman of the jury which found the boys guilty has addressed a personal letter to Mr. Matthews appealing to him to at least grant a respite in the case of Richard Pending the submission of further evidence attesting the validity of his claims to clemency.

The employes of the Government Arsenal at Woolwich, numbering about 10,000, have formally protested against the present scale of wages and threaten to strike. They receive much less than similar workmen in private employment. The metropolitan police force are also talking of striking over the question of pensions.

Councillor Striegan, of Breslau, was fired at through a window of a railway carriage at that place today by unknown. The councillor had just taken his seat in the carriage when the shots crashed through the glass and grazed his head. His assailants made their escape in the crowd.

A Banker's Failure.

LONDON April 7.—Steinmints, a leading banker of Nuremberg, has been obliged to suspend business owing to the failure of some important enterprises in which he became involved. The amount of his liabilities is large but statement cannot be secured.

LIKE A CLAM.

An Indigestible Article on the Fisheries Question.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The state department is like a clam. It is practically shut up. The officials who are easy of access are not at liberty to say anything for publication, and Secretary Blaine, who is, is not to be seen. An attempt to get an opinion on the fisheries uuestion, or the seal fishery question in Behring Sea, or the reciprocity negotiations with South American republics, have been futile. The state department officials will not even admit that such negotiations are in progress. They have even gone so far as to refuse to affirm that Mr. Charles Tupper was in Washington, when he could be seen any day on the steret, going back and forth from Secretary Blaine's residence, only half a square distant. In fact, but little or no information of public interest is given out from the state departments, and Secretary Blaine, since the death of Walker Blaine, who was the medium of communication between the public and the secretary, has lost, in the estimation of many of his warmest friends, much reputation by his secretness about affairs of which the public had a right to be informed.

THE CREWE MURDER.

Will the Queen Let the Two Davis Brothers Hang Tomorrow?

LONDON, April 7.—The popular feeling on the Crewe murder case runs very high, and there is no other subject so much talked about. It is generally believed that the two Davis brothers will be hanged on Tuesday despite the enormous size of the petition which has been forwarded to the queen, at Aux-les-Bains, for a reprieve. The action of Home Secretary Matthews has not satisfied the public mind, nor could it be expected to do so, since the brothers were equally guilty, if guilty at all. The fact that in attacking their victim was actuated by the determination to protect their mother, is the circumstance which aroused public sympathy in their behalf, and leads many people to deny that they are guilty of any crime at all.

Go-As-You-Please.

PITTSBURG, PA., April 7.—At 12:15 o'clock at night one of the largest and most evenly balanced fields of men ever made in a six days go-as-you-please race was started in a 142 hour pedestrian contest at the Grand Central rink in this city. The contest is under the management of Harry Davis. There will be 26 contestants as follows: Herty, Guerrero, Noremac, Hart, Moore, Cartright, Golden, Conners, Howarth, Hegelman, Day, Haran, Burns, Nolan, "Leper," Hughes, Crazier, Tracey, Glick, Fox, Igoe, Gibbons, Sullivan, "the Bonanza Ghost," Barclay, Hobbeke and Taylor.

Dunlap On Time.

PITTSBURG, PA., April 7.—President Mimick has received a telegram from Fred Dunlap of last year's team, stating that he was satisfied with the terms offered and would report on Tuesday to the National League club. Dunlap has been coquettidg with both leagues for some time. However, the offer of the Pittsburg club of $3,700 caught him. He was offered $5,000 in cash to sign a three year's contract, but it is not known whether he has accepted this or not.

$5,000 OF JEWELS

Stolen From the American Consul in London.

LONDON, April 7.—The hotel room of the American consul at Planen was entered a night or two ago by burglars and a jewel casket valued at $5,000 was stolen. The casket has since been found, but the contents had been abstracted. There is no clue to the thieves.

A Singular Strike.

LONDON, April 7.—There is a singular strike in progress at the popular Savoy hotel, on the Thames embankment. A new manager was recently appointed who was unlucky enough to offend that powerful personage, the chef. The monarch of the kitchen struck work, and his sixty cooks followed example. The waiters joined the strike, and next came the other attaches.

CORPSES VOTE

Under the Manipulation of a Jersey City Election Board.

NEW YORK, April 6.—The investigation into the alleged frauds in connection with the recent election in Jersey City has resulted in the issuance of warrants for the arrest of the members of the election board for the First assembly district of that city. The investigation has developed a remarkable variety and extent of fraud. Votes were cast in the names of many persons long since dead, or who had moved away from the places mentioned in the registry, and ballot boxes were stuffed in the most flagrant manner.

INSTANTLY KILLED.

An Explosion in a Powder Mill—Two Lives Lost.

NEW YORK, April 6.—A terrific explosion occurred about 2 o'clock yesterday in the powder mill at Bay Chester, near Bartow, N. Y. Two men, unknown, were instantly killed, and houses in the vicinity for some distance were damaged. The railroad station at Bay Chester was also damaged.

PROHIBITION WINS.

It Will Stand in Iowa for Two Years Longer.

DES MOINES, IOWA, April 6.—The House by a vote of 51 to 49 has decided to indefinitely postpone the local option bill. Every Republican and Ewart, Independent, voted for the postponement. This settles the fact that Prohibition will continue in Iowa at least two years.

You will find it on the News Stands To-Day.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January, A. D. 1884, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife, of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan, of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A. D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages, on page 591, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1885, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 20th day of January, A. D., 1890, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in Liber 118 of Mortgages, on page 669; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-one and 12-100 Dollars ($1751.12) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that, by virtue of said power of sale, and the statutes of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now, as aforesaid, due and owing on said mortgage, together with interest to accrue thereon, and the costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Thirty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the 21st day of April, A. D. 1890, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan, known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5) town five (5) south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

Dated Jan. 23d, 1890.

St. Jacobs Oil
Cures
SIMPLY AND PERFECTLY.
BRUISES, SWELLINGS, CUTS, &c.
A bruise is a contusion; swellings are inflammations; cuts and wounds are alike disturbances to natural action, through which the veins are clogged, circulation impeded, secretion sets in and pains ensue. Nature is the patient—it tries to right itself and pain indicates. Bruises and swellings need a soothing influence, but in cuts and wounds hardly anyone would pour a liquid remedy into a gaping wound. So soon as nature brings the parts together, almost at once,
St. Jacobs Oil soothes, clears away obstructions, heals the injured tissues and restores. Used according to directions, it helps nature and cures

I'D LIKE TO TRY.

If I had gold might it not be
A useless burden and a care?
And might it not convey to me
A sense of sorrow and despair?
Tho' possible wealth would not swell
The happiness of such as I;
I might not play the rich man well,
But yet I wouldn't mind to try.

If some day fame should hunt me up
And sing my praises everywhere,
Would joy or sorrow fill my cup,
Would skies be overcast or fair?
Would I not faint to see my name
In burning letters placed on high?
I'm modest, quite, but just the same
I feel as though I'd like to try.

If some fair maid should all her love
Upon my lonely heart bestow,
As gentle stars that shine above
Look down upon the earth below,
Would life perfection seem to me,
Or would I sometimes sadly sigh
From wedded bondage to be free?
Well, anyhow, I'd like to try.

AN OLD RIVER GAMBLER.

Incidents in the Life of "Daddy" Reagan, the Sport.

Fortunes Won at Cards and Lost in Speculation—He Fought for a Girl Who Became His Wife—Her Sad End.

The members of the sporting fraternity in St. Louis have already raised a large sum of money towards a monument to "Daddy" Reagan. When he died in a hospital recently the career of one of the most famous American gamblers came to an end.

Sam B. Reagan was born in Russellville, Ky., sixty-two years ago. His father was a clergyman and was prominent in his section. Sam was the eldest son and was well educated for a boy of those days in that somewhat unsettled region. His father was a man of some wealth, and among his possessions were several thoroughbred Kentucky horses. In these animals Sam found his greatest delight, and as a boy he soon became a clever horseman and noted throughout the vicinity as a daring rider and an expert judge of horseflesh.

It was but natural that his taste should turn towards the turf, and before he was out of his teens he had adopted the life of a professional turfman. Shrewd at a bargain, he is said to have made several thousand dollars with the few horses he owned before he had attained his majority. But bad luck came to him soon after and he was soon seen at the gaming-tables. When twenty-two years old he linked his fate as a gambler with an old professional named Morton. He and Morton ran up and down on the Mississippi river steamers, occasionally getting over on the Red river boats, and many adventures befell "Dad" during all those years. Back in 1852 "Dad" came to St. Joseph, then the gateway to the Far West.

The first story told of "Dad" is of a game of poker he had with a man named Edgeton, a "fly" gambler, on the steamer La Belle Creole while on a run to New Orleans. "Dad" was a "square sport." He never stooped to trickery, while the man Edgeton was directly the opposite in his methods of play. There was a big jack-pot, and every one but Edgeton and "Dad" had dropped out. The amount of money in the pot is not stated, but it was sufficient to excite both men. "Dad" had a full hand, and kept raising each raise made by his opponent, who sat opposite to him. There was a call, and "Dad" lay down his hand, while Edgeton dropped four aces on the table, and started to rake in the pot. As he did so, a fifth ace was exposed in his left hand. Quick as a flash "Dad" whipped a revolver from his pocket and, firing, knocked the illegitimate piece of pasteboard from the gambler's hand. Then discharging his Colt's revolver twice in rapid succession, he pierced both of Edgeton's ears with a bullet. The wounded man drew an old-fashioned pistol and fired, the ball grazing "Dad's" brow and injuring him seriously. He reached over the table, and taking the money and chips, put the winnings into his pocket and then fell to the floor of the cabin unconscious.

In 1858, on the Crescent City, a planter named Ross, living near Knoxville, Tenn., was on his way up the river from New Orleans, where he had been selling some of his products. He had with him between $18,000 and $20,000 in cash, and got into a game with "Dad." Ross had been drinking heavily and was in no condition to play the cards. He was reckless and ready to bet his pile on a pair of deuces. But such men were considered the legitimate prey of the river gamblers, and "Dad" was not reluctant in pulling in the shekels of the inebriated planter. In an hour's time "Dad" had every cent of the $20,000, and then Ross realized what he had done. There was no getting the money back. On the steamers money won at poker was as square as money made by the legal sale of property. Ross arose from the table, his eyes bloodshot and his face haggard.

"Well, old man," said he, "you have now every cent I have in the world, and I have a wife, a mother and several children. That money was to pay off the debt on my plantation, but it is gone and they must starve. But you won it square and I'm not kicking. Say good-bye to them for me;" and as he said these last words he put his hand around to his back pocket.

"Dad" and others, divining his intention, sprang forward, but too late. A bullet had crashed through his skull and he sank down on the floor dead. "Dad" had his body taken to an undertaker's at Memphis and accompanied the corpse to the plantation. He attended the funeral, and Bill Harding—an old friend of "Dad's"—says, gave the widow every cent he had won from Ross. Then he went back to Memphis, caught the next boat and continued gaming.

It must have been about this time—1858—that Reagan met the girl that he afterwards made his wife. Like all the other incidents of his life, it was a romantic meeting, courtship, marriage and parting. According to Bill Harding—and Bill is the only sport left who knows the story of "Dad's" life, he met the girl in this way: It was in a house in New Orleans that they first saw each other. She was a French girl—possibly a Creole—and was young and pretty. The night they met was her first night away from home. She could not have been more than twenty years of age, and Bill, who knew her, says he never saw a more modest, timid or beautiful woman in his life.

A man made an improper remark to her and the girl cried out in her shame and mortification. "Dad" sprang forward, and, knocking down the man who had his arms about her, stood to protect her from further insults. The man arose and he and his friends attacked "Dad," and a desperate fight ensued from which Reagan emerged victorious, although suffering from a knife wound. That night he married her, and the next day they boarded a steamer and went up the river. "Dad" idolized her and she worshiped him. On the trip down, however, the parting came. They had a quarrel, and "Dad" cast aspersions regarding her character before he made her his wife. Broken-hearted, she ran to the side of the boat and threw herself into the river. Her body was found floating down the stream. On the fourth finger of the left hand was a plain gold ring, and it is this ring that "Dad," as he lingered between life and death in the hospital, twirled so constantly.

"The biggest game 'Dad' was ever in," said old Bill Harding, "was in St. Louis in 1869, when the old fellow carried away $35,000 in cash and checks and some $14,000 in I O U's and promissory notes. I don't know all about that sitting nor how he struck it so rich, but I do know that it was so. A number of the most prominent men in St. Louis were in the game, one of them named Greene, I believe, who was largely interested in the Granite Mountain Mines and very wealthy. One man, Smithers, I think, was his name, had paid 'Dad' a check for $6,000, and then had gone to the bank early in the morning, and stopped payment on it. When 'Dad' came to cash it, of course it was no good, and 'Dad' was mad. He went around to Smithers's office, and confronting him, tore the check into a hundred pieces and threw them into his face. Then reaching into his vest pocket he extracted five $100 bills, and tossing them on to Smithers' desk, exclaimed: 'Here, my poor man, take these and buy dinner;' and stalked out of the office. Smithers sent the bills back the next day, and 'Dad' gave them to a missionary society in St. Louis."

Back in the fifties "Dad" made St. Joseph his headquarters. It was during the gold fever in California, and of course the city was filled with adventurous spirits. The one hotel—that is, of any pretensions—was the Pacific House, which is still standing, and this is perhaps one of the most famous hotels in the land to-day. On the second floor of the Pacific House "Dad" and a partner, named Cummings—"Deacon" Cummings he was called—ran a gambling joint. Among "Dad's" patrons were two of the most famous characters of early days—the Thompson brothers—Colonel Broaddus Thompson and "Old Jeff" Thompson, or the Fire-Eating Tarantula, as he was often called. Jeff was the man who tore down the stars and stripes from the court-house there in '61, and when hedged in with his regiment by the Yankees wrote orders, like Napoleon, in blank verse and doggerel.

Colonel Broaddus and "Dad" were warm friends. Broaddus would borrow a few dollars from some one who didn't know him well, buy a drink for the crowd and then steer straight for "Dad's" rooms, where the chances were he would lose every cent in a few minutes. It was Broaddus who first sprung the joke that has been attributed to Senator Vest, Senator Stewart and about every living statesman, and will be attributed to future public characters probably. Broaddus had been sitting in a game, lost all he had, and went down into the hotel office. His long beard was of a delicate ecru color, being saturated with tobacco-juice. A friend said to him:

"Colonel, how did you get all that tobacco-juice on your beard?"

"By expectoration, sir; by expectoration."

"And was it necessary to expectorate in your whiskers?"

"Yes, sir, it was."

"Could you not have spit in the cuspadores?"

"No, sir. I did not dare turn my head long enough in that game, sir."

"Dad" was a very nervy man and strong as a lion. In those days there was a notorious character called "Platte Purchase Pete." He was born and raised in this section of Missouri, and was a typical Western terror. He was a terror simply because he had abnormally well-developed vocal organs, and no one dared to dispute his right to the title of reigning terror of St. Joe until he ran up against "Dad." A game was in progress one night and "Platte Purchase Pete" walked into the rooms and began to create a disturbance. The players paid little attention to him, and this irritated Pete. Walking up to "Dad," he reached down and, taking up the pile of chips that stood before the veteran gambler, stepped back a few paces and hurled them at him. "Dad" laid down the cards which he was dealing, and slowly walking up to Pete, grasped him by the back of the neck and ran him towards the window. Lifting the six-foot terror, he opened the window and dropped him out. The fall was probably sixteen feet, and a broken leg was the result. Pete was so mortified by this disgrace that as soon as he recovered from the effects of the fall he started West and never returned.

"Dad" visited Asia, South America and Mexico. In '72 he came back to St. Joseph and proved himself to be worth $95,000. He invested heavily in Kansas and Nebraska lands, but his investments proved disastrous. He tried to found a town in Kansas, but chose a poor site and lost money. In '78 he left again, but came back in '80 and opened a big saloon—the handsomest in the Southwest. He put every cent he had into this place, but it was no go and he was left almost a beggar. Bad luck claimed him then and never relinquished its hold.

When old Daddy died, about the last human relic of the early river days passed away.—N. Y. World.

THE WIDOW OF NAIN.

LESSON II, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 13.

Text of the Lesson, Luke vii, 11-18—Commit Verses 14-16—Golden Text, Luke vii, 16—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

11. "And it came to pass the day after, that He went into a city called Nain." He had been at Capernaum, where His soul had been greatly refreshed by the faith of a Gentile, a Roman centurion, leading him to say, "I have not found so great faith, no; not in Israel," and to look forward to the time of the kingdom when many who were far off shall be found there, and many who thought themselves entitled to the kingdom shall be cast out (see Matt. viii, 10-13). It is not without purpose that this reference to the kingdom is found only in the kingdom gospel (Matthew) and omitted by Luke; but Luke does mention the "great faith" (v. 9), and whether found in Jew or Gentile it is this that gladdens the heart of Jesus and brings forth the "As thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee." Lord, give us such a faith as this.

12. "Now when He came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out." Only here, in all Scripture, is this city mentioned, but it is forever made memorable by this meeting of the Prince of Life and Light and the Prince of Darkness who has the power of death (Acts iii, 15; Eph. vi, 12; Heb. ii, 14). The Son of God was manifested that He might destroy the works of the devil (I John iii, 8), and when He has gathered from this present world His elect company of associate rulers He will then reign till He hath put all enemies under His feet: the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death (I Cor. xv, 25, 26).

"The only son of his mother, and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her." The little girl whom Jesus raised to life was an only daughter (Luke viii, 42), and Lazarus seems to have been an only brother.

13. "And when the Lord saw her, He had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not." In one company the center of attraction was the Lord of Life and Glory; in the other, this poor, desolate, broken hearted widow. The two now meet, and from the Fountain of Life into the heart of the desolate flow the all powerful words, "Weep not." So He also said in the house of Jairus (Luke ix, 52); and to Mary after the resurrection He said, "Why weepest thou?" (John xx, 15.) Yet He Himself wept at the grave of Lazarus and on the mount of olives and in the garden of Gethsemane (John xi, 35; Luke xix, 41; Heb. v, 7). When he weeps it is because of sin either in its present or future results; when He says "Weep not" it is because of what He is as the Resurrection and the Life, and what He is able and willing to do. A "Weep not" from a helpless fellow being is often a vain word, and almost seems oftimes like mockery; but a "Weep not" from one who has power to remove the cause of the weeping is a powerful and welcome word. We may fancy how quickly the tears were dried and all eyes fixed on Him. Let us keep our eyes on Him while we wait for the time when right here on this earth, made into a new earth, there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying (Rev. xxi, 4).

14. "And He came and touched the bier: and they that bare him stood still." To hear the words and see the power of God we must stop and be still. It was when God saw that Moses turned aside to see that He called unto him out of the bush. Israel at the Red sea had to stand still in order to see the salvation of Jehovah.

"And He said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise." Now when all is still and all eyes are upon Him He utters just four words (in the Greek), but what power and meaning there is in them; and all because of Him who uttered them. They are the words of Him who spake and it was done, who commanded and it stood fast (Ps. xxxiii, 6-9), by whose word the Heavens were made and all the host of them by the breath of His mouth. Observe the "I say unto thee" which He uses so often, and in the sermon on the mount just fourteen times. Compare it with the many hundred times repeated "Thus saith the Lord" of the prophets, and note its significance. The word "arise" signifies to awake as from sleep (see Matt. viii, 26; xvii, 7), and is used in reference to those who rose from the dead after His resurrection (Matt. xxvii, 52).

15. "And He that was dead sat up and began to speak." Life, and health, and speech from the Prince of Life, all unmerited, all of grace, and all by His word in the power of the Spirit. The words which He speaks are Spirit and Life, and he that hears and believes hath everlasting life, and is passed from death unto life. The hour is coming when all that are in their graves shall hear His voice (the same voice) and shall come forth, some to life and some to condemnation. Blessed are those who now hear and live that they may come forth with the righteous at the beginning of the hour, and not be among those who shall not rise till the end of the hour, or the thousand years (John vi, 63; v, 24-29; Rev. xx, 5). It says that he began to speak; will some one explain why so many who profess to have received life in Christ have nothing to say for Him? Must we conclude that, like Zacharias, they are dumb because of unbelief? (Luke i, 20.)

"And He delivered him to his mother." Is there not here a hint, as in the resurrection of the little girl and Lazarus, of the reunion of families in the resurrection? And while there shall then be neither marrying nor giving in marriage, are we not by these facts, and by I Thess. ii, 19, taught to expect in some measure a reunion of those who in families or in service have been united on earth?

16. "And there came a fear on all: and they glorified God, saying, That a great prophet is risen up among us; and, That God hath visited his people." They may have thought of the resurrections through Elijah and Elisha, and possibly have remembered these words: "I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord" (Mal. iv, 5), or some of the promises of visitation for deliverance and restoration, as Isa. xxiv, 22, 23; Ezek. xxxviii, 8; Zeph. ii, 7, etc. The two companies have now a common center, the woman and her son and all their friends have joined the disciples and much people who followed Jesus, and together they glorify God as seen in Him. This was the great object of Jesus in all He said and did, and in His last prayer He is able to say triumphantly, "I have glorified thee on the earth; I have finished the work which Thou gavest me to do" (John xvii, 4). Paul testifies that God chose him to reveal His Son in him, and he was also able to say "They glorified God in me" (Gal. i, 16, 24). If we would only yield ourselves wholly to God, making these three mottoes heartily our own "Not pleasing self, not my own will, not my own glory" (Rom. xv, 3; John vi, 38; viii, 50), then surely God would reveal His Son in us, and people would glorify God.

17. "And this rumor of Him went forth throughout all Judæa, and throughout all the region round about." That is about equal to saying "from Dan and Beersheba," or throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Their Business Booming.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at C. A. Wright & Co's Drug Store as their giving away to their customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable article from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size $1. Every bottle warranted.

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidney, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles should remember that no other remedy in the world will so spedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

THE STANDARD.
HENRY GEORGE, Editor and Proprietor.
A SIXTEEN PAGE WEEKLY.
A Fearless Exponent of Principles and a Weekly Record of Important Facts Affecting Social Problems and Rational Politics.
Interesting to all, and indispensible to the student of political principles and the great social problems of our time.
THE STANDARD advocates The Single Tax, which means the abolition of all taxes on labor or the products of labor; that is to say, the abolition of all taxes save one tax levied on the value of land irrespective of improvements.
Free Trade, not tariff reform, but REAL free trade; that is, as perfect freedom of trade with the whole world as now exists between the States of our Union.
Ballot Reform, no humbug envelope system, but the real Australian system, the first requisite of which is the exclusive use at elections of official ballots, furnished by the State, and prepared and cast by the voter in compulsory secrecy.
Terms: One year, $2.50; six months, 1.25.
Payable in advance. Sample copies sent free on application.
For the convenience of those who wish to inform themselves as to the general principles, we will send on receipt of a two cent stamp, three tracts: "The American Farmer," by Henry George; "Farmers and the Single Tax," by Thomas L. Shearman; and "The Case Plainly Stated," by H. F. King.

Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., APRIL 10, 1890

Charlie Schular is clerking for Brown & Kishpaugh.

Wm. Stansfield of Jackson is visiting friends in the village.

Miss Libbie Kirchgessner of Tecumseh, was home over Sunday.

David Goodrich is clerking for A. W. Muir in the meat market.

Chas. Koernig is working for A. B. VanDeMark in the hardware store.

Dolph Hankle of Milwaukee is visiting friends in Clinton and Bridgewater.

Miss Price returned Monday morning from Jackson, where she spent her vacation.

Mr. C. Staffel, of Buffalo, N. Y., was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Fisher, over Sunday.

L. W. Kimball visited Lawton, Three Rivers and other towns from Friday until Tuesday.

B. C. Ellis received a telegram Saturday, saying his sister was very sick. Ben took the noon train for Hillsdale.

M. L. Calkins, in consequence of C. S. Burroughs returning to town, must vacate the latter's house and has rent the Danforth Keyes property.

Mrs. Grace Smith accompanied her sister, Mrs. Mann to her home in Newton, Iowa, Monday. Mrs. Smith expects to be gone till November.

Mrs. Chas. Johnson of Memphis, Tenn. arrived in town last Friday. She was called here by the illness of her mother, Mrs. E. F. Muir, who is reported as failing.

Wednesday evening occurred the marriage of Mr. Oscar Halladay of this town, to Miss Addie Avery of Saline. We extend congratulations and hope for their prosperity and future happiness.

Mr. and Mrs. Stansfield, former residents of Clinton, now of South Bend, Ind., have been visiting in town for the past week. Mrs. A. W. Muir and Mrs. Ray Vest, are daughters.

The eighth entertainment of our course will be given Friday night by Miss Olive Thompson, an impersonator of great reputation. She comes highly recommended from the east.

Chas. Sivers has been breaking a colt, and while driving past the school house Tuesday, the colt became tired, threw itself on the ground and tiped Charlie out. No damage done.

Last week's Local contains a communication giving the origin of our village name. Although the story is old to the older residents, it will be new to many of our younger people.

Chas. S. Burroughs writes from Kokomo that he has sold his interest in the Cuba Chemical Co., manufacturers of Cuba Chewing Gum, and will return to Clinton as soon as he can pack up.

The Easter social at Town Hall, Saturday evening, given by Mrs. Ewing's Sunday school class of the Baptist church, was well attended and a very pleasant affair. The supper very fine; receipts $11.00.

Fay Palmer, who left home and board sometime ago in company with Will Tolton, and without his parent's consent, appeared at the parental tree last Monday, and was immediately received once more into the confidence of the family. No doubt the fattest rooster was slain, etc.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Taylor of Franklin, returned Tuesday from a seven week's sojourn at Orion. While there Mrs. Taylor had a large cancer removed from her left breast, which took away a portion of two ribs. She is rapidly regaining her strength, and she is likely to recover her health wholly within a reasonable time.

An individual appeared on our streets last Tuesday, and informed the small crowd, which he called together by a little loud talk, that he was an Indian doctor. The one qualification? seemingly, was his long hair. He claims to have spent forty-eight years on the western plains, and before leaving the village, will give specimens of his skill in catching horses, shooting with revolvers, bow and arrow, etc. He will remain this week.

Probably few persons in the place know how Clinton came by its name. Let us give the late George Lazell's account of it, and the late J. S. Kies gave the same origin. In the very early time of its settlement the men got together—there were only a few—and they hit upon this plan: each one was to write a name on a slip of paper and then compare notes. Capt. Kies, father of J. S. Kies, was a great admirer of DeWitt Clinton, governor of the State of New York, and the projector of the Erie canal. When the names were read over, Kies had the name of Clinton on his slip, and all the others immediately adopted the name. The children of this place may remember this origin of the name, and tell it to their children's children, even to the third and fourth generation.

The Ames cheese factory, two miles north of Hudson, will start up on Monday, April 14th.

Hillsdale is a favorite town for tramps. Fourteen stopped off from one freight train last week.

April is the last oyster month. After this month the bivalves will take a rest until next September.

The entertainment given by the Higgins Concert Company at Clinton and Hudson is highly spoken of by the local press.

The Manchester Enterprise says: "A number of persons who were to pay their subscriptions on the first of April 'April fooled us.' Don't put it off much longer, we need the money."

The Breeze, a very neat paper published by the Tecumseh high school, is on our table. It is well edited, and might be taken as a model for other schools to pattern after. Hudson Post.

It is said that Dundee has a female burglar. One was discovered in the act of breaking into a store the other night. The young man was so astonished when seeing her that she escaped without being identified.

Dan Maloney was at the top of Seymour's pile driver, taking it apart, Friday, when he lost his balance and fell to the ground. He received a bad gash on the eye and sustained several other injuries.—Hudson Gazette.

Take notice, Hudson man, and when you go to Adrian take along enough change to pay your fare when you lose your ticket. This was the experience of one of our citizens who went to the county seat on Wednesday.—Hudson Post.

The inside appearance of the M. E. church has been much improved by the walls being newly papered and the floors carpeted. Those who have the matter in charge should be credited with doing a very nice job.—Hudson Post.

An old couple were married at Mosherville recently, and the boys undertook to serenade them. The groom is deaf and the racket didn't disturb him, but the bride got wrathy and scattered the disturbers of her peace with boiling water. No arrests.

At the quarterly election of officers the Dundee Patrons of Industry Monday evening elected the following: President, S. B. Curtis; Vice President, H. T. Roach; Secretary, John Gorrill; Guides, Wm. Laflin and Mrs. Fred Hibbard; Sentinel, Henry VanDeventer; Minerva, Miss Maud Sparks; Dementer, Mrs. Miller.

The Adrian Press glories in the fact that "the county seat chap can ride with the girls every time in competition with the west end lads." The Press fails to record the fact, however, that the Hudson girls crowded the fellow till he cried with grief, and that the fellow owned he never more would come to Hudson unless his ma came with him.—Hudson Post.

At a printers' banquet, held in Lowell, Mass., not long since, the following toast was offered: The printer is the master of all trades. He beats the farmer with his Hoe, the carpenter with his rules, and the mason with the setting up of tall columns; he surpasses the lawyer and the doctor in attending to his cases, and beats the parson in the management of the devil."

D. D. Rhead was seized with a choking sensation as he was engaged in a game of cards with his wife, Tuesday night. He would have fallen from his chair if Mrs. Rhead had not caught him. Understanding from previous attacks the nature of the trouble, she blew in his mouth just as he had almost ceased to breathe. Dr. Nix said her prompt action saved his life.—Hudson Gazette.

Kind 'o funny! Gen. J. C. Black, of Illinois, who during the late presidential campaign was denounced roundly by Republicans everywhere as "Old Total Disability," because he draws a total disability pension while making a good living at the law—this same Gen. Black is to be one of the attractive features of the G. A. R. encampment this week, and he'll be as heartily welcomed as any of the big guns.—Detroit Journal.

Monday evening there was an explosion at Grosvenor which shook the neighborhood. It seems that a lot of cars with oil tanks had been left on the unused track of the old Canada Southern R. R. Two men thought they might find some oil in them, and unscrewing the cap of one, a lantern was lowered. It proved to be a gasoline tank, and the result was a tremendous explosion. The men escaped unhurt but badly shaken up.

The new town hall at Petersburgh was dedicated Monday evening, with great ceremonies. Speeches were made by Hon. J. K. Boies of Hudson, I. G. Humphrey of Monroe, E. L. Lockwood and others. Dundee cornet band furnished the music. A dramatic company closed the evening with a free rendition of Fanchon. Petersburgh now has one of the handsomest halls to be found among the villages of the State.—Dundee Reporter.

The Concord Independent remarks as follows: Occasionally a man who has received a newspaper one year or more on "tick" when sent a statement of his indebtedness by the publisher, will reply "stop my paper," thinking that by so doing he will "bust the concern." It is a mistaken idea, however. The paper comes out on time the following week, and the name of the disgruntled subscriber is lost in oblivion.

The union carpenters of Indianapolis are preparing for a determined fight in the effort to enforce a demand for thirty-five cents per hour, and eight hours a day, and during the past month fully two-thirds of the non-union carpenters have been induced to join the union, leaving a very small per cent. unpledged to adhere to the demand.

FORECAST

Of the Federal Fathers for This Week.

PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATIONS TO BE DISPOSED OF.

The Montana Election Contest in the Senate—Enumeration of the Chinese—Private Pension Bills — Contested Seats in the House—Color Blindness in Naval Officers.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The time devoted to the consideration of the Florida nominations in the Senate during the week just ended was taken from the time which would have been devoted to general executive business, so the executive calendar is now pretty well crowded with nominations. To dispose of these will be one of the chief duties of the Senate during the week to come. So far as is known there are no nominations now on the calendar over which there is likely to be a dispute, and the business of the secret session will therefore be disposed of in all likelihood at a rapid rate. Several secret sessions of an hour or so each during the week will serve to clear the calendar of most of the nominations now pending. In the meantime, in open session, the consideration of the Montana election contest will be continued. Several senators are booked for long speeches, and the debate may extend to the end of the week.

Among those who have indicated their intention to speak are Senators Evarts, Teller and Ingalls on the Republican side, and Senators Vest, Vance, George, Turpie and Jones of Arkansas on the Democratic side of the chamber. The election contests will have right of way after 2 o'clock each day, but Mr. Hall will call up before that hour, probably today, the house bill for the enumeration of the Chinese which he thinks will lead to little debate. The bill has been amended in the Senate committee until very little of the original measure is left. It will probably go through the Senate in this form and be definitely finished.

An effort will be made during the week to persuade the Senate to devote some time—probably a part of one afternoon—to the consideration of private pension bills. The pension appropriation bill may be brought in and put on passage during the week.

Beginning today the Senate returns to its former hour of assemblage—12 o'clock.

Three contested election cases will be taken up and disposed of by the House during the week. In two of them the action of the House can be forecast easily. Those are the cases of Bowen against Buchanan, from Virginia, and Posey against Parrett from Indiana, in each of which the members of the elections committee have united in favoring the sitting member, in each case a Democrat.

Thursday has been set aside for the consideration of the contested case of Waddell against Wise from the third or Richmond district of Virginia. The case will develope a three-cornered fight in the house. The Republican members of the election committee have decided that Mr. Waddell, a Republican, was elected, while the Democratic members of the election committee have decided that there was no election and will bring in a resolution for holding a special election to determine the matter.

Monday will be District of Columbia day.

On Tuesday it is probable that the naval appropriation bill will be called up, and so soon as it is disposed of the military academy appropriation bill will be considered. Friday as usual will be devoted to private bills, and on Saturday eulogies in honor of the late Representative Nace, of Nebraska, will be delivered.

During the morning hours of the week a number of bills of an interesting nature will be called up for passage. Among them are bills providing for the retirement of naval officers for color blindness; for the retirement of mates in the navy, and to prohibit the enlistment of unnaturalized persons in the navy.

WATER FAMINE.

Cincinnati Has Hardly Anything to Drink But Beer and Whisky.

CINCINNATI, April 7.—Clifton, an outlying suburb which has a contract with Cincinnati for its water supply, and Avondale, which has a similar contract, have had their water supply cut off for several days. Price Hill, Walnut Hill and Mount Auburn, all within the city limits, are supplied with water only a few hours each day. There is not over a day's supply of water in the city reservoirs. All the pumps at the water works are reported in bad condition. The water for nearly three months has been so high that it has been impossible to repair the pumps, and the river last night, instead of falling, was stationary.

MARINE DISASTERS

Occur Thick and Fast Off the New Hebrides.

SIDNEY, N. S. W., April 7.—Many marine disasters have occurred on the cost of the New Hebrides during March by severe hurricanes. Several vessels were wrecked at Labour. Thirty-five men were drowned by the wrecking of a vessel at Mallicolo, and thirty others who succeeded in reaching the shore were massacred by the natives.

ARMY APPOINTMENTS

Made Consequent Upon General Crook's Death.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Nominations: Brigadier General Nelson A. Miles to be major general; Colonel Benjamin H. Grierson, tenth cavalry, to be brigadier general; Henry Flad, of Missouri, to be member of Mississippi river commission; Louis A. Grant, of Minnesota, to be assistant secretary of war.

The NEW VIBRATOR

Every Enterprising Thresherman knows that the threshing machine that will work the most rapidly, clean perfectly, and save all the grain will bring him the best jobs and best prices, and so he will Write now to at once investigate our claim that

MONTANA, OREGON, WASHINGTON.

A correct map of the north west will show that the Northern Pacific Railroad traverses the central portion of Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, and Washington for a distance of nearly 2,000 miles; it is the only Railroad reaching Jamestown, Bismark, Miles City, Billings, Livingston, Bozeman, Missoula, Cheney, Davenport, Palouse City, Sprague, Ritzville, Yakima, Ellensburg, Tacoma, Seattle and in fact nine-tenths of the north west cities, towns, and points of interest.

The Northern Pacific is the shortest trans-continental route from St. Paul and Chicago, to Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Deer Lodge, Spokane Falls, Walla Walla, Dayton and Portland, and the only one whose through trains reach any portion of the new state of Washington. Land seekers purchasing Pacific Coast second class tickets via St. Paul and the Northern Pacific have choice from that point of free Colonist Sleeping Cars or Pullman's Tourist Furnished Sleepers at charges as low as the lowest.

For the benefit of settlers the Northern Pacific also gives a ten days stop over privilege on second class North Pacific Coast tickets at Spokane Falls and each and every point west, including over 125 stations in Washington, thus enabling persons seeking a home to examine this vast territory without incurring an expense of from $5.00 to $25.00 in travelling on local tickets from point to point.

Insure for yourself comfort and safety by having the best accomodations afforded, thereby avoiding change of cars, re-checking of baggage, transfers and lay overs en-route. Money can be saved by purchasing tickets via St. Paul or Minneapolis and the Northern Pacific.

For Maps, Pamphlets, Rates and Tickets enquire of your nearest Ticket Agent, any District Passenger Agent of the Northern Pacific Railroad; or Chas S. Fee, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, St. Paul Minn.

TOMLINSON-POWERS.

A quiet and prettily arranged wedding was solemnized yesterday noon at 419 Erie street, the contracting parties being Miss Clara Louise Powers and Richard Burton Tomlinson of Minneapolis. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Smith of this city and is well known in Minneapolis, her future home.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Vibbert of St. James' Episcopal church, and was witnessed by relatives and most intimate friends of the young couple, a number of relatives from Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Cedar Rapids, and Tecumseh, Mich., having to come to the city especially to be present on the occasion. The ceremony was followed by an elegant wedding breakfast, and during the afternoon the newly wedded pair left town on a bridal trip to Washington, New York, and Boston.

The above is clipped from the Chicago Times of April 9th. The bride's mother, nee Dora Graves, afterwards Mrs. W. K. Powers, was one of the belles of Tecumseh many years ago and her home was here until recently. The bride passed the years of her youth here and has a host of friends at the old home who have always cherished for her the warmest friendship. In their behalf, as well as our own, the HERALD extends to the happy pair its heartiest congratulations. May their lives fall in pleasant places and may the bride be so situated that she can occasionally honor her old friends with a visit as the years go by.

The Floral Exhibition Catalogue.

Those who do not go to Detroit to attend the Floral and Musical Festival next week, as well as those who do go, will need one of the elegant 100-page illustrated official catalogues, a copy of which has just been received, and may be seen at this office. It is profusely illustrated, and as beautiful as it is complete in the details of all the numerous departments of the exhibition. It can be secured by mail for 25 cents by addressing the General Manager, W. H. Brearley, of the Detroit Journal.

Those visiting the exhibition will see exact representations of the architecture of 23 different countries. These national booths have been planned by competent architects, and are carefully built so as to faithfully represent what would be seen by the tourists in foreign lands. The ladies in the booths will wear the ladies' costumes of the countries they represent. In a great many cases these costumes have been imported, and will be first worn on this occasion.

All who visited the last (1889) flower show said that it was the most beautiful scene they had ever witnessed, and this year (1890) the exhibition will be many times more elaborate and beautiful.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, APL. 17

The tariff is a tax, 'tis true; and 'tis an awful big tax too.

Major McKinley should not be discouraged in his good work. His new tariff machine is grinding out Democrats by the hundred every day.

The delay in the advent of spring must have been caused by the non-arrival of the Easter bonnet. Both of them however, have arrived at last.

A New York State judge has rendered a decision that "an umbrella is not common property." This is a judicial opinion which has popular sentiment against it.

The new tariff puts a duty of 15cts. a bushel on corn. This will be a Godsend to the Kansas farmers. The corn burners of that State will be relieved from the dread of having foreign pauper corn shipped into that State to compete with their own fuel supply.

If the McKinley hocus-pocus becomes a law, the duty on wood pulp will be doubled and the price of print paper will go up. The high tariff newspapers will then have a good time reconciling their expense accounts with the theory that the tariff is not a tax.

These be troublous times for the high taxers. Secretary Blaine wants a reciprocity treaty with South America, but the high tariff men want the tariff wall built a little higher. But how to reconcile heavy duties on wool, hides, lead ore and other South American exports, and free trade with those states, is a mystery that puzzles even the high taxers.

A teacher once wrote, "the art of playing on the violin requires the nicest perception and the most sensibility of any art in the world." Upon which an experienced editor comments in the following well chosen terms: "The art of publishing a newspaper and making it pay, and at the same time pleasing everybody, beats fiddling higher than a kite." And he might have added that a paper that pleased everybody would be n. g.

Little things in themselves sometimes show the tendency of parties. During Mr. Cleveland's Administration it was not discovered that an Assistant Secretary of War was needed. In fact it was not discovered that the office was in existence. The Republicans quickly discovered the office, the necessity of filling it and raising the salary from $3,500 to $4,500. Uncle Sam's army is not very big, but it takes a great many officials to properly look after it.

Woolen clothing may go up as a result of the new wool tariff, but tobacco stems will come in free, and the industry of grinding them up and working them off on smokers and snuff takers will be greatly stimulated. The price of shoes will doubtless rise, but works of art will no longer have to pay duty. The great Republican party should rally loyally to sustain the noble cause of free human hair, free diamonds and free tobacco stems.—Buffalo Courier.

The Patrons of Industry in many places are opposed to paying the local merchants over 15 per cent. above cost, and yet the year round they pay the tariff robbers an average of 47 per cent. enhanced cost on all the necessities of life without a protest. The organization of farmers for education and co-operation is well and wise, but let them fasten the responsibility of injustice they suffer where it belongs. It is the national system and not the village store that oppresses them.—Hudson Gazette.

The Republicans might just as well bear in mind, that selfishness often over reaches itself, and that the selfishness of the Republican party has hitherto been no exception to this rule. For instance, what would not that party do to recall negro suffrage? It is by no means unlikely, therefore, that this multiplication of States may prove their ruin in the future. Tariff reform is making great strides in the West, and will at no distant day capture all the States recently admitted and soon to be admitted. Indeed, if party zeal were statesmanship and patriotism we would be as willing to admit these Territories as the Republicans are. But it is not.—Chicago Herald.

THE McKINLEY TARIFF BILL, A DELUSION AND A SHAM.

The Duties on Agricultural Products Cannot Increase Prices, Because We are Exporters and not Importers of Food.

We have already published some facts and figures in the HERALD to show that a tariff duty on farm crops is of little or no use to the farmer, as he has a large surplus to sell which must seek a foreign market. The following detailed examination of the McKinley bill, with reference to the duties it imposes on farm products, is taken from the National Democrat. It expresses our views so fully on this point that we transfer it entire to these columns. Every farmer should give the article a careful perusal.

We are not surprised to find the Republican papers printing the duties in the present tariff law, and the duties proposed in the Mills and McKinley bills, in parallel columns, and explaining that the McKinley bill is in the interest of farmers. We do not believe that the farmers can be caught with such chaff.

Look at the problem a minute. Kansas produces more corn than the people and animals in the State can eat; it has to hunt for a market in the Eastern States; would a duty on corn carried into Kansas raise the price of Kansas corn? Massachusetts manufacturers make more boots and shoes than the people of that State can wear; they are marketed in every State in the country; would a duty on the boots and shoes carried into Massachusetts protect the manufacturers of Lynn and Brocton?

Take it on a larger scale. The manufacturers of England make more goods than the people of their own country can consume; the goods are marketed all over the world. Duties on manufactured goods could not help the English manufacturers because they have to go abroad for their market. It is outside of the jurisdiction of parliament that they meet their competitors. The American farmer is in the same condition that the English manufacturer is; he produces more than can be consumed at home; a tariff on corn would be of no more use to Kansas than duties on woollen and iron goods would be to Bradford and Birmingham.

Now look at some of the figures. It is proposed to raise the duty on cattle over a year old from 20 per cent. to $10. As the cattle imported last year, other than breeding animals imported free, were worth an average of $9.78 each this is a tax of more than 100 per cent. and would entirely prohibit the importation. But it is estimated that there were in this country 53,000,000 head of cattle; the imports were 57,551. How much does any one suppose the domestic price was affected by this importation?

We imported cattle, subject to duty, worth $550,887, and besides $90,000,000 worth of dead meat we exported $16,616,917 worth of beef on the hoof. So long as we produce such an enormous excess of cattle it is impossible that an increase of duty on the few cattle that came into this country should affect the price.

In the case of horses it is different. We imported more than we exported. We imported in the last fiscal year 29,590 Mexican ponies, worth a little over $8 each. The McKinley bill would stop this importation entirely by putting a duty of $30 a head on these mustangs. Surely these animals do not compete in any appreciable way with American horses, though it would be a great inconvenience to the Southwest to have their importation prohibited. We also imported 17,470 Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba horses, worth $100 each. These came in competition with the American horses, but it was seventeen thousand against fourteen millions. Besides the horse trading is not altogether on one side, and we buy cheap and sell dear. We sold to Mexico 1,670 horses worth $85,192 and to Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba 1,005 horses worth $162,708.

If we imported hogs, the number was so small it was not deemed worth special mention, and could not have exceeded the $37,467 worth of "all other animals" than cattle, horses and sheep. We exported 45.128 live hogs besides the enormous quantity of hog products to which we shall refer presently. An increased duty on imported hogs, therefore, can be of no possible use to the raisers of swine in this country. Of sheep we imported more than we exported, But all the sheep imported were less than 400,000, and we are estimated to have over 44,000,000 sheep in this country. We exported 128,852 sheep and 296,220 pounds of mutton.

The absurdity of the idea that the protective tariff can help the farmer is still more apparent when we consider provisions. The McKinley bill raises the duties on bacon and hams from two to five cents a pound; on beef, mutton and pork from one to two cents a pound, and on butter and cheese from four to six cents a pound. Now, if the American farmer, like the English farmer, encountered competition at home, these duties would be of some value to him, but as the American farmer is producing a great excess of these things, and is trying to market them abroad, the price at home is not affected by the insignificant quantities that are imported. Our imports of meat products last year were worth half a million dollars; our exports were worth ninety millions. It can make no possible difference to the American farmer whether the duty on imported meats is a cent a pound, or a dollar a pound, or nothing at all.

In regard to butter and cheese the situation is the same. Of butter we imported 178,851 pounds, and exported 15,504,978 pounds, and of this export seven and a half million pounds went to the British provinces and the British West Indies. It is pretended that our dairymen are injured by the competition of Canadian dairymen. Why, last year we imported 87,000 pounds of butter from the British provinces, and we exported 1,493,887 pounds of butter to those same provinces. This, besides 400,000 pounds of oleomargarine that we sold those same provinces. If we export 80 pounds of butter where we import one, increasing the duty on that one is not going to affect the price any. Of cheese we imported 8,207,026 pounds, and exported 84 999,828 pounds. What our cheese makers need is not protection from foreign competition, but foreign markets. The cheese that we imported is of special varieties, not made here and not competing with our cheese. More than half the total import, 4,645,883 pounds, came from Switzerland. The increase of duty on this is a tax on our foreign-born citizens, but it won't help the American dairyman any.

If a man likes "Schweitzer kase" he is not going to take our mild and inoffensive cheese in its stead. Germany sent us 367,378 pounds of cheese, unlike American cheese, and not in competion with it; France sent us 680,720 pounds of Requefort, Brie, and other special varieties, for which American cheese is no substitute; Italy sent us 1,348,468 pounds of cheese, and of Edam and other Holland cheeses we imported 939,051 pounds; England sent us 81,697 of Stilton and other fancy cheeses. Our Canadian neighbors, whose competition is supposed to be dangerous, sent us 2,168 pounds of cheese. If these foreign cheeses, eaten by our epicures and our adopted fellow-citizens, were prohibited it would not appreciably increase the demand for the wholly different American cheese. On the other hand we exported 72,000,000 pounds of cheese to Great Britain, 11,000,000 pounds to the British provinces and nearly two million pounds to other parts of the world.

Still more ridiculous is the idea that the farmers can be benefited by duties upon cereals. Of corn we imported 2,041 bushels and exported 69,592,929 bushels; of corn meal we imported none and exported 912,181 barrels; of wheat we imported 130,649 bushels and exported 46,414,120 bushels; of wheat flour we imported 1,150 barrels, and exported 9,374,803 barrels. While we market these vast quantities of breadstuffs abroad duties on the handful of breadstuffs imported can have no effect on prices.

With barley the case is different. We raise less than we use, and it looks as if an increase of duty might effect an increase of price. The Agricultural Department monthly report for last October says:

"Barley is our only cereal of which the home product is not equal to the demand, the deficiency being met by importations, chiefly from Canada. During the past few years the acreage devoted to this grain has been materially enlarged, yet imports have as steadily increased."

Importation, then, has not discouraged production for while importation has been increasing the home acreage has been increasing also. Nor has the foreign competition made barley raising unprofitable. In the latest annual report of the Agricultural Department the statistician, Mr. Dodge, a Republican and a protectionist, says of barley: "It gives a better return in value per acre than any other cereal," and yet it is the only cereal in which the American farmer meets foreign competition at home. The average importation is about one-fifth of the domestic crop, and how little the American farmer is hurt by competition in any direction may be estimated from the fact that barley is the most profitable cereal in spite of an importation relatively so large.

As for oats and oat meal the fact that last year we imported 22,310 bushels of the former and less than two million pounds of the latter, while we exported 624,226 bushels of the former and more than ten million pounds of the latter proves that an increase of duty cannot help the farmer.

As we imported last year $2,500,000 worth of eggs it might be supposed that a duty of five cents a dozen on them would benefit the poulterer. The total importation, however, large as it seems, is small compared with the total production, and if the exclusion of foreign eggs raised the price a little in New York and Boston it would have no discernable influence on the value of eggs in the hands of the farmer. Every farmer who has ever stopped to think about the difference between the price he gets for eggs and the price the customer in a large city pays the retail dealer for eggs, will see the force of this.

Some of the hop raisers in the State of New York have given the impression that foreign competition is ruining them, but the truth is that we export three times as much hops as import. Our German friends insist that the hops of the fatherland are superior to our hops, and they import 4,000,000 pounds of hops from Germany and Austria. But we exported last year 12,589,262 pounds of hops, of which 11,386,087 went to England, not including Scotland, and we sent 450,000 pounds to Canada, whose barley we buy for its superior malting qualities. Of hay we import more than we export, but as the hay crop is over 40,000,000 tons and the importation is 100,000 tons the tariff might be made prohibitory without increasing the price of American hay. One ton of Canadian hay does not have much influence on the price of 400 tons of domestic hay.

Of potatoes we imported twice as much as we exported, and it might seem as if Mr. McKinley's proposed increase of duty from 15 to 25 cents a bushel might have some effect here. But the average crop of potatoes is more than 165,000,000 bushels; the imports last year were a good deal less than 1,000,000. The importation is so small in proportion to the crop it competes with that if it has any influence at all on prices, it must be slight and local. Of beans and peas, too, we import more than we export, but the entire import of beans and peas wouldn't have given two quarts to each family in the country.

Mr. McKinley proposes to improve the condition of the farmers by putting a duty of $2 a ton on straw. All the straw imported last year was not worth thirty thousand dollars. He proposes to raise the duty on onions; our import of onions is not specially reported, but we exported 75,000 bu. of them. He proposes to levy a duty of 25 cents a bushel on fresh apples, and 2 cents a pound on dried apples. If we imported any apples at all last year the amount must have been very small, for apples are not mentioned among our imports. On the other hand, we exported 22,102,579 pounds of dried apples, and 942,406 barrels of fresh apples, the whole amounting to $3,450,445. It is evident that while this condition of things remains no duty on apples will influence the price of them to the American farmer. An increase of duty on flax seed might raise the price, perhaps, in an open and free market. But there is a powerful combination known as the linseed oil trust, which arbitrarily fixes the price it will pay for seed as well as the price for which it will sell oil. To enable this combination to extort still higher prices for oil the McKinley bill would raise the duty on oil from 25 to 30 cents a gallon. The farmer will have to sell flaxseed for whatever the trust is willing to pay, no matter what the tariff on seed is. The duty on other seeds is also increased in the McKinley bill. This will do the farmer no good for we import a little more than half a million dollars worth of seeds, and export nearly four million dollars worth of seeds.

TAKE Hood's Sarsaparilla

That Hood's Sarsaparilla does possess curative power Peculiar to Itself is conclusively shown by the wonderful cures it has effected, unsurpassed in the history of medicine. This absolute merit it possesses by reason of the fact that it is prepared by a Combination, Proportion and Process Peculiar to Hood's Sarsaparilla, known to no other medicine, and by which the full medicinal power of all the ingredients used is retained. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Juniper Berries, and other well known vegetable remedies. It has won its way to the leading place among medicines by its own intrinsic undisputed merit, and has now a larger sale than any other similar preparation in this country. If you have never taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, a fair trial will convince you of its excellence and merits. Take it this season.

Peculiar

"I can hardly estimate the benefit received from using Hood's Sarsaparilla. Last summer I was prostrated for nearly three months, from poor circulation of the blood, as I thought, although my physician treated me for nervous trouble. This spring the same symptoms returned, and I concluded to be my own physician, and began using Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have not lost one day from my work, and feel like a different person." R. J. RILEY, Business Manager Gazette, St. Clairsville, Ohio.

A FAT OFFICE.

A United States District Attorney in New York Makes $25,000.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Acting Secretary of the Treasury Batcheller has sent to the house of representatives a letter on the subject of the compensation of the United States district attorney for the southern district of New York, in which he says that it has been a matter of much diversity of opinion and of embarrassment to the department. The district attorney for this district received for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1889, $15,370; and for the fiscal year following $17,375. He also received fees during the same period aggregating $760, which, with his salary of $12,000 for the same period, made a total of $45,505. The compensation received by this officer, he says, is so largely in excess of that paid by law to any other of the officers of the government as to have induced the opinion upon his part, that the present condition of the law, under which such payments was to be made, was the result of congressional oversight, and that it was his duty to call attention to the subject. He says he does not wish to be understood as making complaint as to the manner in which the duties of the district attorney have been performed. He wishes that the law might be more definite on the subject and thus relieve him from the duty of determining the value of the services about which he has but very slight and unsatisfactory information.

SCHÆFFER WINS.

END OF THE HANDICAP BILLIARD TOURNAMENT.

A Most Remarkable Series of Games Played by Him with the Celebrated Player, Geo Franklin—Slosson—The Scores.

CHICAGO, April 14.—The most brilliant game of the billiard tourney was that played by young Ives, 275, in the afternoon, against the veteran Maurice Daly, 800. The latter only made fifty points. Only fifty-five minutes were devoted to play, and eleven innings ended the contest. Ives swept the buttons from the cloth in armfuls. No such spectacular game was ever seen in public. The young expert had the ivories under perfect control. Difficult masses and draws were accomplished with precision. His position play equaled Schaefer's best, and on the open table he pulled out the most wonderful carroms at all sorts of intricate angles. The score:

Ives—0 1 8 34 25 21 97 0 60 15 4—275.
Daly—4 8 1 1 2 3 1 25 4 0 — 50.

Averages—Ives 25; Daly 5.

Defeating George Franklin Slosson with ease, winning five games and losing none, making the highest single run scored in the series and being credited with the largest game average, Jacob Schaefer has won first prize in the 14-inch balk line handicap billiard tournament. Ives takes second money, losing to the winner only, Slosson second, Cottrell third and Cotting fourth money. The last game was easy for Schaefer, but for ten innings was exceedingly close. "The Wizard" continued his wonderful play to the end, but "The Student" lagged behind. The house was crowded, and the three thousand persons present paid strict attention. The ninth inning was the feature, Schaefer gathering 117 and Slosson 79, each in his own faultless style. Schaefer made a reverse cushion nurse in the third that lifted the house. Slosson, when he did play well, gave an exhibition of wonderful ability in execution, his run of forty in the eleventh inning being made up almost entirely of tremendous open table and cushion carrom shots that were not approachable. Schaefer's 79 in the same inning were interspersed with brilliant masses. The score:

Schaefer—0, 0, 41, 2, 0, 0, 0, 86, 117, 20, 79, 38, 9, 15, 35, 56, 2—500.

Slosson—37, 2, 27, 2, 11, 1, 21, 27, 79, 1, 45, 1, 18, 4, 1, 0—277.

Averages—Schaefer 29 2-17, Slosson 17 5-16.

THE SIGNAL SERVICE.

A Bill Affecting it Passes the Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Among a number of measures that passed the Senate Saturday was the Senate bill to increase the efficiency and reduce the expense of the army. The bill transfers to the department of agriculture the weather bureau, leaving the signal corps of the army to remain in the war department.

The weather bureau is to consist of one chief and such civilian employes as congress may annually provide for. The chief is to have an annual compensation of $4,500, and is to be appointed by the president, by and with the service and consent of the Senate. But the chief signal officer of the army may be detailed by the president to take charge of the weather bureau. The enlisted force of the signal corps is to be discharged from the army on June 30, 1891, and such portions of the force as may be necessary shall be transferred to the department of agriculture. Skilled observers now serving in the Signal service are to be perferred for appointment in the Weather bureau. The Signal corps is to consist of one major, four captains (mounted) and four first lieutenants (mounted), with the pay and allowances of like grades in the army; and the enlisted force of the Signal corps is to consist of fifty sergeants.

After a brief secret session, the Senate at 4:15 adjourned until Monday.

SUBSIDING.

The Waters Going Down in the Submerged Districts.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., April 14.—Parties arriving from Arkansas City this morning report the water subsiding at that point, although trains are not yet running into town. There are no cases of actual suffering; the generous contributions from surrounding towns have afforded relief where needed. The loss of property is heavy and will aggregate thousands of dollars. An extensive area of farming land has been rendered unfit for cultivation, and should no crop be grown on it this year the effect will be serious to the cotton growing interest. The sheriffs of Desha, Marion and Phillip counties have wired Governor Eagle saying that no tents from the federal government are needed.

Reception at the White House.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Mrs. Harrison gave her last public reception Saturday afternoon at the president's mansion, and it was crowded to overflowing. The day was beautiful and the number who walked to the white house was unusually large. Mrs. McKee, Mrs. Dimmick and a number of other ladies assisted Mrs. Harrison.

Appointments.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—H. G. Weaver has been appointed by Secretary Windom, Private Secretary to the commissioner of immigration to the port of New York.

A. M. Hughes, of Tennessee, has been appointed chief of the division in the office of the register treasury department.

A VERY TOUCHING APPEAL

FLORIDA'S ELOQUENT PLEA FOR HIGHER DUTIES.

Prosperous Orange Growers Talk Pitifully of Impending Ruin—A Sister State Stretches Out Imploring Hands and Begs to Be Saved.

The Florida orange growers have been before the ways and means committee to convince congress that they are in desperate straits. In presenting their case they enlivened the committee with a specimen of old fashioned eloquence, so called, which ought certainly to have touched a tender chord in the hearts of the committeemen. The growers prayed for a duty of one dollar a box on foreign oranges, and here are the concluding words of their pathetic prayer:

"Refuse to place this duty on oranges, and the long years of patient labor now past in wooing the productions of the soil will be sacrificed and lost, and from the Pacific to the Gulf and the Atlantic the sad story of thousands of impoverished homes will be hurled across the waters to people growing rich on our ruin. To you, gentlemen of the north, gentlemen of the east, gentlemen of the west, a sister state holds out her imploring hands for succor, and sends through us from the bosom of her blossom ladened orange groves the prayer for protection on her nursling industry. Protect us now, and the future will enable Pomona to send her fragrant greetings to every man, woman and child in the United States holding a penny in their hands, and across the waters to the marts of the world. We can compete with those who have prayed your honorable committee to grant petitions from them that would mean ruin to thousands of your people."

It would be too much to expect of men under such violent emotion that they should use the cold language of business. We must not expect them to say that they will reduce the price of oranges to one cent apiece. Instead of this we must let "Pomona send her fragrant greetings to every man, woman and child in the United States holding a penny in their hands."

Evidently ex-Governor Mabry and his associates have not forgotten declamation day at school, when they used to regale one another with choice extracts from writers of a kind now extinct.

The Florida men are terribly in earnest and will be satisfied with nothing short of crushing the importer of foreign oranges. To this end they protest against the enactment of any law allowing the importer a rebate for damaged fruit. "Such a clause," they say, "is a delusion and a snare." This protest of theirs is stated to be in the interest of "keeping rubbish at home;" for the Florida grower thinks he cannot compete with "rubbish." His oranges are the best grown in the world and sell readily in New York at higher prices than foreign oranges command.

Such is the excellence of the Florida orange that, according to the statement of ex-Governor Mabry himself before the committee, not less than 20,000,000 of Florida buds were last year exported to Mexico, the West Indies, South America, some of the Pacific islands and Europe. And yet the Florida people pretend to be "confronted with dire disaster." They have learned, too, the old protectionist trick of applying a damaging epithet to their foreign competitors; and it must be confessed that they have learned it well. The foreign orange growers were denounced in the convention of the Florida people at Ocala as "a set of men who have no sympathy with our social life, our traditions or our institutions," which all means that they are totally unfit to raise oranges for us.

"We must have protection or languish," say the Florida men, and their spokesman, ex-Governor Mabry, told the committee that they should need this protection for twelve years—the time it requires to bring a newly planted grove to profitable bearing.

Then Mr. Flower asked: "Why not make the tariff take effect ten years from now?"

To which the down hearted ex-governor answered: "That would be absolutely ruinous. You want to ruin us so that we cannot do anything, and then, when we are dead and buried, you want to sing psalms over us."

A moment after this rather blue forecast of his prospects the ex-governor picked up courage and was imprudent enough to jeopardize his case by boasting of the superiority of Florida as compared with other orange producing countries. "We have a better climate," he said, "a better soil, more capacity and more sense."

Your true Floridian is so accustomed to cheerful views of the present and future prosperity of his state, so accustomed to "booming" his rich orange lands, that he cannot make a poor mouth even when he sets out deliberately to try.

Mr. Mabry damaged his case still further by admitting that there are orange groves in Florida which cannot be bought for less than $4,000 an acre; and that a good grove might bring $2,000 to $2,500 an acre. When one considers that the unimproved land costs about $100 an acre, it is easy to see from the above figures what a paying industry orange growing is. Mr. Flower read to the witness an extract from The Florida Agriculturist, showing a case where an eighteen acre grove had yielded $11,250 in a single crop. To this Mr. Mabry offered no denial.

The papers of Florida and California as well give glowing accounts of the great profits of orange growing—some figures being even more glittering than those in the case just cited. The San Francisco Chronicle, a high protectionist organ, recently gave a long description of the conditions prevailing in the orange industry in California.

The article contains the following cheerful words: "Better prices are being paid than ever before"; "every orange grower who is producing good fruit is in receipt of an income far greater than can be realized from any other branch of horticulture"; "hardly a commencement has been made as yet in the creation of an eastern market for our oranges."

And yet these men from Florida and California have the effrontery to go before Congress with exaggerated statements about "ruin." The best proof that they do not believe their own statements is to be found in their local newspapers when these try to attract capital and settlers.

FORGOTTEN WISDOM.

Wool Growers Whose Memories Are Apparently Defective.

The wool growers seem to have forgotten, during the recent agitation for increased duties, a piece of shrewd wisdom displayed in 1872 by Mr. John L. Hayes, secretary of the Wool Manufacturers' association. In that year there was a strong tariff reform movement in congress, and Mr. Hayes was in Washington to look out for the interests of the manufacturers of woolen goods. The senate passed a bill making a horizontal reduction of 10 per cent.; but the feeling for reform was still stronger in the house, and accordingly the ways and means committee prepared a much more radical bill.

Mr. Hayes had opposed any reduction whatever in the duties affecting his association; but when he saw that the house was determined to make even greater reductions than the senate, he concluded that the only way to prevent the most extreme action of the house was to accept the senate bill and rally all the protected interests in its support. Reform was to be shut off by a slight concession to reform.

Mr. Hayes had his association to agree to this line of action, the Pennsylvania iron interests were induced to fall in, and finally the influence of all the protected classes was thrown in favor of the senate bill. In this way the house bill was killed and the 10 per cent. horizontal reduction became a law.

The result, too, was precisely what the shrewd Mr. Hayes had foreseen. For some years the country heard nothing of tariff reform, and the protected classes went on adding to their gains and making their divisions in silence.

The wisdom of 1872 is however, forgotten by the protectionists of today. They claim the earth in tones that all can hear, and in a spirit which plainly shows that they are simply claiming what they consider their rights.

Chief of all these are the wool growers. The country has been disgusted for several months with the repeated reports in the papers about the deals and agreements of the growers with the manufacturers; and now that the public has gotten sight of the long expected McKinley bill, it is seen that the wool growers have come off with booty that ought to satisfy the most hungry of them. They have gotten into the bill an increase of duties on wool which ought to alarm even the growers themselves. So long ago as eighteen years Mr. Hayes recognized the fact that it was not wise to receive too high duties, but the reform sentiment of the country should be aroused and duties put lower than ever. But the wool growers and other highly protected classes will continue to yield themselves to the allurements of the Delilah of protection till, some fine election morning, they will hear their doom, "The Philistines be upon thee, Samson!"

The window glass industry continues to show signs of prosperity. The New York Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter in a single week publishes among its usual trade items the fact that a tank furnace is being run night and day at Glassboro, N. J.; that a tank furnace costing $35,000 is to be added to a window glass factory at Woodbury, N. J., and that a tank furnace with a capacity of twelve pots is to be erected at Kokomo, Ind.

The same paper states that the efforts to consolidate the window glass industry of Pittsburg, in other words to form a trust, have met unexpected difficulties from the high price placed on some of the factories by their owners.

The glass men, it will be remembered, had their turn before the ways and means committee to plead for higher protection. Duties ranging above 100 per cent. and the flourishing state of the domestic industry apparently do not satisfy these men.

Pittsburg has just made a shipment of 25,000 tons of steel rails to Mexico, and not long ago 11,000 tons were sold in Chicago for Canada. Our exportations last year were 279,420 tons. Facts like these are a sufficient answer to a member of Mr. Andrew Carnegie's firm, who stated the other day that the present duty of $17 a ton is not high enough to give him ample protection; that the tariff must be raised if he is to have complete protection; and yet that the American rail is superior to the English rail. All that in one breath! He further stated that if the tariff on steel rails were reduced to $15 a ton he might possibly be able to go on. What will he do, now that Mr. McKinley proposes to reduce it to $13?

According to affidavits signed by the leading members of the sugar trust, that "private affair" paid in dividends from April 1, 1889, to Jan. 1, 1890, the sum of $4,925,329. The stock of the concern is nominally $50,000,000, as watered since its organization, but the actual capital which went into the trust at its formation was $15,000,000. The above dividends represent a profit of nearly 33 per cent. in nine months. The profits since Jan. 1 have been $1,250,000, which means dividends of 44 per cent. for the entire year.

The silk merchants and manufacturers of New York protest earnestly against the foolish proposition of the McKinley committee to levy a duty of $1 a pound on raw silk. The duty would produce a revenue of six or seven million dollars a year. The problem of reducing revenues has evidently been forgotten in the scramble for extravagant appropriations.

DR. FRASER'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.
The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years,
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

THE TRADES CARNIVAL.

SOMETHING NEW AND UNIQUE IN THE LINE OF CHURCH ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Most Brilliant Grand March Ever Witnessed in the Opera House. A Literary Program also Presented.

"The Trades Carnival" is the name of a new and unique entertainment which has been having quite a run during the past season in many cities and towns throughout the West, and it was reserved for the young ladies of the Baptist church to introduce it to a Tecumseh audience. Preparations for the affair were began some weeks ago, but its formal presentation was deferred until after Lent. The general plan of the entertainment is this: Every business house is represented by a young lady, who is dressed in some peculiar costume appropriate to the business she represents. Each young lady carries a banner of a similar character. Thus attired and equipped the young ladies form in procession and go through with the evolutions of a grand march. The affair had been the principal topic of conversation for several days and the whole town was on the qui vive to witness it. Four rows of chairs were ranged around on three sides of the main floor, leaving the center of the floor clear for the procession. These chairs were crowded with spectators and the gallery also was filled to overflowing.

About half past eight the curtain lifted and the procession filed upon the stage from either side and thence down the steps to the main floor. Prof. Skinner's orchestra struck up a lively melody and the grand march proceeded. Dr. L. G. North announced the names of the firms represented, as the characters filed upon the stage. Miss Ella Jackson representing O. P. Bills & Co., and Miss Stella Cleveland representing C. E. Williamson, led the march. It was a beautiful, bewildering sight. Everything that taste, ingenuity and womanly tact could suggest was brought into play in making the banners and preparing the costumes. Many of the former were made of silk and elaborately lettered, while the costumes exceeded anything ever before seen in Tecumseh in novelty, beauty and richness. We sent two reporters to the scene, both armed with a new note book and several lead pencils, for the purpose of gathering an accurate description of each costume, but, goodness gracious, it was an impossible task. No sooner could the scribe begin on one dress, than it passed on and another entirely different was before him. All one could do was to look and gaze and wonder and admire. There was no time left for taking notes. Besides there were 64 characters in the procession. Any detailed description of the different costumes and banners would fill one whole side of the HERALD, and our available space is limited. The costumes were trimmed with every conceivable thing manufactured in our factories or sold in our stores. The young ladies who represented Bil s' Bank and the two jewelry stores were worth several hundred dollars each, figured on a hard cash basis, and many of the other costumes were exceedingly rich and costly. The young ladies who led the march were unanimously awarded the blue ribbon for their skill in conducting the different evolutions. Good judges pronounced it the finest grand march, without any exception, ever witnessed in that opera house. For just thirty minutes the procession kept step to the music as it marched and countermarched around the hall. The banners were then laid aside and the characters joined the audience, while a fine literary and musical program was presented of nearly an hour's duration. This program of itself was well worth the price of admission, and held the undivided attention of the audience throughout.

LITERARY PROGRAM.

The first exercise was a piano solo by Miss Rhoda Benedict, which was finely rendered.

A recitation followed by Mrs. C. H. Kemp of Franklin, in which her elocutionary talents were displayed to the best advantage. It is but seldom that a Tecumseh audience have the opportunity of listening to Mrs. Kemp and they always enjoy the treat.

A vocal quartette, by Mrs. Orr and Misses Jackson, Grace Heck and Coddington, Dora Grayson at the piano, was received with applause.

Naomi North gave a recitation very nicely.

Miss Agnes Woodward rendered a vocal solo most acceptably, Jennie Root accompanying on the piano.

A recitation by Miss Alice Garlinghouse was given with her usual taste.

Eva Elliott surprised the audience with a beautiful violin solo, Mabel Hayden accompanying. She was honored with an encore.

Mrs. C. H. Kemp gave another one of her fine exhibits of elocution.

The program closed with a fine quartette by Messrs. Tansley and Bramble, and Misses Jackson and Hendryx, Miss Benedict accompanying.

The orchestra then struck up a lively "stepper"— and the characters went through the evolutions of another grand march. This time the banners were laid aside to give the audience a better opportunity to examine the costumes, which they took advantage of. Opera glasses in the gallery were at a premium.

Some new figures were evolved in the march which added much to its beauty. It was a literal labyrinth of novelty, beauty and wonder. The two leaders did themselves proud by their skillfulness, and the gentlemen who have led our marches hitherto will have to look to their laurels. The firms represented were all well satisfied with the manner in which the characters assumed their parts. We scarcely see how any of them could have been improved. The principal credit for the affair should be awarded to Misses Luella Hendryx and Carrie Osborn. True, they had plenty of willing hearts and hands to assist them, but they planned the entertainment and had charge of the details. Those who assisted expended a good deal of time and labor also to make it a success, and it is gratifying to know that the receipts were liberal and sufficient to compensate the workers for their trouble and expense in preparing the entertainment. We append a full list of the firms represented and by whom:

Deafness Can't be Cured

By local applications, as they can not reach the deceased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH, Mich.
Council Room, April 14, 1890.

Called Session.

Present—President Heesen, Trustees Elliott, Heck, James, Kennedy, Smith and the recorder.

President Heesen stated the object of this session was to fix the penalty of the liquor bonds and to consider the question of making a contract for electric lighting.

On motion the penalty of the liquor bonds for the ensuing year was fixed at $4,000.

The question of entering upon an agreement with C. C. Travis, to furnish electric lighting for the streets of the village was then brought up.

After due consideration the following agreement was, on motion, accepted and adopted:—

This Agreement is a witness between C. C. Travis, of Chicago, Ill., his associates and assigns, party of the first part, and the Village of Tecumseh, Lenawee County, Michigan, party of the second part.

SEC. 1. It is understood that the party of the first part shall succeed to the rights and franchise granted by the party of the second part to the Thompson-Houston Electric Co., by an ordinance passed by the Common Council of the Village of Tecumseh, Michigan, January 8th, 1890, and should such party fail to succeed to said franchise, then this contract shall be inoperative and void.

SEC. 2. It is understood that party of the first part shall, upon the acceptance of this contract, enter upon the work within 15 days from and after date hereof, of building an electric station and erecting poles and wire lines for the purpose of supplying electric light and power to the citizens of Tecumseh, by the use of the Thompson-Houston electrical apparatus, and failing to make reasonable progress in such erection of station building and lines within thirty (30) days from and after date hereof, then this contract shall be of no force and void.

SEC. 3. The party of the first part hereby agrees to suspend 20 or more Thomson-Houston arc lights, which lights are to be of same power as any in Adrian and Albion of less than 2000 candle power, over such streets or street intersections as shall be directed by party of the second part, in such a manner as directed by aforesaid ordinance, the intersections to be located by party of the second part before work is commenced and so as not to delay progress on the part of party of the first part; and party of the first part hereby further agrees to light the said arc electric lamps every dark night, as indicated by the Philadelphia moon schedule, which is the schedule commonly adopted by gas and electric light companies in the United States, also including all dark and cloudy nights, and to light said lamps at the hour indicated for each day in said schedule and keep said lamps lighted until twelve o'clock midnight.

SEC. 4. The party of the first part also agrees to light said lamps at any time, in case a fire should break out within the corporation limits, provided any part of the plant is in operation at the time the fire breaks out.

SEC. 5. In consideration for such service party of the second part shall pay or cause to be paid to party of the first part on the first week day after the first regular Council meeting of the Village of Tecumseh occurring in each calendar month, such sum as shall be due the party of the first part for the previous calendar month or fractional part thereof, according to the following terms, namely: Five dollars ($5,00) each per lamp per calendar month for twenty (20) arc lamps and each additional lamp that shall be hereafter ordered by party of the second part.

SEC. 6 Failure of the party of the first part to comply with the conditions of this contract shall constitute forfeiture of the franchise, unavoidable delays excepted.

SEC. 7. It is hereby mutually agreed that the provisions of this contract shall continue in full force and effect for a period of five years from the date of first lighting.

Dated, this 14th day of April, A. D. 1890.

Village of Tecumseh, Mich.
Council Room, April 9, 1890.

Adjourned session.

Present, President Heesen, Trustees Ames, Elliott, Heck, James, Kennedy Smith and the recorder.

The minutes on the last adjourned meetings were read and approved.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS

The marshal reported that he has furnished lodgings for 32 tramps during the past year. Report accepted.

The sexton reported two adult and two infant interments for March, and 4 lots sold. Accompanying his report was treasurer's receipt for $12,00 interment fees and vault rent, and the following notes and payment for cemetery lots:—Note of Laverne M. Ide and William Ide, for $50 in payment of Lot 9, Block O. Note of Wm. Chiverall and H. E. Stout for $35,00, in payment of lot 7, Block D. Note of Mary E Turner and J. R. Fowler, $35,00, in payment of W½ of lot 28, Block O.

On motion all the above notes were accepted.

PETITIONS AND APPLICATIONS.

The following persons presented applications for the position of street commissioner:—Albert Hyde, Wm. Owen, Abijah Packard, Cunningham Patterson, A. L. Millis.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following bills were presented and referred to the finance committee:—

E. Howell, lumber, $29.56; T. R. Kyle, marshal, $4.00; C. A. Slayton, coal, $6.25; Jehiel Davidson, making assessment, $15,00; C. F. Field, printing, $2.00; Dr. S Catlin, services as health officer, $15.00; E. A. Hodges, street labor, $10,00; Bert Bartolomew, street labor, 4.62.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The finance committee reported favorably on the above bills as read and on motion orders were directed drawn on the treasurer for the several amounts.

On motion the council proceeded to elect, by ballot, marshal for the ensuing year. T. R Kyle received five votes and Samuel Haight 1 vote. T. R. Kyle, having received a majority of all the votes cast was declared duly elected village marshal for the ensuing year.

On motion the council proceeded to elect by ballot street commissioner for the ensuing year.

The first ballot resulting in no choice; a second ballot was ordered with the following result:—

Whole number of votes cast seven, of which E. A. Hodges received 4, Albert Hyde, Jr. 1, A. L. Millis 1, blank 1.

E. A. Hodges, having received a majority of all the votes cast was declared elected street commissioner for the ensuing year.

The council then proceeded to elect a health officer for the ensuing year. The whole number of votes cast was seven, of which Dr. Samuel Catlin received 5, and Dr. Frost received 2. Dr. Catlin was declared elected health officer for the ensuing year.

On motion A. James was appointed purchasing agent for the ensuing year.

The Council then adjourned.

C. F. FIELD, Recorder.

DIED.—In Flint, on the night of April 8th, 1890, of pneumonia, Ralph Train, only son of Frank M. and M. Josie Calkins, aged 2 years and 5 months. Just a few short days of suffering, and the little life, so full of promise, was ended, the lisping voice was hushed, with "Mamma" fluttering on the dying lips. Yet, while we mourn his loss and miss his winning ways, with little Amy we can say: "Mamma, how glad the Angels must have been to have Ralph come."

She Tells Her Friends.

GENTLEMEN:—The Zoa-Phora which you sent me some time ago, greatly benefitted me, so much so that I have been visiting some who I know need it, and telling them about it. I used to live in Michigan until 5 years ago, and I know the reputation of Zoa-Phora there. That is how I came to send so far for it. I now know its worth by my own experience. I live near the Normal School here and room a great many lady sudents. I learn of a great many who need just such a friend as Zoa-Phora. I never lose an opportunity to recommend it to them, because you see I believe it will do all that you claim for it.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. N. HUTCHINSON,
308 So. Hope St., Los Angeles, Ca

P. S.—Petroleum Balm is good, too. A box of it cured my son of a Salt Rheum sore of a year's standing.

Dr. and Mrs. Peter Hyndman, of Tompkins, Jackson county, are in town to-day, the guests of Mrs. H. R. Clark.

Claude Hubbard, while working at Temple's planing mill Tuesday afternoon, had the misfortune to cut two of his fingers quite badly.

The dry kiln for the Table Co, is now in course of erection. Some of the machinery has arrived and it will soon be placed in position.

A reading of the Council Proceedings for this week will convince the most skeptical that our electric light plant is now an assured fact.

C. C. Travis, of Chicago, the gentleman who will put in the electric light plant, is in town, and gave us a call yesterday. Mr. Travis says he means business, and will begin work at once, as soon as he finds a suitable location.

M. E. Conklin is already in the field with a full line of the Walter A. Wood harvesting machinery, and he intends to push the campaign stronger than ever this season. He will have better machines to sell than ever before, and he expects to sell more of them too.

Mrs. James Boyd, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, has at last given up the weary struggle, and passed peacefully away at 5:30 o'clock yesterday morning. The funeral services will be held at her residence on Pottawatamie street, to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

J. S. Osgood of St. John's objects to having back numbers of the HERALD sent him. He says: "St. Johns is a town of over 3000 inhabitants, has a $50,000 water works plant, $25,000 gas plant, $25,000 electric light plant and the largest table factory in the world, running night and day.

Capt. Charles H. Manly, of Ann Arbor, and Seth Bean, of Adrian, were Monday elected mayors of their respective cities by large majorities. At this time it is easy to discern that one of these gentlemen will be the Democratic nominee for Congress in this district next fall. Manly has the advantage, being a one-armed soldier, an active campaigner and organizer, able and popular, and besides Lenawee county has furnished the nominee for many years past.—Dundee Reporter.

—Our Piano Tuner will be in Tecumseh after April 17, for a few days only. Orders left for him with M. P. Brown will be promptly attended to.

The District Convention of the W. C. T. U. will be held at Hudson, April 22, 23, and 24.

Regular evening services at the churches will begin at half past seven o'clock hereafter.

Street Commissioner Hodges has been doing some good work on Chicago Street this week.

Mr. C. K. Ives is in town this week organizing a local board of the Michigan Savings and Loan Association.

James Lowry gives the people a short sermon on groceries this week. Read his new card, and profit thereby.

Geo. W. Knapp has moved his family back to Tecumseh. That's right. They cannot find a better place for a home.

Wise householders will plant a tree to-morrow and wise business men will plant their spring advertising about the same time.

Macham Bros. have been repairing and remodeling their shop, and they now have a very neat suite of barber and bath rooms.

Captain Chilson went to Toledo last week to put the steamer Townsend in readiness for business. She was to start on her first trip of the season last Monday.

Capt. Wood, of Co. C., is too modest by half. At the last election of regimental officers of the first regiment, he was chosen Lt. Colonel, but declined the honor.

The new Silvers monument has been set up in our cemetery. It is a beautiful piece of marble work and will be a valuable addition to the fine collection already erected there.

Elliott Gray ships five car loads of sheep this week to Manistee. They go to R. G. Peters, who is buying about 5000 ewes to scatter among the "opening" farms of that section.

Dr. C. M. Woodward has been reelected regimental surgeon of the first Reg. M. S. T. It looks as though the Doctor had a life lease on that position, but they couldn't find a better man.

There will be a special meeting of the Odd Fellows Lodge to-morrow, Friday, evening. A full attendance of the members is desired as business of importance will come before the meeting.

The committee appointed last year to make arrangements for the Farmers' club picnic will meet at the HERALD Office next week Saturday, April 26th, at two o'clock. Let every member of the committee be present.

Agricultural College Bulletin No. 57 is at hand. It treats of "Vegetables, comparative tests and methods of culture," and contains much valuable information for the vegetable grower. Any one desiring a copy can obtain it by addressing the Secretary of the college.

Elder Geo. Price, who has been quite poorly all the spring, finally succumbed to old age and took his departure for the better land last Wednesday. The funeral services were held at the family residence on Saturday and were attended by a large concourse of friends and acquaintances. A fitting tribute to his memory will appear in a future issue.

Helen Blythe, who appeared in Tecumseh some years ago and made a great hit, is about to visit our city again with her latest and greatest success, "Mother's Love." Miss Blythe has played this piece from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and in every city she has been bestowed with praise. Mother's Love is a story of hearts and home and is filled with comedy. Those who read the Detroit Free Press of April 11th, know what a success Miss Blythe had in Detroit.

Dr. Bennett will be at the Lilley House on Wednesday, April 23d. Piles! Piles of all kinds and phases, no matter what complications, he cures. Think you he has seen these things for 7 years, every day and hour, and not know what he is talking about? Not one person in ten who thinks he has the piles has anything of the kind; only fever or inflammation with its results. He knows the difference and knows what to do for them. He gets them wholly w l. Go and see him when here.

Keep off the grass.

Rake the front yard.

Put out your onion sets.

Making garden has finally begun about the village.

Friday evening, May 2d, is the date fixed for the annual May party.

D. A. Taylor, advance agent of the Helen Blythe Co., was in town Tuesday.

Arthur H. Usher of Hawarden, Iowa, was the guest of John Wyrill, Tuesday evening.

If you want a good paying position, read the "ad" in another column headed $50—$75 per month.

If you wish to see a good play well put on the boards, go to the Opera House next Saturday evening.

Wolf & Leon's combined orchestra from Toledo, has been engaged for the May Party at the Opera House, May 2.

Julia Wyrill starts to-morrow for Brooklyn, Mich., to work at the millinery business for Mrs. Stacy of that place.

Capt Fred B. Wood has consented to attend the regular weekly drills of Co. C., much to the gratification of the boys.

You ought to attend the Floral and Musical Festival at Detroit next week, because everybody is going and you ought to be in the fashion.

A "First Reg. Military Band" is one of the new enterprises on the tapis just now. We have plenty of material for such a band if it can be properly organized and trained.

Miss Mary Burridge has taken a school in District No. 1 in Hudson, and will be a resident of that township for the coming three months.

The new M. P. church at Cone will be dedicated on Sunday, May 18, Services will commence on Friday evening, the 16th, and continue through Saturday and Sunday.

Last Thursday night Dr. Hamilton got out of bed to get some medicine. He lost his balance and fell, striking his side on the sofa arm and his head on a stand. He was severely bruised and has suffered greatly ever since. His age, 81, makes the case more serious.

Bishop Potter will contribute to Harper's Young People to be published Apr. 8 a paper on "David and Jonathan." This is the first in a Bible story series of articles by prominent divines of different denominations. The articles are to be accompanied by illustrations especially drawn for Harper's Young People by well known French artists.

The boys at the Leroy Mills school house, west of Tecumseh, were playing ball last Thursday, when a club slipped from the hands of one of them and hit the 12 year old son of John A. Smith squarely in the forehead. He was taken home and a doctor called. He had a deep gash just below the hair line, semicircular and as symmetrical as could have been made with a knife. The wound was drawn together with adhesive strips and is doing well.

Anna Fuller will contribute to the number of Harper's Bazar to be published on May 11th a short story called "Old Lady Pratt." It is a sequel to her story entitled "Aunt Betsey's Photograph," which, upon its appearance in a recent number of the Bazar, was hailed as a proof that American literature was about to be enriched by the works of another strong New England genre artist of the school of Harriet Prescott Spafford, Mary E. Wilkins, Sophie Swett, and others.

The Denver Eye, of March 29th, contains the announcement of the death of Wm. M. Dailey. Mr. Dailey was one of the most prominent citizens of that city and state. He was born at Tiffin, Ohio. In 1859 he was carried west in the Pikes Peak excitement. In '60 he entered 160 acres of land in a present sub-division of the city of Denver, and from that day he became one of the leading spirits in the development of the Centennial State. Several years ago, when Mrs. Harriet Tilton removed from Raisin to Denver, her eldest daughter Nellie, attracted his attention and a few months thereafter she became Mrs. Dailey. Nellie's old friends in Tecumseh and Raisin will sleeply sympathize with her, in this, the saddest affliction of her life.

Next Tuesday (April 22), at noon, the great Floral and Musical Charity Festival at Detroit, will be open to the public for a four day exhibition. It will be the greatest and most attractive 25 cent exhibition ever projected in America. It will be a unique exhibition in at least one respect; no "voting" or "selling of chances" will be allowed. You can see the whole show without being importuned to buy. There is a rule that no one will allowed outside the booths to solicit from purchasers. Meals can be obtained in the building, at the refreshment room, on the lower floor of the armory building. This room will be conducted by Detroit society ladies.

HIGH SCHOOL HAPPENINGS.

Ernest Gamble, who has been attending the University, is home on a vacation, and gave us a call last Thursday morning.

The flag was hoisted at half-mast from our building April 15th, the anniversary of Lincoln's death. It is also floating to day (Thursday), the anniversary of the battle of Lexington, April 17, 1775.

The second issue of the Breeze will be published the last of this week. Get your subscription money ready.

German II took final examination in "Wilhelm Tell" Tuesday.

Mr. Egan, one of the teachers of the Ann Arbor High School, visited our department Wednesday.

The Seniors held a class meeting Monday, after the close of school.

Miss Edith Pilbeam was detained from school last week, on account of the death of her grandfather.

Don Bowen delivered an oration on the subject, "Twists," Monday morning, and Charlie Hastings one on "Using Both Hands" Wednesday morning.

Al. Heesen gave us a short call Tuesday afternoon.

THE MAY PARTY.

Preparations are in progress for a May Party, to be given at the Opera House on Friday evening, May 2d. Arrangements have been made with Leon & Wolff to bring their combined orchestra here, which is composed of the finest musical talent to be obtained. The committees in charge are figuring on a short musical program, to be given early in the evening before the dance; the dance itself to commence about 8:30 with the usual grand march. Mr. Tony Leon has been engaged for that evening to execute on the drums, bells and other novelties for which he has so long been noted. No pains will be spared by the committees to make the evening an enjoyable one for all who attend.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our thanks to the neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted and sympathized with us in our recent trial; also to the choir for their services.

Wise, Randolph Wirts and Henri Blumberger, all of whom lost their barns and some of their cattle. Mrs. Wise was so badly burned that she is now in a precarious condition. She attempted to rescue one of her husband's horses and stayed too long.

There are reports of agitation in Germany and France, due to apprehension that the McKinly tariff bill will seriously affect the exporting business of those countries with the United States, and merchants interested propose to bring influence to bear to secure, if possible, modifications of its schedule.

OVER THE SEA.

THE CONSERVATIVE PARTY'S ATTITUDE TOWARD IRELAND.

What John Bright Advocated—Australia Asking for a New Government—Intense Feeling Over the Execution of Richard Davies.

LONDON, April 14.—[Copyright to the United Press].—A leading member of the Conservative party in Parliament said: We are not at all united in favor of either district councils for Ireland, or assisted education, and I think that in principle it would be quite as easy to win our support to a strong Irish local government bill provided there was any prospect of showing that it would be likely to be accepted willingly and worked fairly. This is an example of the character which the discussion of the Irish land bill is likely to assume. There are powerful members of the government who have been understood to suggest that in order to prolong the life of this Parliament, Ireland should be let alone after the present session, and that the questions of assisted education and district councils should engage the attention of an intermediate session, mainly because of the danger of dealing with Irish government. One thing is certain, that the Parnell commission report and Lord Randolph Churchill's recent speech and letters have driven all idea of dissolution as a stroke of party policy, from the minds of the managers on the side of the government.

As the great name and authority of the late Mr. John Bright are certain to be cited in support of Mr. Balfour's Irish land purchase bill, it is well to state what was the position that Mr. Bright took on this subject in the later years of his career. He was then emphatically opposed to any great scheme of land purchase, such as is now contemplated by the members of Lord Salisbury's administration. In corroboration of this assertion Liberals refer to the letter that was addressed by Mr. Bright to the Earl of Kilmorey in 1887. This letter is dated "One Ash, Rochdale, November 11," and was printed in the London Times November 14. In this communication, Mr. Bright says: "I do not agree with those who are saying so much about the dual ownership, as if there is great importance in that phrase. The land act of 1881, and the land courts have given fifteen year leases to the tenants at a rent fixed by the courts during the period of fifteen years. To me there seems no reason why, under these leases, landlord and tenant should not live in as much harmony as they have lived in past times under ordinary leases in Ireland, and as they live now in Great Britain. As to further legislation," continued Mr. Bright, "I cannot see the reason for any sweeping measure of purchase. The idea of buying up or buying out the proprietary class seems to me monstrous, unnecessary and unjust."

Radical criticism of the Irish land bill dismisses Mr. Balfour's guarantees as illusory. He would not be given five years in which to get his insurance fund for the tenant. He will not be able to collect his instalments if the word goes forth from the National league to hold them. If it came to the pinch, he could not withdraw grants for education from Irish schools, nor let local government fall into confusion for want of grants in aid of local expenditure. The bill will be challenged on this head; Mr. Gladstone boldly adopting the principle that the only security for such an advance as Mr. Balfour proposes to make is in a home rule parliament. Then the "Gift" to the tenant is to be very seriously challenged and finally the whole bill will be held up to scorn as one vitiated in its scope by reason of the fact that the real representative of the Irish people are admitted to no share in the working of it. The whole Gladstonian party is opposed to the bill and the opposition to it is growing. By the time the measure comes up for second reading there will be a compact party determined to destroy as much of it as they can if possible to destroy it altogether.

The delegates from western Australia, who came here to assist in furthering the scheme for federation, are thoroughly disgusted at their experience and are returning home without presenting their case. They have waited in London, at great expense, for four months expecting to be called before the committee of the House of Commons having the matter in charge to aid in the preparation of a bill providing for their alleged needs. No such summons has come to them, and the neglect of Parliament to consider their demands has greatly increased the general desire in western Australia for autonomy.

The execution of Richard Davies, while his equally guilty brother, George, was spared, has raised an intense popular feeling in favor of the abolishment of capital punishment. The foreman of the jury which found the Davies brothers guilty of the murder of their father, has organized an anti-capital punishment society and opened a central office in Liverpool for the purpose of systematically agitating the question eliminating that relic of barbarism from the statutes.

The preparations for the resumption of evictions from the Ponsonby estate at Youghal, County Cork, on Monday, are complete. One hundred and seventy writs have been served and the prospective evictees are every whit as determined to remain where they are as the bailiffs and constabulary are to oust them. In view of the mutual tenacity of purpose it is difficult to see how bloodshed can be averted.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January, A.D. 1884, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife, of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan, of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A.D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages, on page 591, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1885, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 29th day of January, A.D., 1899, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in Liber 118 of Mortgages, on page 669; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-one and 12-100 Dollars ($1751.12) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale, and the statutes of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now, as aforesaid, due and owing on said mortgage, together with interest to accrue thereon, and the costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Thirty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the 21st day of April, A.D. 1890, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5) town five (5) south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

Dated Jan. 23d, 1890.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

THE CAT IN STRANGE GARRETS.

Mr. Oliver Sumner Teall, the head of the Republican Volunteer Association and Chairman of the Enrollment Committee of the Ballot Reform League, has been greatly impressed with the earnestness of the single tax workers he has met lately, he never having heard of the "single tax" before the Ballot Reform League was formed. "A principle that will make young and old men work so disinterestedly as does the 'single tax' creed must have some good in it and is worth study," said he.

Landing from the elevated station a few days ago, he met a legal friend, whom he invited to lunch. Reaching the down-town club, and having ordered their viands, Mr. Teall at once broached the subject then weighing on his mind:

"I have lately had my attention called to the land question by meeting several single tax men, and I have come to the conclusion that a principle that makes men act as they do must have some good in it. Now, I want to get some fellow like you to read Henry George's book and give me a cold, disinterested opinion on what the system really amounts to."

"Well, really, Teall, I'd like to oblige you, but the fact is you had better try some one else; for, frankly, I am a thorough single tax man myself."

"You don't mean to tell me you are a tariff reformer, do you?" exclaimed Mr. Teall, astonished.

"Oh, no," said his friend; "I am a tariff abolitionist."

A friend of the single tax has lately been called by the needs of his business among the coffee brokers of the metropolis. A few days ago, after having made to one of these a sale of the patent gas-burner which he is engaged in selling, he felt tired, and, seeing that things were quiet in the office of his customer, he observed, "How do you find business, Mr. Blank?"

"Very dull indeed," was the reply.

"No signs of the boom, eh?" queried our friend.

His customer looked up at him with a keen glance to see if he were joking; and, seeing the calm and childlike expression, always characteristic of the single tax inquirer, irradiating his countenance, sneeringly said: "You mean the Harrison boom, don't you?"

"Yes, yes, the Harrison boom. It don't appear to have struck you yet."

"Nary a boom has come down our street," said the coffee man, "since his grandfather's grandson got into Cleveland's shoes. How in thunder can you expect a boom when it takes three bushels of a Kansas farmer's corn to buy a pound of coffee?"

And then our single tax man saw he had got into a Democratic den and said, "You must be a free trader?"

"Yes, I'm a free trader absolute," answered the coffee man. "I don't take any stock in custom-houses."

"But how would you raise the revenues for the Government?" said our friend.

"Oh," said the coffee man, "I would raise them by a direct tax on the values of the land."

And then the grin of the cat grew broad and wide.

President L. F. Post of the Manhattan Single Tax Club, is astonished, large as is his experience, at the crop of new single tax men. He has lately taken a contract to get together his personal friends among the club's membership for one of the many excellent objects dear to the organization, and so he has been lately overhauling the roster of the club. In the course of his labors he came across a familiar name, and the next day met in the street a gentleman of the same name, but known to him as a bright light in Tammany Hall—a district leader, president of the Jefferson Club of his district and an uncompromising Democrat, whom Mr. Post had always rated as one of the Hill persuasion.

"How are you, Post? Merry Christmas and all the compliments," said his friend.

"Same to you and many returns," replied the genial Louis. "By the way, is there any other lawyer in New York of your name?"

"Not to my knowledge."

"Are your initials 'W. J. L.?'" continued Post.

"Why, yes. But why do you ask?"

"Because, then, you must be a member of the Manhattan Single Tax Club."

"Oh, yes! I'm a member."

"Well, I've lately been elected president and I want to ask as a favor that my personal acquaintances should come round to meetings and give us the benefit of their presence and advice. We want the club to prosper and increase; and now that meetings are only once a month, cannot I count on you coming?"

"I'll be there," said W. J. L., and then they shook hands and parted.

A single tax man visiting a hospitable Republican family in the State of Delaware, and being asked by a Democratic relative of the family to explain the single tax, was promptly and warmly seconded in his defense of the idea by two of the Republican members of the family. A third brother listened with much interest to the discussion, and declared the single tax at first sight to be remarkably fascinating. A retired physician in the same town spoke admirably of Mr. George, and was much impressed with his reception in Europe.

MONTANA'S ONLY HOPE.

"Montana must submit to the domination of the Northern Pacific Railroad or adopt the single tax," says Mr. Kennedy, writing from Boulder. In order to understand Mr. Kennedy's declaration it is necessary that the relations of the Northern Pacific Railway Company to the new State should be known. When the charter was granted to that company it contained a clause providing that where its line ran through States the corporation was to receive from the Government each alternate section for twenty miles on both sides of the roadway, but that where the line line ran through a Territory, the Government grant should be doubled. The result was that which might have been expected. The Northern Pacific built no road through a State where, by any possibility, it could manage to build through a Territory. Some of these Territories have since become States, Montana among them, but the new sovereignty with which they are endowed does not enable them to recover the enormous belt of their soil given by this extravagant grant to the Northern Pacific road. The company still owns the most of the tremendous belt of land that was once estimated at forty-two millions of acres, and the value of which at the present time runs into hundreds of millions.

Nevertheless, each alternate strip in that great belt belongs to the people, which, according to the logic of the great railway corporation, is equivalent to saying that it belongs to nobody. This is a condition of affairs that the land grabber abhors as it used to be said nature abhors a vacuum. But the Northern Pacific people are leaving no stone unturned to put an end to this condition, even if they find that they must themselves assume the burden of owning a strip of land eighty miles wide and running almost entirely through the new State of Montana. All of the existing influence in the Federal Government is on the side of the land grabber, and Montana, State though she now is, stands practically defenseless while a great corporation, backed by all of the power of the Federal Government, is preparing to rob her people of their heritage.

One thing, however, Montana can do, with which the Federal Government has no power to interfere, and that is to tax, and to tax, and to continue to tax, the growing land value of that great belt, until the Northern Pacific shall either pour into her treasury all of its profits from the grab, or else release the land to settlers who are willing to pay the people of Montana for its use, in order that they may establish upon it homes for themselves and families. Mr. Kennedy sees clearly the solution, and the only solution, of Montana's difficulty, and happily he is a man capable of making others to see with him. It was he who, as a single tax member of the Legislature, introduced the Australian bill which has since become a law, and it was to his zeal, vigilance and energy that the measure owed its success. Now let him carry on the fight, and the land grabbing propensities of the Northern Pacific and the aquiescent attitude of the cormorant administration at Washington may pave a way for enabling Montana to lead in the application of the single tax.—New York Standard.

To all well-wishers of the farmer and of the laborer we recommend the above article from the New York Standard. It deserves their careful thought. It points the road out of the mire into which alien and non-resident landownership has put us. In every county of the West there are great bodies of land held for speculative purposes, and the problem of freeing the farmer from debt resolves itself into this other question: "How can we open these lands now held for speculation, so that the farmer who wants to improve land can get at it?" The Single Tax will do this.

Overproduction.

Yes, this country has raised too much. There may be something in the overproduction theory after all. There is an overproduct of mortgages. There is a crop that no insect has ever yet attacked; drouth has not withered it, nor floods drowned it out. The money power has planted it on the richest soils, cultivated it with the most assiduous care, and most copiously watered it with the scalding tears of humanity. —Arkansas Economist.

In Arkansas the proportion of farmers in debt in the cotton region is 75 per per cent., and in the grain and grass region 35 per cent. The most of the labor is performed by the tenant or share-hand farmer. He rents the land at from $6 to $10 per acre, or works for part of the crop. The risk on him being great, the merchants score him from 50 to 100 per cent.; in other words it costs him two-thirds more to live than if he had cash.—Memphis Appeal.

Some days since, at a meeting not a hundred miles from New York, a single tax speaker was earnestly exhorting his audience. Straying into proverbial phrase, he exclaimed, slightly mixing, a la Dundreary, his proverbs: "You cannot dig pearls from sow's ears." And so intent was the audience on the "problem" that they never even smiled.

FORGIVENESS AND LOVE.

LESSON III, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 20.

Text of the Lesson, Luke vii, 36-50—Commit Verses 47-50—Golden Text, I John iv, 19—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

36. "And one of the Pharisees desired Him that He would eat with him. And He went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat." The incident of this lesson, like that of the last one, is recorded only by Luke, and seems to have occurred at the same place, the city of Nain. The principal intervening events were the sending of messengers to Jesus by John the Baptist, who was in prison; the miracles wrought by Jesus in their presence, and the testimony of Jesus concerning John after the messengers had departed. He also rebuked the people because of their treatment of John and of Himself, saying that John had a devil and that Jesus was a glutton and wine bibber and friend of publicans and sinners.

37. "And, behold, a woman in the city, which was a sinner." We do not know her name. This is the only place where the record is found and her name is not given. The only name given to her is "sinner," and that fits us all (Rom. iii, 23; v, 12). She may have been more openly a sinner than others, and have wandered farther from the paths of virtue, but she was one of those whom Jesus came to save; and in some way she had been convicted of her sinfulness and filled with a spirit of true penitence.

38. "And stood at His feet behind Him weeping," etc. Reclining as they did at table, as she came behind Him, she could easily stand at His feet, and, bending over them, wash them with her tears.

39. "Now when the Pharisee which had bidden Him saw it, he spake within himself." He might as well have said it out, for Jesus knew his thoughts. He knows ours, too (Ps. cxxxix, 2; Ezek. xi, 5), and we need constantly to pray that He would cleanse the thoughts of our hearts.

40. "And Jesus, answering, said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee." Our very thoughts need answering, and the Word of God is equal to it. Vain thoughts lodge within us, and was to our time and hinder our service, but there is a remedy, "The Word of God" (Jer. iv, 14; xxix, 11; Luke xxiv, 38). There are seven or eight different Simons in the New Testament history besides Simon Peter, but this is the only mention of this one.

41, 42. "When they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me, therefore, which of them will love him most?" In this story of the creditor and two debtors Jesus would teach Simon somewhat of the relations in which he and the woman stood to God. Not that the indebtedness of Simon and the woman was as fifty compared with five hundred, but that was about the way Simon looked at it. He might be willing to acknowledge that he was not as good as he ought to be, but here was a woman whom everybody knew to be a great sinner.

43. "Simon answered and said, I suppose that he to whom he forgave most. And He said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged." Any one could see that the one who was conscious of owing five hundred, being freely forgiven, would feel under much greater obligation to the creditor than the one owing only fifty; and thus Simon answered rightly. A deep sense of sin, a consciousness of our great indebtedness to God, is an invaluable blessing. May not the lack of this be the cause of so little manifest love to God on the part of those who profess to be His?

44-46. "And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman?" Simon was no doubt surprised to have the thoughts of his heart revealed. The poor woman is no doubt surprised to have Jesus turn in compassion to her. To be allowed to caress and anoint His feet was a great joy, but to have Him turn His face to her, and notice her, and commend her, mentioning every loving act before all the people, and placing her in His estimation above Simon himself, surely now her heart was full. What condemnation for Simon; what glory for her. How great the contrast! The host who invited Him did not treat Him with common courtesy, much less with any degree of honor; no water, no kiss, no oil; no refreshing, no welcome, no gladness from Simon. But this poor sinner, broken hearted because of her sins, ministers to Him with penitential tears and the true oil of gladness from a loving heart. Here is a foreshadowing of a future day when many a self righteous one shall be confounded and many a poor contrite one gloriously rewarded.

47. "Wherefore I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven." Good for the poor woman, but what about Simon and his sins? In his own estimation he had none worth mentioning, none that needed special pardon, and Jesus came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance. If Simon could have had a glimpse of his own heart as Jesus saw it, he too would have had a broken heart and have meekly sought forgiveness. But he was blind, and with salvation within his reach, even in his own house, he sees not his need and goes without, little thinking that the man who now sat at his table, ready and able to save him, was indeed Israel's Messiah.

48. "And He said unto her, Thy sins are forgiven." She heard Him say it to Simon, and if her heart was full before it was surely overflowing now; but could it be true, did she hear aright? He turns again to her, looks into her face, and says directly to herself, "Thy sins are forgiven." Now she is sure; He has looked upon her; He has spoken to her; she believes that He is Israel's Messiah, and now He has become her Saviour and her soul can say, "Thine anger (not with her, but with her sin) is turned away, and thou comfortest me, for Thou art become my salvation" (Isa. xii, 1, 2). Has He spoken to you in such words as these, "I write unto you because your sins are forgiven you, for His Name's sake?" (I John ii, 12.) And has your heart overflowed with love to Him because of His great salvation so freely bestowed? If not, come closer to him; hear His "Come unto Me," and hearing and coming rejoice in His "Not cast out" (Matt. xi, 28; John vi, 37).

49. "And they that sat at meat with Him began to say within themselves, Who is this that forgiveth sins also?" They knew Him not; they, too, were blind like Simon; there was no forgiveness for them either, although it was within their reach. A reasoning, questioning spirit draws no blessing from Him, but only a broken and contrite and believing spirit, and this they had not. They were well satisfied with themselves. What a mystery this is! God manifest in the flesh, healing the sick, raising the dead, fulfilling the prophecies concerning the Messiah, such as Isa. xxxv, 5, 6, as well as those in reference to His birth and place of birth (Isa. vii, 14; Mic. v, 2), yet they know Him not. The hungry he fills with good things, but the rich he sends empty away (Luke i, 53). Publicans and harlots enter the kingdom before such self righteous Pharisees. God hath chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, to be heirs of His kingdom (James ii, 5).

Is Consumption Incurable?

Read the following: Mr C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark: says: "Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an Incurable Consumptive Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made."

Jesse Middlewart, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption I would have died of Lung troubles. Was given up by doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. Sample, bottles free.

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidney, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles should remember that no other remedy in the world will so spedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

C. S. Burroughs and family are once more residents of our village, he having sold out his interests in Kokomo, Ind. We understand Mr. Burroughs will commence the manufacture of a medicated gum very soon.

Mr. Wiley Mills, son of Wright Mills, stopped off here a few days to visit old acquaintances. He was on his way from Holland to attend the inter-collegiate Prohibition meeting at Adrian as delegate from Hope College.

The ladies of St. John's working society will hold their annual meeting at the residence of Mrs. Wm. C. Rogers, on Saturday afternoon, April 19. All ladies connected with, or interested in the Church are invited to be present.

Bishop Davies, of St. John's Episcopal Church, will make his first visit to Clinton on Tuesday, April 29th. There will be confirmation at the Church in the evening. The Bishop will be entertained by Mrs. E. R Smith, who will give an informal reception at her residence, from 3 to 5 P. M. All are invited.

As I have use for my iron kettle, the party that borrowed it will confer a favor by returning the same to EDWIN R. SMITH.—In Clinton Local.

Be sure your buttons are well sewed on when you attend the entertainment at Town Hall, April 11—Clinton Local.

Be sure also to wear a boiler-iron jacket, and a base-ball screen, to secure your ribs and eyes from the elbows of the throng. You are three deep, you know, when the little hall holds the town.—Adrian Press.

Horace Eddy, son of Crowell Eddy, of this place, who was reported as lost a few weeks ago, has been found, safe and sound. He had started from his home in Iowa to go to Denver, Col., but on the way his mind became deranged, and instead of reaching his destination he turned up in Cheyenne where his friends found him. He is all right now and he and his wife are expected here in a few days.

Dr. Charlie and his Indiana Sagwa Co. struck our village last Sunday, driving here from Britton. They have rented the Town Hall for two weeks and will give a concert every evening except Sunday, for the small sum of 5cts. admission. There are some good comedians with them. Dr. Charlie himself is an interesting talker and will no doubt convince many of the excellence of their Indian medicines.

Don't give up, there is a cure for catarrh and cold in the head. Thousands testify that Ely's Cream Balm has entirely cured them. It is a safe and pleasant remedy. It is applied into the nostrils. It is not a liquid or snuff. It cures by cleansing and healing. Price 50.

Sought for the last hundred years. A remedy for catarrh, hay fever and cold in the head found at last in Ely's Cream Balm. Safe and pleasant to use and easily applied into the nostrils. It gives relief at once and a thorough treatment positively cures. Price 50

February last THE GAZETTE adopted the pay in advance plan. Last week—two months later, mark ye—we placed an order for a burglar and fireproof safe, large enough to hold $4,000,000. County papers, please copy—the example, not this item.—Hudson Gazette.

David Lockhart, of Wright, is one of the multitude of heirs who are entitled to the estate of Philip John, of Pembrokeshire, Wales. The estate is worth $80,000,000, but it will probably never increase the wealth of America. Those big estates never do.—Morenci Observer.

Will Ross, of Chesterfield, has rented ten acres of land owned by O. D. Griffith at North Morenci, on which he will raise watermelons this season. He had special experience in watermelon raising while at Benton Harbor, Mich., and will make shipments to Detroit.—Morenci Observer.

Miss Agnes Gilbert was a teacher in the Litchfield schools for several years, but early in 1889 she was dismissed after one week's work. Miss Gilbert sued the school district and has just been awarded judgment for the salary she would have earned had she been permitted to complete her contract—Hudson Gazette.

The Hudson Post names a Hillsdale county man who is posessor of a pocket-knife said to be sixty years old. Mr. Charles Cole Sr., of this place can go him at least eleven years better, and submits the instrument in evidence of the same. Addison is ahead yet with its exhibit of the antique. Who comes next?—Addison Courier.

The republican party assumes the god-mothership of the colored man, and Tecumseh is a sissing-hot republican town. Yet Bernard Tyrrell was unable to solve "The Race Problem" there because of the apathy of the god-mother toward one of the most illustrious of her wards. He had no audience.—Adrian Press.

Will Carlton, the Wolverine poetry-maker, was in Hudson, his old home, last week. Will now holds up his titled head with the snobbiest aristocrats of Brooklyn, N. Y. Thus it falls out that some gain honor and fame by going "Over the Hills to the Poor House," and others a place on the University dissecting table. Predestination has something to do with the figure we cut in the world.—Adrian Press.

A Hudson business man has a horse which has reasons to remember with sadness the Lenten season. Last fall the owner, who had no use for the animal during the winter, made arrangements for his keeping in the country. A short time ago a boy returned the horse, and put it in its owner's barn without notifying anyone of his doing so. Twelve days after some of the family went to the barn, where they found the animal, which had during the time been without food or water. The horse is now doing well, but has a little of the appearance of a walking skeleton.

The Blissfield Advance, noting the explosion of the gasoline car-tank, when John Miller peered into it by the aid of a lantern, offers its belief that "the result will admonish the farmers thereabouts to hereafter get their oil by daylight and not monkey around a gasoline tank." Well, perhaps, but how when a man wants to rob a railroad tank, is he going to know gasoline from oil, in the dark, without the aid of a glim? Miller might have got gasoline and blowed up his family instead of himself and the tank, but for his provident act in sticking in a lantern.

RANDALL.

Death of the Ex-Speaker of the House.

THE SOLDIER-STATESMAN GOES TO HIS FINAL AWARD.

The Senior Representative in Congress Dies in Harness, Mourned by the Entire Nation He Loved and Served so Well—Sketch of America's Aristides, Who Left no Property but Bequeathed an Unsullied Name to His Stricken Family.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Samuel Jackson Randall died Sunday morning at his residence in this city at 5 o'clock. He was born in Philadelphia October 10, 1828, received an academic education; engaged in mercantile pursuits; was a member of the city councils of Philadelphia four years; was a member of the State Senate of Pennsylvania in 1858 and '59; was elected to the Thirty-eighth, Thirty-ninth, Fortieth, Forty-first, Forty-second, Forty-third, Forty-fourth, Forty-fifth, Forty-sixth, Forty-seventh, Forty-eighth, Forty-ninth, Fiftieth and Fifty-first congresses. He was elected speaker of the House for the last session of the Forty-fourth, and re-elected for the Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth. He was the oldest congressman in continuous service, having been a member twenty-eight years.

S. J. RANDALL.

As chairman of the House committee on appropriations in 1875-6 he succeeded in reducing the expenditures several millions of dollars, and has since been a consistent advocate of retrenchment. He was the recognized Democratic leader of the House except as his "protectionist" views in some quarters hampered his leadership. In 1884 he greatly distinguished himself by his opposition to the Morrison tariff bill, which was defeated by a narrow vote. He subsequently opposed the Mills bill and took grounds against President Cleveland's tariff message. In 1884 he traveled in the south, and was warmly received by the people. He had been prominently spoken of as a candidate for the Presidency, and was one of those brought forward in the Democratic National convention of 1880 and 1884.

He entered congress in 1862 and died a poor man, his little house and lot being encumbered with a mortgage. While other statesmen amassed great wealth in public life, this American Aristides, who for years directed the financial legislation of the House, died with no legacy to his wife and children but an unsullied name, a pure character uncontaminated with the venality jobs and peculation.

He served in the Union army in 1861, '62, and '63, and was a member of the G. A. R., which, in common with the whole land, mourns the decease of the honest statesman and brave soldier.

HIS SERVICE AS A SOLDIER.

While he was in the legislature the war broke out. The call for 90 day men was answered by Senator Randall in person. He was a private in the first city troop of Philadelphia, Captain James commanding. As soon as the call for troops was made by the national government, in April, 1861, the troop answered and a month later was mustered into service for three months. The company became part of the command of Colonel, afterward the distinguished General, George H. Thomas. It was while serving under Thomas that Randall made the recommendation at Washington that led to the recognition of his commander's superior soldiership and the advancement to the line of general officers. Private Randall returned from his first term of service as Orderly Sergeant Randall, and although he was elected to congress in 1862, and his name is shown as a member of every congress since that time, his military record was not all made up until after Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania in 1863. It is not generally known that he saw service at Gettysburg, participating in the battle as commander of one of the Philadelphia troops that answered the call for the state's militia so take the field. But the man's innate modesty prevented any reference to his war record by himself, as a rule. Yet it is stated that on a certain occasion, in debate, his opponent made a contemptuous allusion to the effect that Randall never saw a battlefield. The Democratic leader's face broke into a smile, and the House was swept by a burst of laughter. Mistaking the cause of the merriment, his opponent returned to the attack and was only prevented from continuing in the same strain by a friend, who pulled his coat-tails and whispered: "Sit down; you're making an ass of yourself."

HIS RELATIONS WITH MR. TILDEN.

Speaker Kerr died in the summer of 1876, and when congress met in December it was necessary to elect his successor for the unexpired congressional term. Mr. Randall was selected by the Democratic caucus over S. S. Cox, of New York, who died in the autumn of last year. The vote stood Randall 78, Cox 68. When the election took place the country was throbbing with excitement over a disputed presidential election. Mr. Randall was chosen by the friends of Governor Tilden to go with other prominent Democrats to Louisiana and have an eye upon the tricks of the returning board. While in New Orleans he did much by his presence and counsel to encourage the Democrats to fight for their rights before the commission. On his return he was elected speaker, and a controlling influence in the choice was the general desire of the Democrats to have a clear-headed and quick-witted man in the chair, one who would not be bullied in the proceeding preliminary to and attending the electoral count. This confidence in Randall was well justified. If the white feather was shown by any Democrat in that period of doubt, dread and final defeat of the opposition, Samuel J. Randall was not the man who showed it. And such was the record of this man's service always—a record read of all men, for he has not lived in silence nor in the dark.

ALWAYS A POWER IN CONGRESS.

Throughout his long congressional career he has been one of the political powers at the national capital. His distinguished characteristics as a representative have been unswerving loyalty to his constituents, forceful aggressiveness, parliamentary knowledge, keenness in debate and brilliancy of repartee. With all he was modest and unassuming, and made many friends by his geniality and courtesy of manner. At the time of his entry into congress, and for a number of years thereafter, the Democrats were in a hopeless minority, and all that Mr. Randall could do in the way of public service was to make his mark as an efficient committeeman. It was not until the minority grew strong enough to have confidence in itself that he made a profound impression upon the House as a ready debater, an expert in parliamentary practice and a fighter who, always fighting until he was whipped, could still snap his fingers in the face of defeat. In the Forty-first congress he was the moving power in the committee on elections and the joint committee on retrenchment. His next advance was in the Forty second congress, when his force of character and his parliamentary skill brought him forward as a member of the committee on rules, the other members being Speaker Blaine, ex-Speaker Banks, General Garfield and S. S. Cox.

HIS CHARACTERISTICS.

Samuel J. Randall was one of the great legislators of the present century. During a greater portion of the time in which he was a prominent figure in public life he exercised a marked influence in the affairs of state, not only in Keystone Commonwealth but in the country at large. From cradle to grave he was a Pennsylvanian, and through long service in various representative capacities his name had become inseparablp associated with the political history of his state for a full quarter of a century. He was born with qualities naturally adaptable to the lines of the life he led, and his legislative career seems to have been a rare exemplification of the law of natural selection.

PERSONAL AND FAMILY MATTERS.

Individually, Mr. Randall was a man who would attract in any company, and yet he was not a man of imposing presence. He was a shade over medium height, broad-shouldered and loose-limbed; beardless, close shaven and smooth-skinned as a child. His eyes were black and piercing, but their powers of expression were modified somewhat by near-sightedness. The most prominent sign of the man's character, displayed in his features, was his fine mouth. His natural inclination was to smile and reveal a fine set of teeth, but it shut with a snap and expressed unalterable determination when firmness and force of character were demanded by circumstance. Under the impulse of antagonism the characteristic smile of boyish frankness that usually dwelt upon his face would be obscured in an instant by a cloud as black as thunder. Such transformation would be marvelous and when these moods were on him there was no danger of his being taken for the chaplain of the house, as he frequently was mistaken by strangers visiting in Washington. But ordinarily he was a man of smiles, and nobody who has seen him laugh heartily will ever think of him with that other look.

In his domestic relations he was as happy as such a man deserved to be. Early in life he married a daughter of General Aaron Ward, of Sing Sing, N. Y., who was a gentleman of means, education and travel, and who gave his children every advantage. Mrs. Randall has been, in every sense, a help-meet for her husband, and their domestic circle was completed by three children—Annie, Susan and Samuel J. Randall, jr. The eldest, Annie, is the wife of C. C. Lancaster, Esq., a Washington attorney. Mrs. Randall's receptions were always well attended, and while marked by extreme simplicity, were famously enjoyable.

RELIC OF SLAVERY.

Interesting Case in the Supreme Court of Virginia.

RICHMOND, VA., April 14.—A curious case been decided by the Supreme Court of appeals of this state. Under this decision Alice Davis, the wife of a negro attorney of Washington, becomes the legal owner of $10,000 worth of Virginia real estate, which was the property of her father, Mr. Strange, a well-to-do and respected citizen of Lynchburg. Alice was the natural daughter of Mr. Strange and her mother was a negress. The girl was, however, treated as one of the family by Mr. and Mrs. Strange. Her father sent her to Washington, where she received a liberal education and qualified herself as teacher, which calling she pursued several years.

Her father always promised that he would liberally provide for the girl and his wife upon her death bed made him pledge her to do so. He gave Alice some property in Washington and $10,000 worth of real estate in Virginia. When a married daughter found this out she and her husband worked on Mr. Strange until he finally persuaded Alice to reconvey the property. She did it with reluctance. Her father gave his daughter $250, and a week later he died. Alice was not provided for in the will.

The deed of reconveyance was set aside by the Supreme Court because of undue influence.

DOWN IN LAKE ERIE.

The Steamer Chenango Sinks—The Crew Missing.

ERIE, PA., April 14.—The steamer Chenango, bound from Toledo to Buffalo with 60,000 bushels of grain, took fire off Erie last night and sunk in four fathoms of water. The singular part of the affair is that her crew is missing. A few hats left floating over the wreck today gives rise to the suspicion that the crew perished. The vessel was sighted off Erie by the life saving crew on the Beach patrol, and when the life savers went out they found no one aboard. The unlucky craft went down a couple hours later. The vessel was built in Detroit three years ago at a cost of $60,000, and was owned by C. D. Waterman, of Grosse, Mich. It is believed that the crew was taken off by a passing vessel.

A Friend to Humanity.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The present of the medal authorized by congress to Joseph Francis, inventor of the life saving car took place at the White House yesterday morning. Senator Evarts in an appropriate speech recounted the story of Mr. Francis' life, and presented him to the President, who presented the medal with a few fitting remarks. The medal weighs over three pounds, and is of almost absolutely pure gold. It was executed at the Philadelphia mint, and is said to be one of the finest things of its kind ever made. It bears a medallion of Mr. Francis on one face and on the reverse contains a shipwreck scene with the life car in use.

in your grocer's hand and get a package of PYLE'S PEARLINE—the original and best Washing Compound. It will save you time, trouble, health, wear and tear, which cannot be computed in dollars.

It's better—easier—quicker than soap for washing clothes and housecleaning; if that's not true, what becomes of the many, many millions of packages sold annually? What induces the hundreds of imitations? Did it ever occur to you as strange that almost every imitation of Pearline is given a name ending in INE? A "wolf in sheep's clothing" trick; depend upon it, their tricks don't stop there. Peddlers and unscrupulous or misinformed grocers will tell you this (an imitation) is as "good as Pearline," "same as Pearline," etc., etc. It's false—there's nothing like Pearline—nothing as good as Pearline. Why?—that's our secret—but you will recognize and share the benefit of that secret when you use Pearline. 163 JAMES PYLE, New York.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Whelan are home from Florida.

George Allen is recovering from a severe attack of erysipelas.

Ed. Wisner has a severe attack of what seems to be the grippe.

Elijah Allen has bought of Jehiel Wisner the place formerly owned by David Burroughs.

Benj. Lambkin's family are having the grip. Some of the children are under the doctor's care.

Later. Burt Billington arrived home the 18th, accompanied by the faithful Pat, who says he likes Michigan "mighty well" so far.

Mr. and Mrs. George Knapp, of Mt. Pleasant, are visiting Franklin friends. We understand that Mr. Knapp will start in a few days for Oregon.

Mrs. L. E. Taylor is once more at home. The family that has had such a severe trial with measles are now all on the gain; no new cases have occurred as yet.

Mrs. Wm. Cairns, who is now at her sister's, Mrs. Rauc Mills, is having her cancer treated by a physician in Lansing, who gives her every hope of a permanent cure. Under his care she is thought to be improving even now, and greater things are hoped for in the future. She is now able to sit up some.

Mrs. E. J. Whelan has gone to Shiawassee County to visit and care for her sisters, Mrs. Emma Wilson and Mrs. Vinny Eckhart. Diptheria and scarlet fever have been putting in their sad work in that section. Telegraphic dispatches several days since announced the death of Mrs. Eckhart's baby, while Mrs. Wilson's four children were all down, the second girl, little Ethel, thought to be in a dying condition. Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Eckhart are also sick with the disease.

Mrs. Ezra Simmons and Mrs. Bert Billington and children arrived home last Thursday from Cleveland, Tenn. Mrs. Billington's health is still poor, as is also the new baby's. Mr. Billington, accompanied by a faithful negro and a team each of mules and ponies, is somewhere on the road home and is expected Saturday, April 19th. After her husband's departure from Tennessee, and while waiting for the weather to get warmed up in Michigan, so that she dare come home, Lottie wrote the following to her little nephew, Hoyt. The Gould spoken of is Dr. Gould, formerly of Tecumseh.

LATEST PARODY.

I'm getting poor and feeble and I cannot sing no more;
I've hung the rag and dish pan up to rest.
Old Massa and old Pat are gone, they are sleeping side by side
In the covered wagon in the mule train.
The scenes are changed around the place, the boarder now is gone,
And I cannot hear him calling for his grub;
And the only friends I've got now is the dear old mother mine
And four little naughty rascals that I love.

CHO.

The chimney's fallen down and the doors they squeak like sin,
And the roof lets in the sunshine and the rain,
And the only friend I've got now is the dear old mother mine,
In the little old red shanty on Gould's claim.

MACON MUSIC.

Horace Burgess made a business trip over to Adrian last Wednesday.

George Goodrich of Clinton, was in town one day last week taking in the sights.

Edd McKinney and his best girl, of Tecumseh, visited at George Frost's last Saturday night.

M. V. Sickly left for Pennsylvania last Monday, where he will introduce the Colwell washing machine.

Milton Kriedler has been having the stiff neck. O, well, we are all troubled more or less with that disease.

Prof. Huston, Edward Miller and Charlie Allen attended the teacher's examination at Adrian last Saturday.

Supervisor Pennington is already at work taking the assessment, and all that have dogs had better keep them out of sight.

Sabbath school was reorganized at the M. E. Church last Sunday. The officers are as follows:

Supt.—Rev. A. W. Stalker.
Assist. Supt —Spencer Morgan.
Secretary—Bert Day.
Organist—Nettie Crittenden.
Chorister—Isaiah Hendershot.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

People are beginning to wonder if the weather has got "rained out."

Mrs. George Knapp, late of Mount Pleasant, visited her sister, Mrs. Mangus, last week.

Warnie Hampton returned Saturday from a business trip to Detroit and Buffalo.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Peck, from Monroe Co., have been visiting relatives in Tecumseh and Franklin. They returned to their home on Monday last.

Mrs. Edith Hampton, of Fowler, Ind., arrived in Franklin, Saturday evening, called here by the death of her sister, Mrs. James Hunter. Mrs. Hampton will probably spend some weeks with relatives here.

Bert Billington and his family returned from Tennessee last week. We are sorry to hear that Mrs. B's health is far from being what her friends could wish. The little one, too, is quite feeble. May the air of home prove a restorer.

"In Mrs. Hunter's death society loses one of its best members and the church, to which she belonged, an earnest worker. Many will miss her, while all hearts go out in sympathy to the husband in his bereavement and loneliness.

When L. E. Taylor returned from Orion, two weeks ago, he found eight of his children sick with the measles. Kind neighbors were helping the only well one to bring them safely through but the father's presence was none the less welcome or needed. All are now convalescent, while Mr. Taylor's people feel that they have seen so much of the best side of human nature, lately, as almost to doubt if there be any other.

SPRINGVILLE SIFTINGS.

Frank Amsden is again a resident of Cambridge.

Bun Ayres, of Ann Arbor, is in town for a few days.

Mrs. Dr. Vaughn is visiting in western New York.

B. D. Lewis, of Muskegon, is spending a few weeks at the old homestead.

Theo. Stafford is successfully conducting his first term of school in the Siam district.

Geo. Skinner, formerly of this place, now of Sioux City, Ia., returned to the latter city Monday.

Dr. Ellis, of Clayton, was renewing the acquaintance of friends in this, the home of his youth, Monday.

The many friends of Miss Virginia Daniels, in this vicinity, are pleased to note her success in obtaining a good position in the Dansville, Ingham coun ty, schools.

The ladies mission society will meet at the home of Mrs. Jno. Stafford next Wednesday afternoon. A full attendance is desired, as a reorganization of the Society will be effected.

Mrs. Kemp will meet her pupils Friday evening at the school-house. So good an opportunity for elocutionary training is seldom met with in a country village and should be embraced by more.

The death of Simon Shultis, one of our most influential German citizens, occurred Saturday morning. Mr. Shultis was successful in business, honest, and kind and helpful to his fellow-men. His funeral was attended by a large concourse of people at his late home, on Monday, at 1 o'clock P. M. Services by Rev. J. M. Getchell. A worthy wife and three sons survive him.

MONTANA, OREGON, WASHINGTON.

A correct map of the north west will show that the Northern Pacific Railroad traverses the central portion of Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, and Washington for a distance of nearly 2,000 miles; it is the only Railroad reaching Jamestown, Bismark, Miles City, Billings, Livingston, Bozeman, Missoula, Cheney, Davenport, Palouse City, Sprague, Ritzville, Yakima, Ellensburg, Tacoma, Seattle and in fact nine-tenths of the north west cities, towns, and points of interest.

The Northern Pacific is the shortest trans-continental route from St. Paul and Chicago, to Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Deer Lodge, Spokane Falls, Walla Walla, Dayton and Portland, and the only one whose through trains reach any portion of the new state of Washington. Land-seekers purchasing Pacific Coast second class tickets via St. Paul and the Northern Pacific have choice from that point of free Colonist Sleeping Cars, or Pullman's Tourist Furnished Sleepers at charges as low as the lowest.

For the benefit of settlers the Northern Pacific also gives a ten days stop over privilege on second class North Pacific Coast tickets at Spokane Falls and each and every point west, including over 125 stations in Washington, thus enabling persons seeking a home to examine this vast territory without incurring an expense of from $5.00 to $25.00 in travelling on local tickets from point to point.

Insure for yourself comfort and safety by having the best accomodations afforded, thereby avoiding change of cars, re-checking of baggage, transfers and lay overs en-route. Money can be saved by purchasing tickets via St. Paul or Minneapolis and the Northern Pacific.

For Maps, Pamphlets, Rates, and Tickets enquire of your nearest Ticket Agent, any District Passenger Agent of the Northern Pacific Railroad; or Chas S. Fee, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, St. Paul Minn.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Remember the mock trial to be held at Grange Hall on Friday evening next.

Mrs. Charles Pocklington, who has been on the sick list for several days past, is on the gain at present.

The next mother's meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at Mrs. G. P. Waring's on Thursday afternoon of next week.

Miss Mamie Dubois finished her first term of school in the new district in the northeastern part of the township on Friday last.

Mrs. John Arner was called to Wampler's Lake on Monday on account of the severe sickness of her sister, Mrs. Entfield Antcliff.

The pastor desires all persons that are single and are members of the church to meet him in the lecture room of the church on Saturday evening of this week.

The school house in district No. 5 was burned to the ground Friday night. The cause of the fire is believed to have that of an incendiary, as there has been considerable trouble in the district over the dissolving of the district for the past few months.

The attendance at the entertainment given at the library by the Circle Tuesday was not as large as it should have been. The program was one of the best that has been furnished by the Circle and was presented very finely, substantially as published last week. The proceeds amounted to nearly $8.

TIPTON TOPICS.

W. J. Hampton went to Detroit on business last week.

Wallace Palmer returned to Ann Arbor Monday, after spending part of his time at home.

Quite a good many from Franklin attended the teacher's examination at Adrian, Saturday April 19.

Death has once more claimed his own in our vicinity. Mrs. James Hunter, after a long and severe illness passed away last Friday. The deceased was well known in this vicinity where she will be missed by a large circle of friends. The funeral services were held Sunday at the Congregational church, Rev. Patchen officiating.

Don't give up, there is a cure for catarrh and cold in the head. Thousands testify that Ely's Cream Balm has entirely cured them. It is a safe and pleasant remedy. It is applied into the nostrils. It is not a liquid or snuff. It cures by cleansing and healing. Price 50.

DEATH OF ELDER GEORGE PRICE.

Deceased was a native of Wales. Had he lived until July 25th, 1890, it would have been his 70th birthday, but he peacefully passed away on Wednesday, April 9th, 1890, at noon. During the winter it became apparent to himself and his friends that he was coming near to death. On Saturday, April 12th, at 2 P. M., his funeral services were conducted from the late home in Tecumseh, with the following ministers taking part in the services: Revs. Joslyn and Babbitt, of Tecumseh, and Wright of Britton, E. Mudge, of Romeo, preaching the sermon. He, by years of acquaintance in the Michigan Christian Conference, was a special friend of the deceased. He preached an able sermon from Hebrews, 11-4: "He being dead yet speaketh."

Elder Price married for his first wife, in Wales, Miss Elizabeth Jones, and to this union there were born five daughters and one son. In the spring of 1853 the family sailed to America, reaching Tecumseh May 29th. A few days after death entered the family and chose as its victim their little son, and George and Elizabeth were caused to mourn in their new American home. Two years passed and the wife and mother followed a little son in death and the father was left a widower with five little daughters. Two years later he married for his second wife Mrs. Mary Hall, of Tecumseh, and to this marriage there was born one son, who for some years has resided upon the Price farm in eastern Ridgeway. The deceased, during his first residence in Tecumseh, from the spring of 1853 to the spring of 1858, was mostly in the employ of Mr. B. J. Bidwell, on the farm, after which he purchased the farm well-known for many years as the Price farm. It was there he was the man of powerful strength of body to labor, and he was also the man who knew how to create out of the marshy and then floating prairie that farm known as one of the most productive in Lenawee county. He also took much interest in grading stock and was equal to any of his townsmen in general agricultural interests—in a word, he came to America as one of England's good farmers. After twenty years of active farm life he retired from farming and in the spring of 1878 removed to Tecumseh. Three years ago his second wife died. It was she who had been his companion through about thirty years of a successful life, both financially and religiously. The result of his industrious and faithful life and his honest conviction of truth is well-known to those with whom he was most intimately acquainted. After having settled in eastern Ridgeway, some time near the year 1860, he united with his wife in fellowship and they were received as members of the Christian church of that place, and he retained his membership until death. He commenced preaching for the Christian church in January, 1860, and was regularly ordained to the work of the ministry September 22, 1861, and continued in pastoral charge of the church until May 1st, 1869, during which time he received 32 to the membership of the Church. After closing his labors with this society he accepted the pastoral charge of the Christian churches of South Fairfield and Baker's Corners, continuing in charge of those churches between six and seven years, making his journeys in his own conveyance from the farm, a distance of 30 miles. He loved to preach and he usually preached in the power and demonstration of the spirit. He was President of the Michigan Southeastern Christian Conference for a number of years and was also a member of the Michigan Christian Conference from the time of its existence as a corporate body, and also served as one of the board of trustees of that body. He experienced religion at the age of 23, while yet in his native country and began at once to improve his gift in preaching among the primitive Methodists, and his religious zeal remained with him during life. Three years ago last winter he received a second stroke of paralysis which well nigh took his life; but, though he recovered somewhat, he remained very much broken in body, although retaining his judgment. During the last eight months of his life he preached twice,—once in Tecumseh in the M. E. church, and last October in the South Fairfield Christian church, before a conference then in session.

One year ago last October he married for his third wife Mrs. Mary Herring, residing near Jackson, who was his attentive and affectionate companion until death dissolved their union. He leaves a companion, five daughters, one son, an only brother, grandchildren and friends and acquaintances to mourn his death.

Peace be to his sleeping dust.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, APL. 24

If the tariff is not a tax, why are the sugar men appeased with a bounty in return for putting sugar on the free list?

The spring floods have made sad havoc with the Mississippi levees and the Republican majorities out west.

Major McKinley's tariff bill is a great curiosity, but it will be a greater curiosity still before it finally comes to a vote.

Major McKinley made a sad mistake in his tariff bill. He should have put a prohibitive duty on democrats. They are multiplying throughout the north beyond all calculation.

The lower house of the Ohio legislature has passed a ballot reform bill by a large majority, many republicans voting for it. It will undoubtedly pass the Senate and be approved by the Governor.

The result of the last by-elections in Providence makes Rhode Island a Democratic state, and it is likely to remain so. The new ballot reform law worked like a charm and the Democrats were largely indebted to that for their success.

The tariff bill has finally been reported to the House. It is a curious hodge-podge of protection and free trade. There seems to be no principle whatever behind it. It is simply a clever scheme to appease the farmers, and pay election debts.

The recent vile and indecent attack of the New York Sun upon Grover Cleveland will recoil upon editor Dana himself. Unprovoked personal scurrility of this kind generally helps rather than injures its victim. Grover Cleveland is growing in the affections of the people every day and that is what worries the Sun.

A striking feature of the recent elections, both east and west, was the unqualified success of the Australian ballot system wherever it was tried. It is undoubtedly the best scheme yet devised to neutralize the power of money in politics, and anything which produces that effect must inure to the advantage of the Democracy.

As a reason for his latest veto of the Australian ballot-reform law, Governer Hill alleges that there are more than 81,000 persons in New York whom it would practically disfranchise because they can nither read nor write. This confession explains how it was possible for the Hill-Harrison combine to carry the State against Cleveland.

In keeping hides on the free list and putting sugar there too, Major McKinley may have builded wiser than he knew. Every article, classed as raw material that goes on the free list, strengthens the ranks of the tariff reformers. In conceding the necessity of any free materials, the high tariff men are knocking the legs out of their own protection stool.

The ballot-reform procession is still moving on, but it is sad to note that Brother Dana of the Sun is still in the rear making faces and talking irrelevantly about kangaroos. The kangaroo has not had the advantage of the American eagle, but it is not a slow kind of bird after all, as Brother Dana ought to know from his familiarity with encyclopedias.

Evidences accumulate that there will be no tariff legislation by this Congress. The Republicans are hopelessly divided on some of the leading schedules of the McKinley bill. The people must wait until they have a Democratic Congress and a Democratic Administration for relief from the onerous taxes which paralyze industry, check trade and rob the many for the benefit of the few.

The present political situation is thus aptly described by an exchange: "Republican statesmen in Congress made so many promises during the Harrison campaign, which they can not fulfil now, that life is becoming a burden to them. The old soldier and the colored brother want now what was then promised, and they want it badly, too. If these promises are kept the country will be bankrupt, and if they are not kept some of the statesmen will not again go to Congress.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

"Hon. Edwin Willitts, assistant secretary of agriculture, is probably the only public official of any prominence in Washington that has absolutely nothing to do with the matter of appointments. Although next door to a cabinet minister, Mr. Willits has nothing to say about the selection of clerks and other employees of the agricultural department. By an arrangement made when he assumed office, he has charge of the scientific and other bureaus, while Secretary Rusk looks out altogether for the political part of the work. This arrangement is very satisfactory to both gentlemen, and under it every thing moves as smoothly as clock work. Mr. Willits is very fortunate in escaping the thankless labor of doling out the patronage of the department, for this is the most unpleasant part of the work that a department official is called to perform. Mr. Willits escapes all political importunity, and finds his work, therefore, very congenial and pleasant. Mr. Willits has become very much attached to Washington life, and has recently joined the ranks of the Michigan men who are building their own homes. A few months ago he purchased a pretty house in the west end and last week invested in the adjoining house. Mr. Willits intends to open them into one big residence. His purchase is in a section of the city that is rapidly improving and he will realize a handsome profit on his speculation."

We clip the above from the Morenci Observer, of last week. Mr. Willits' friends in this section—and he can boast of scores of them—will be pleased to read these good words about him. It is very doubtful whether Editor Allen intended his words to be construed in that light, but nevertheless they form a most emphatic little sermon in favor of civil service reform. Why should "the thankless labor of doling out the patronage" be imposed upon the head of any department? Why should not the clerks at Washington be appointed under some general statute, after proper examination, and for fitness alone? Again, why should "the thankless task of doling out" the postoffices be imposed upon our Congressmen? Why should'nt the people elect their own postmasters for a stated term of three or four years? Why should'nt the people of Tecumseh choose their postmaster the same as they do their supervisor and other township officers? Congressmen could then attend to their legitimate duties of legislating for the benefit of the people. Why should'nt they have that chance?

THE SECOND CONGRESS DISTRICT.

The second congressional district of Michigan, comprising the counties of Hillsdale, Lenawee, Monroe and Washtenaw, is one of the best agricultureal districts in the Union. It is more than likely that the coming census will show Lenawee to be the banner agricultural county of the Union. Washtenaw is nearly its equal, while Monroe and Hillsdale follow close behind. It is essentially a farmers district. The agricultural interest is the controling one, by a large majority. And yet for more than thirty years the farmers of the district have been studiously ignored in the selection of a representative. The three counties of Monroe, Lenawee and Hillsdale have been districted together since 1850. Beginning with 1855, Henry Waldron, a Hillsdale banker, was our representative for six years. Fernando C. Beaman, an Adrian attorney, then served the district for ten years, from '61 to '71. Mr. Waldron then stepped back into Congress for six years, serving till '77. Edwin Willitts, a Monroe attorney, then served six years, until '83. Col. Eldredge, an Adrian lawyer served two terms, or until '87. And for the past three years, the district has been represented by Capt. E. P. Allen, an Ypsilanti lawyer. We do not state these facts to belittle the men who have served us in the halls of Congress during all these years. They have been honorable, able representatives, far above the general average.

And yet there is a wide spread feeling among the farmers of the district that the time has come when they should be represented in the halls of Congress by one of their own number, by a man who is identified with agriculture, whose interests and sympathies are with the farming classes. This feeling is not confined to one party. The farmers consider that they are entitled to the representative next time, and even the business classes must concede the justice of this claim. The party that reads the situation aright and respects this feeling will elect its representative next fall.

Every county in the district possesses farmer residents, who are abundantly qualified to fill the position creditably. We would respectfully suggest to the consideration of the Democratic convention the name of Alexander Richard of Raisin. Mr. Richard is a life long Democrat and yet not a rabid partizan. He is a college graduate, also a practical farmer. He is well posted on current politics and a ready talker. He is in the prime of physical and intellectual manhood, and possesses both brains and moral courage to protect the rights and interests of his constituents at all hazards. If the Democrats wish to redeem this district next fall, they will nominate Alex. Richard for Congress.

POSERS FOR THE MAJOR.

One of the most striking papers ever read before any gathering of agriculturists was the paper by Mrs. I. H. Elliott of Princeton, Ill., captioned "Cackle from the Farm," read before the farmers' institute of the Eighth Congressional District at its closing session in Sherwood's Opera House in Ottawa, Feb. 14. Speaking of the action of the Ways and Means committee in hearing suggestions from manufacturers of all kinds, she said:

"I believe I could go before that committee myself if it was not quite so far to walk. If I did, Mr. McKinley would probably say:

"Well, madam, what can I do for you?"

"Mr. McKinley," I would say, "I live on an Illinois farm. I notice by the papers that all the other folks have been here to ask you to so arrange matters as to secure for them a good round profit in their business. The fact is that whiskey and tobacco scheme of yours will not be much help out our way. We don't use very much of it in our cooking, and so far as I am concerned I would prefer that you would tax them so high that nobody could possibly reach them, instead of putting them within the easy access of everybody. Our corn is down to 20 cents, cattle and hogs to 3½ cents, and we are just giving away our hay and potatoes. We haven't made any money for a long time, and I have walked all the way to Washington to ask if you can't let up a little on things we are compelled to buy?"

The chairman of the ways and means committee would probably say:

"My dear madam, you are really mistaken. Don't you know that a high tariff on everything you eat and use on your farms enables the manufacturer to pay high prices to his employes, who with bushels of money and enormous appetites buy everything you can raise, and pay a big price for it? Why, bless your agricultural heart, don't you know that a war tariff makes a home market, and that a home market is the best market? Why, my good woman, this country is booming right along and getting richer and richer. I know any number of men who are making a million dollars a year, and if the country is prosperous of course the farmer is prosperous. I am afraid you don't quite understand what you are talking about."

"Mr. McKinley," I would answer, "I have heard you say that before, Mr. Randall says so, Mr. Cullum and Mr. Farwell say so, and I have heard half a dozen farmers of my own town say the same thing, and I suppose I ought to believe it, if the price of everything we raise on a farm did not compel me to say that there is not a word of truth in it. But I have a proposition to make to you. I would like to have you do for the farmer just what you have been doing for the other people who come here to see you—that is, subsidize us a little. Pay us a bounty of, say, $1.25 on every bushel of corn and oats we raise; $3.25 on wheat, $15 apiece on hogs, $75 on cattle, $150 on horses, and—well, we don't want to ask too much—say 75 cents on an ordinary chicken. Of course, these are not war prices, but I think our folks would be satisfied with those rates. From the experience we farmers have had I am sure your committee can so arrange it as to slip this little tax out of the pockets of the manufacturers and monopolists without their knowing it. I would like to have you so legislate the tariff as to compel them to buy everything from us, and then, major, I would like to have you stand around and see us whack up the prices on them! I would ask $3 apiece for my eggs. I would charge your friend and Mr. Carnegie 85 cents for an Early Rose potato. Jay Gould could not buy a loaf of bread for less than $15. With my first crop of garden sass I'd buy a dress that would make those Washington women who telegraph a description of their dresses all over the country feel silly. Now, if you will help us in this little game, we farmers will make you President of the United States. It strikes a woman with great logical force that if this government goes into the business of legislating so that one business can receive a sure profit, it ought in all fairness to do the same for the farmers."

Another telling point was this:

"I cannot let the opportunity go by without saying that it would be a slight tribute to agriculture to place salt and lumber on the free list, side by side with oil of lavender and the attar of roses, thereby giving the American farmer a fair chance with the city dude, and that it is beyond a woman's understanding to discover the wisdom of the statesmanship that will lay a tax on commodities she uses in the kitchen and offer her instead free whiskey and free tobacco."

One other pertinent suggestion to the farmer was the following:

"You may raise chickens as large as ostriches; you may grow your sheep and hogs until they are as large as your cattle; you may improve your cattle and horses until they are as big as elephants; you may raise pumpkins as large as hogsheads, and it will not help you one particle until you hit upon some plan to sell one bushel of corn and one ton of hay for what you can now get for two, and pay $1 tax where you now pay $5. Speed the day when the Illinois farmer may learn just how much it costs to be a fool".

The address created a profound sensation among her audience, and it is probable that she will be called on to repeat it several times yet in other parts of the state.

McKINLEY AND THE FARMERS.

There are a good many contemptible features in the new McKinley Tariff Bill, and when we say this we mean that its concoctors have made a good many attempts to swindle and deceive. None of these attempts is so flagrant and so mean as that which is intended to induce the farmer to believe that he is profited by a tax upon all that he consumes in his house and business by putting alleged compensatory taxes on foreign products similar to his own, but with which his own products are not brought into competition.

The farmer supplies most of the commodities which make up our foreign commerce. He, of all others, is interested in enlarging our market. He is concerned in securing low-priced foreign goods in payment for his wheat and corn. He is compelled, under the present tariff law, to pay to the Government part of the price which he receives for his goods, by way of a customs tax, and his price is that which obtains in the London market and is fixed by the wheat grown by the ryots of India and the poorest peasantry of Europe. He competes with the pauper labor against which the imported miner is protected. And to compensate the wheat-growers and corn-growers for their trials and tribulations a few hens along the Canadian border are to be protected.

The present tariff on important farm products is useless to men who grow more than the country can consume, and who must look abroad for that market which the protectionists promised them at home. Last year we sent abroad $42,000,000 worth of wheat, $45,000 000 worth of wheat flour, $33,000,000 worth of corn, $17,000,000 worth of cattle, more than $2,500,000 worth of butter, and $8,000,000 worth of cheese. The farmer is to be protected by the McKinley Bill from competition with similar foreign products. Having supplied his own market, protection having failed to give him that generous demand which it promised to him, he sends this large surplus abroad, and yet Mr. McKinley has faith enough in the farmer's ignorance to tell him that he must have more protection, that he is suffering from foreign competition in the visionary home market.

We imported last year less than one-thirtieth as many cattle as we exported; less than $4,000 worth of wheat, about $1,200 worth of corn, less than $6,000 worth of wheat flour, only $18,000 worth of butter, less than one-fifth as much cheese as we exported. As to potatoes we exported about as much as we imported. In other words all our agricultural importations are in inconsiderable quantities along our borders, and constitute a smaller trade than might have been expected to go on between neighboring farmers.

The attempt to delude the farmer is likely to turn out as useless as it is dishonest. It is a desperate effort to mend the chains of a slavery which were first voluntarily assumed and which are now rapidly breaking.—N. Y. World.

That Tired Feeling

That extreme tired feeling which is so distressing and often so unaccountable in the spring months, is entirely overcome by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which tones the whole body, purifies the blood, cures scrofula and all humors, cures dyspepsia, creates an appetite, rouses the torpid liver, braces up the nerves, and clears the mind. We solicit a comparison of Hood's Sarsaparilla with any other blood purifier in the market for purity, economy, strength, and medicinal merit.

Tired all the Time

"I had no appetite or strength, and felt tired all the time. I attributed my condition to scrofulous humor. I had tried several kinds of medicine without benefit. But as soon as I had taken half a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, my appetite was restored, and my stomach felt better. I have now taken nearly three bottles, and I never was so well." MRS. JESSIE F. DOLBEARE, Pascoag, R. I.

Mrs. C. W. Marriott, Lowell, Mass., was completely cured of sick headache, which she had 16 years, by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Everybody needs and should take a good spring medicine, for two reasons:

1st, The body is now more susceptible to benefit from medicine than at any other season.

2d, The impurities which have accumulated in the blood should be expelled, and the system given tone and strength, before the prostrating effects of warm weather are felt.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best spring medicine. A single trial will convince you of its superiority. Take it before it is too late.

The Best Spring Medicine

"I take Hood's Sarsaparilla for a spring medicine, and I find it just the thing. It tones up my system and makes me feel like a different man. My wife takes it for dyspepsia, and she derives great benefit from it. She says it is the best medicine she ever took." F. C. TURNER, Hook & Ladder No. 4, Boston, Mass.

"Last spring I was troubled with boils, caused by my blood being out of order. Two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me. I can recommend it to all troubled with affections of the blood." J. SCHOCH, Peoria, Ill.

Forecast of Congress for This Week.

MEASURES WITH WHICH THE SOLONS WILL GRAPPLE.

Pension Bills for Survivors of Indian Wars—The World's Fair Act Comes Up Today in the Senate—District of Columbia Appropriation—Land Forfeiture—The Customs and Other Bills.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—There is little chance for the passage this session of the bill introduced by Mr. Herrmann to pension the survivors of the Oregon Indian wars of 1847-'48 and 1855-'56. The members of the pensions committee of the House, to whom the bill was referred, have talked the matter over and decided that it should not be brought up until after the other general pension bills have been disposed of. Bills to pension the soldiers and sailors of the Mexican war and the survivors of the Indian wars that took place in the south and southwest between 1832 and 1842, are before the House, and it is believed that considerable opposition to the Oregon bill would be manifested should an attempt be made to call them up for passage. The bill provides a pension of $8 each.

Today the World's Fair bill comes up in the Senate as the special order, and Mr. Hawley, who has the bill in charge, will insist upon its reconsideration. There is likely to be some debate on its various provisions as Messrs Blackburn and Vest expect to speak. If the World's Fair bill is finished the District of Columbia appropriation bill, which Mr. Plumb has given notice he will call up, will be next in order. This, however, can be disposed of in a day.

The land forfeiting bill is on the programme, but may be laid aside to take up the administration custom's bill, upon which there will be considerable discussion, although the bill has already passed the Senate very nearly in its present form. Some of the Democratic senators are in position to make this bill a peg upon which to hang their political speeches. There is no particular hurry about the land forfeiting bill, but from the efforts made by Mr. Plumb to have it take precedence last Friday, there is a chance that he will make another effort this week and if it gets up it is likely to be the subject for Friday's debate. Saturday the Senate takes up the calendar.

The business of the House during the week may be greatly influenced by the caucus of Republican Representatives on the silver question. Should a satisfactory bill be agreed upon in the caucus, it will be brought up for discussion and pushed to a conclusion before the end of the week. This is the disposition at present.

Other matters of general interest will also be brought forward in the House. Today will be suspension day, but it has been agreed to let the regular order go by the board, and to take up the conference report on the Oklahoma territorial bill. This is a privileged matter and takes precedence of nearly all other business.

The judiciary committee is anxious to bring up the national bankruptcy bill during the week, and will probably succeed in doing so after the appropriations committee gets the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill out of the way. There is also a chance that the judiciary committee may call up the copyright bill.

No agreement has been reached between the leaders of the two sides of the House concerning the tariff discussion; but McKinley wants to have it begun during the first week in May, and his plan will probably be carried out.

IN HELL GATE.

A Steamer Strikes a Rock, Disabling Her.

NEW YORK, April 21.—The steamer Puritan of the Fall river line, which left her dock at 5:30 p. m. for Fall River, struck on a rock while passing through Hell Gate, and stove a hole in her bow. She at once returned to her dock.

Two Killed and a Dozen Hurt.

LONDON, April 21.—A terrific explosion occurred in a powder mill situated on the outskirts of Lindon, Hanover. The building in which the powder ignited was blown to atoms and two men were torn to pieces. Upwards of a dozen employes were injured, some of them, it is said, fatally.

Failed to Agree.

CHICAGO, April 21.—The conferences between the arbitrating committee of the striking carpenters and the new boss carpenter's association failed to bring about any settlement of the strike, although it was expected by a great many that it would.

To Protect American Interests.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—It is the general impression at the navy department that a most vigorous policy is to be pursued in regard to protecting American interests in Alaskan waters. A number of vessels will be sent into those waters.

Pork Packers' Strike.

BOSTON, April 21.—A strike was inaugurated at John P. Squire & Company's big pork packing establishment in East Cambridge. Between 700 and 800 employes are out and the factory is practically shut down.

Killed and Mangled.

NEWCASTLE, PA., April 21.—Washington Grossman was killed at the Marquis Lime quarry. A blast failed to go off and Grossman started to pick it out when an explosion occurred. His body was horribly mangled.

A Mill Dust Explosion.

CHICAGO, ILLS., April 21.—A mill dust explosion occurred at Brewer & Hoffman's brewery, wrecking all the machinery in the building, and partially wrecking the roof. Many workman narrowly escaped with their lives.

The New Castle Garden.

NEW YORK, April 21.—The barge office was opened Saturday for the first time for the reception of immigrants. The first passenger to land was given a new five dollar gold piece.

Wants a Job.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—Mr. James Guiler, representing the Risdon iron works of San Francisco, formerly of the Union iron works, has been in the east for some time in the interest of the company.

Bond Purchases.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—The treasury department has purchased $82,250 four-and-a-half per cent bonds at 108¼ and $362,100 four per cent bonds at 128.

COL. DUDLEY'S LITTLE GAME EFFECTUALLY BALKED.

Fat Fried in Vain—The History of Certain Rulings in Relation to the Duty on Mahogany When Sawn Into Boards—Politics in Protection.

The duty on sawn lumber is $2 per thousand square feet. Round logs and hewn timber are free of duty. Hence it is that cheap lumber, like spruce, hemlock and white pine, of which the houses of the common people are built, pays a duty, while mahogany and other cabinet woods used only by the rich are admitted free, as they come in logs.

There is one curious exception to this. An importer of mahogany of large means some years ago built a saw mill in the country where the mahogany grows.

By sawing the mahogany logs into boards at the point of shipment a large saving in freight is effected, although it subjects the sawn mahogany to the $2 per thousand feet duty.

This venture proving a success, mahogany boards began to be imported into New York in considerable quantities.

This did not quite suit the views of the owners of those mills which had formerly had the entire business of making mahogany boards. In order to get back that part of the business the mill owners undertook to obtain a treasury decision to the effect that mahogany boards were not lumber, but a manufacture of wood, and consequently subject to a duty of 35 per cent. ad valorem. Such a decision would make the duty on mahogany boards anywhere from $20 to $100 per thousand feet, according to quality. This would, of course, prohibit the importation of mahogany boards and give the mills in New York the entire business of sawing mahogany logs.

The question was brought to the notice of the treasury department during the Cleveland administration, and was argued on behalf of the mill men by the Hon. Roscoe Conkling.

The importer argued his own case; but before going to Washington he took the precaution to obtain in writing the opinion of a large number of the New York lumber dealers as to whether the product of a mahogany log sawn into boards constituted lumber or a manufacture of wood. The result was that Mr. Conkling lost his case, the treasury department deciding that mahogany boards should be classed as lumber the same as boards sawn from any other kind of logs. This decision agreed with the written opinion of the New York lumber dealers above referred to.

The mill owners were not yet disposed, however, to give up the fight. The story of their next move, as told by those who pretend to know, is briefly as follows: During the last presidential campaign Col. Dudley was seen, and in consideration of a certain amount of fat he agreed to use his best offices with the treasury department (should Harrison be elected) to have a correct and proper decision rendered in the matter of mahogany boards.

Whether there is any truth in the Dudley story or not, it is a fact that the mill owners went to Washington after Harrison took his seat and tried to get the former decision reversed. Some say they went over to Washington to obtain the goods they bought of Col. Dudley. The latter is certainly a brutal way of putting it. But the mill men were again disappointed. The decision was that boards were boards, whether sawn from mahogany, oak, walnut or pine logs, and that all boards so sawn must be classed as lumber by the treasury department.

While this mahogany question is not of very great magnitude, it contains all the elements of the protective principle in its simplest terms.

The fact that under our tariff all the costly woods used by the rich come in free while the lumber used by the poor man is heavily taxed is a feature of the entire tariff list. The exception of mahogany boards is one that should not be allowed to exist. It is clearly in violation of the protective principle. The committee of ways and means should not overlook it because it is of comparatively small account. The principle is there—the mill owners have given up their fat and should be rewarded. They should not be obliged to run their mills in competition with a mill situated in a tropical country and manned by the pauper labor of Mexico or Central America.

Besides that the importer of these mahogany boards should be punished. All importers are wicked, but this particular importer is particularly so. Besides being an importer he is said to be a Democrat. If that is true he certainly gave up no fat to Dudley, but may have contributed money to the other side, and thus forfeited all claim to protection.

SHALL WE HAVE COMMERCIAL WAR?

The Danger to Which Our High Tariff Apostles Are Exposing Us.

One of the favorite ideas of the protectionists is that the country must be made what they call commercially independent of all the rest of the world. Everything that can be made on sacred American soil, that we must make; congress must legislate to have it done; consumers must pay higher prices in order that it may be done, and we will keep our money at home and all grow rich together. The foreigner we will treat as commercially our enemy, for he that cares not for his own household is worse than an infidel.

Foreign commerce is scarcely to be desired, it is held, and so we will pass McKinley administrative customs bills and McKinley tariff revision bills and wall ourselves in commercially from the rest of the world.

The barbarism and anti-progressive spirit of these sentiments are worthy of the middle ages. It is such sentiments as these that the civilized nations of the world have succeeded within the present half century in getting China, the hermit nation of the east, to abandon.

But if we grant that these sentiments are just, we must still note that those who hold them overlook one part of the problem of commercial intercourse. We can prevent the importation of foreign goods, and we can continue to prosper—in a less degree, of course, but still to prosper.

The more important question is, can we get on equally well without selling anything to the foreigner? What, for instance, do the growers of wheat and corn and cotton think of this question? Our farmers exported three-fourths of the $814,000,000 worth of products sold abroad last year. The cotton growers sent out $266,000,000 worth; the wheat growers over $88,000,000 worth of wheat and flour, and the corn growers added about $36,000,000 more. Other farm products bring the grand total up to almost $600,000,000.

Now, what do the farmers think of this "commercial independence" scheme? Are they willing to see commercial intercourse endangered to their own hurt? Do we suppose that we can pass laws shutting out foreigners from our ports with their wares and not be retaliated against by these same foreigners? Our farmers have already had a taste of this, kind of thing in the action of France and Germany in shutting out American pork. Do the farmers want more of that kind of thing? Are they ready to see their own foreign markets endangered or restricted in order to give our protected manufacturers a high protection wall to defend the holy home market for them?

This is not an idle theory. A French paper at Lyons, France, has recently printed an article which has attracted some attention in this country, showing that the principal European nations would most likely take retaliatory steps to protect their interests if the McKinley bill should become a law. According to this paper, a member of the French chamber of deputies, M. Maxime Lecomte, recently had an interview with the French minister of foreign affairs, and learned that France, England, Italy and Switzerland have united in a joint address to the United States government on the subject. These nations will show our government that we sell them a great deal more than we buy, and that hence it is a matter of much greater importance to us to hold our European market than to shut the European out of the American market.

The Lyons paper calls attention to the fact that congress passed a law two years ago authorizing the president to take measures of reprisal against Canada; and the French editor closes with the following significant warning to our American law makers: "They could not be surprised, therefore, if the governments of countries whose commerce is threatened by the application of the McKinley bill should do the same thing on their own behalf, should this ill advised measure be adopted with the oppressive and outrageous provisions which arouse against it so justly the indignation of the commercial classes of the Old World."

Pinhooking the Farmer.

High protectionist newspapers are vieing with the McKinley committee in their efforts to gull the farmer. The Chicago Inter Ocean goes even further than the committee in this discreditable business. The committee did not touch the present duty of ten cents per bushel on corn, although the Chicago paper had pretended to see that the farmers of the country are threatened with ruinous competition from foreign corn, and had demanded that the duty be doubled. The "cheap labor corn of Buenos Ayres" was seen by The Inter-Ocean to be on the point of invading our markets. It foresaw "vast importations" from this far away country, which can be reached by steam vessels only after a voyage of about a month.

How silly this talk is will appear from the fact that last year we imported just 2,410 bushels of corn, while we exported in the same time 81,278,006 bushels. There is no record that we bought any corn from the Argentine republic last year; on the contrary we sold to it 17,411 bushels. Our total exports to South America last year were 602,391 bushels, or nearly ten times as much as in the year before. With such an enormous increase of our sales to South American countries, it would seem that our farmers might survive the calamity threatened by the vast importation of 2,410 bushels, a quantity not equal to the product of many a one of our small farms.

Considering our exports of more than 80,000,000 bushels of corn last year, it will be difficult to convince an intelligent farmer that this so called protection of ten cents a bushel on corn is anything more than a cheap piece of humbug.

Minnows will bite readily at an unbaited pin-hook, to the great delight of the small boy. The protectionists hold out this naked pinhook duty on corn and insult the intelligence of the farmer by fancying that he can be caught by it; and when he bites all the protectionist small boys will laugh at the silliness of the agricultural minnow.

The question for these people to answer is, With corn so cheap in the west that it is used for fuel, what good will any duty, even the highest, do for the farmer? If the duty were a dollar a bushel instead of ten cents the farmer could not possibly get any advantage from it. It could not possibly make a difference of one cent on ten thousand bushels in his favor. If, however, the farmer has so short a supply of brains as the protectionists evidently fancy that he has, he will be taken by the naked pinhook. Only he will get no worm, but will ignominiously pant his life away on the string of the protectionist small boy.

When Mr. McKinley came out from the ways and means committee room on the afternoon of March 29, "with a smile brightening his Napoleonic countenance," he was evidently happy over the thought that his bill would reduce the surplus, while at the same time giving still higher protection. He had been telling the public that his bill would cut off some forty or fifty millions of needless revenue.

What must be his state of mind, now that his arithmetical expert from the treasury has figured out an actual increase of twelve millions as the result of the "bill to reduce revenues?"

A Sound Legal Opinion.

E. Bainbridge, Munday Esq., County Atty., Clay Co., Tex. says: "Have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with Malarial Fever and Jaundice, but was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Bitters saved his life."

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: He positively believes he would have died, had it not been for Electric Bitters.

This great remedy will ward off, as well as cure Malarial Diseases, and for all Kidney, Liver and Stomach Disorders stands unequaled. Price 50c. and $1. at

DR. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years,
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

A NEAT PIECE OF DETECTIVE WORK.

An Anonymous Missive—And Why it Failed. Detective Ingenuity vs. A Cowardly Practice.

Anonymous writers have flourished since the days of Ceasar.

In many cases they have done good, particularly when the recipient has received timely warning of some impending danger, or when a financial loss was being unconsciously suffered, but as a rule this writing of anonymous communications has a sinister motive behind it.

This statement was recently made by Detective J. M. Fuller of 841 Broadway, New York. Asked to give an instance he related the following: Some four years ago, a lady and gentleman called on me, and stated that an "anonymous fiend" was after them, and that the annoyance had grown so great that they had determined to put a stop to it if possible. The lady stated that about a week previously she had received a vulgar valentine representing a flashily dressed man, flitting with some women on the corner. A side picture showed the sad faced and neglected wife standing over a wash tub. On the top was written "Keep an Eye on your husband," and it was signed "A Friend." My clients then stated that they had been married about six months, and the lady having perfect faith in the integrity of her husband had unhesitatingly handed the vile missive over to him. The gentleman handed me his card, and I saw that he was a prominent downtown broker. They had no suspicion as to who the author of this contemptible act could be. Nor could they recall a single enemy who would stoop to do such a thing. Neither had they any unpleasantness with any of their friends or acquaintances and therefore were at a complete loss to account for it.

After arranging for the prosecution of the work, I told them to go home and without doubt they would again hear from their friend (?) and in the mean time not to mention the subject to any one. A week had scarcely elapsed, when I had a second call from my fair client. This time she handed me a letter she had received the night before, and upon comparison I found it was the same hand writing as the valentine notice. It read as follows: "Watch your husband's office to-morrow (Wed.) and you will see a well dressed lady enter. Look out for her. She will call in the afternoon. A Friend."

Taking my client with me, we proceeded to the vicinity of her husband's office, and securing a place where we could observe without being observed, we awaited developments. About 2 P. M. a well dressed lady drove up in a private coupe and entered the broker's office. She remained there nearly an hour and then drove away. The wife recognized her as an old school mate from the south. I cautioned her not to speak to her husband of our discovery, and report to me the next day if he made any mention of the lady's call. Bright and early the next morning she came to the office wreathed in smiles, and informed me that her husband had told her of the lady's visit; that she had called there to sell some mining stocks and that she would be pleased to receive a call from his wife. She was stopping with some friends uptown.

In the course of the week she had received three more letters from her unknown correspondent, each one impeaching the loyalty of her husband. The writer was growing anxious and impatient. In the meantime the broker and his charming wife had called upon the southern lady and had spent a most enjoyable evening with her. No allusion to the correspondence had been made. Upon examination I saw that these various letters were written by the same person, and that all the envelopes bore the mark of a certain uptown branch station. Taking the envelopes with me, I called upon the Supt. of the aforesaid station, and explaining my mission gave them to him for his action. He called his staff of assistants into his private office and laid the envelopes on his desk, and invited them all to look at them, and see if any could remember the writing, which was a large bold hand, with strong feminine characteristics. One of them after carefully examining them, said: that he had brought them in, and that he had collected them from a box on Lexington avenue. He then gave the last location and stated that they were invariably deposited late in the afternoon. Securing the necessary authority from the postmaster, I prepared six large dummy letters and that afternoon detailed a corresponding number of shadows to watch every one leaving letters at this point. They were each provided with a dummy letter which had a number agreeing with their own.

The well-known hand-writing did not appear on that day nor the next, neither had my client received any further communication from that source. But on the third afternoon, about five o'clock, several letters were deposited. The first was by a well-dressed elderly gentleman; the second was by an old lady; the third by a colored coachman; the fourth by a grocery clerk, and the fifth by a young, well-dressed boy, who came up on a run, and depositing his letter returned in the same manner. As each letter was deposited, a dummy was dropped into the box, in order to show who had dropped the several letters, and as the people moved away they were silently followed to their several homes and their names ascertained, which being done the men returned to their post to continue on those who patronized this particular box.

At 6 P. M. the Postoffice Collector came along and I stepped up to him and showed my letter. He remembered me and opened the box. The letter lying under our fifth dummy was instantly recognized by both as being identical with the other in my possession. It was addressed in the usual manner to my client. Calling shadow No. 5 aside, I asked him where he had located the young boy, and he gave me an address five blocks away. This proved to be a fashionable flat house occupied by four families. The names on the vestibule register were copied, and I hurried to the residence of my client and submitted them to him and his wife. They exchanged significant glances and neither spoke for nearly five minutes. They were terribly disturbed. The wife was the first to regain her composure and said:

"Why, there must be some mistake here, for the lady we called on the other evening is stopping there and is incapable of doing such a vile deed."

The husband was equally as pronounced in his expressions regarding the lady.

I then asked the name of the family this lady was visiting and who composed it.

Mr. X was a wealthy contractor and was surrounded by his wife, a daughter about twenty years of age, a son of fourteen and two servants. I at once decided to have a private interview with the boy who had been seen to mail our last capture. This was managed the next morning as he was on his way to school. At first he was inclined to resent what he considered my impertinence in asking him such questions, but the little arts employed by men in our profession soon loosened his tongue and he stated that his sister had given him quite a number of letters addressed to our client lately.

Upon further questioning he said that his sister had a photograph of a gentleman which she kept constantly with her and when alone would kiss and weep over it.

I then broke the disagreeable news to her father. He was astounded, but after looking at the letters admitted that his daughter had written them. He stated that his daughter had recently shown signs of insanity and that she was morose, where she had formerly been cheerful and happy.

When questioned she confessed to us that she had loved our handsome broker for years, and that when she heard of his marriage it almost drove her crazy. No one, even the broker, had ever suspected her feelings toward him. It was an altogether one-sided affair. She had jealously guarded the secret of her attachment for the broker. She had overheard her father and the Southern lady talking matters over in connection with the latter's mining stocks, and when she learned that she was about to close out her holdings with our broker she concluded that this would be a good opportunity for sowing the seeds of suspicion in the wife's mind. Her object was to separate them if possible. In view of the young lady's deplorable condition the broker and his wife humanely decided not to prosecute.

Shortly after this the young lady was taken to a private asylum, where she remained a year, and was then discharged perfectly cured. She has since married and is now living happily, surrounded by husband and children.

Detective Fuller, in conclusion, said this goes to show how simple a thing will sometimes change the destinies of men and women. Had my fair client not been a noble-hearted woman, and not easily influenced by every strange mind, her jealous inclinations would have been the cause of two homes being wrecked, but having absolute faith in her husband she adopted the only sensible method of learning the true source and the causes which led up to her annoying valentine and subsequent annoying letters.

Found An Old Friend.

COLOMA, Mich., December 3, 1889. Gentlemen:—One of your circulars came to my notic to-day, and it reminds me of an old and very valuable friend, one that saved my life 12 years ago, and because I had not needed its help since, I coughed continually and had chills every day. I was as miserable as any one could be and live. A lady who knew the cause of my illness persuaded my mother to have me use Zoa-Phora—it was called Woman's Friend then. Before I had used one bottle my cough and chills ceased. I kept on and used two bottles and they brought me out all right. I afterwards mared, and am now the mother of three nice hearty children.

I feel that I owe a great deal to Zoa-Phora. I hope it will become well known and that every woman and girl who needs it will use it. If you will send me some circulars I will give them to acquaintances, and do all I can to help you.

Yours truly, MRS. LAURA FURMAN.

A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

From the weekly Cherokee Democrat of April 16th we gather the following particulars in regard to the accident by which a grandson of Mr. N. S. Burroughs lost his life. Nelson T. Burroughs is now one of the leading citizens of Cherokee and his son Raynor, aged 12 years, was the victim of the accident. The particulars are about as follows:

During the week Roy Burroughs and Frank Packard, a relative of the family, had been out hunting several times and on Saturday Raynor was permitted to go with them. One of Mr. Burroughs' employes drove them up the river several miles early in the day and was to meet them at the mill at 5 o'clock in the evening. After a fine day's sport they floated down the river in their boat, reaching the designated place a little before 5 o'clock. Raynor was the life of the party and enjoyed the day hugely, but had not been permitted to handle a gun. When they got through shooting, the cartridges were extracted from the two guns, and Mr. Packard had taken every precaution to avoid any accident. When they reached the mill the team had not appeared, and to pass away the time the boys concluded to cross the river and try their skill on a flock of black birds. Just as they reached the opposite shore the team was seen coming and they pulled back. Roy jumped out of the boat and catching the branch of a tree in one hand and the boat in the other was pulling it ashore when Raynor jumped out and attempted to pull the loaded gun out, taking it by the end of the barrel. Before his action was noticed the gun was discharged, the full contents striking him in the right side of the breast. He fell dead without making the slightest groan. Death came so suddenly that the smile upon his countenance was not removed. Satisfied that life was extinct, Mr. Packard left the body in charge of the almost frantic brother and hastened to town to notify the family. His heart failed him, and meeting W. B. Chick he requested him to perform the sad mission. W. A. Sanford was also found on the street and he and Mr. Chick repaired to the Burroughs residence. Both Mr. and Mrs. Burroughs were found at home, and greeted the messengers so cheerfully that it seemed almost impossible to say the words that were to so suddenly change their happy moods and plunge them into grief. But as soon as possible Mr. Burroughs was made to know the worst, and he in turn broke the news to his wife. Only those who have been similarly afflicted can realize what a shock it was to these people. A conveyance was at once secured and the body brought in.

In a very few minutes the news had spread over the entire city, and friends of the family flocked from every direction, scarcely able to believe the sad, sad story. Raynor was not only the pride of the household, but a favorite with everyone who knew him.

The funeral services were held at the family residence at 2 o'clock on Monday, and the immense crowd that gathered there attested the esteem in which the family is held and the love that was borne for the departed. The sermon was preached by Rev. W. L. Ferris, and Revs. McAllister and Smylie assisted in the services. A touching incident was the presence of the pupils of Raynor's room in school, who marched through to see him for the last time, each one dropping a bunch of flowers upon the casket until it was completely covered. Several hundred people viewed the remains, so beautiful and serene in death that it seemed as if he must be only sleeping. Nearly seventy carriages followed the remains to the last resting place in Oak Hill. Immediately behind the hearse Raynor's pony, with an empty saddle, was led by the colored servant to whom Raynor had become so greatly attached. It was indeed a pathetic scene. The floral tributes were probably the finest ever seen in Cherokee. The house seemed like one vast flower garden.

Deafness Can't be Cured

By local applications, as they can not reach the deceased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HIGH SCHOOL HAPPENINGS.

[LOCALS CLIPPED FROM THE BREEZE.]

Miss Nelle Heesen, class of '89, is again teaching the young idea. She began work this week a few miles from Adrian.

Analysis of plants has begun in earnest in the C room. Botanizing is ow the favorite pastime of both teachers and pupils of all grades.

Miss Mary Burridge, a former classmate, went to Hudson last Friday, where she has secured a school. She began her new work Monday.

Erwin Conklin, Viva Howell, Edith Vedder and Edith Pilbeam, of the class of '90, attended the teacher's examination at Adrian, March 29th.

Many of the young ladies who assisted in the Carnival took advantage of photographer Brown's reduced rates, and had their pictures taken in costume.

Do you know the reason why Al. left Adamson's? He is going to begin business for himself now. Office at North Brownville; hours from 7 to 10 p. m.

Miss Frances Kehoe, class of '89, began her third term of school in the Culbertson district, March 31st. The fact that she has taught three terms in the same place testifies to her success.

We are sorry to admit that any of our class are addicted to bad habits; but we cannot fail to observe that Agnes has an increasing tendency to gamble. We can hardly believe it, but she is evidently in Ernest.

The class in German II took the final examination Tuesday, having completed the work laid down in the catalogue. The study will be continued, however, and Goethe's Hermann and Dorothea was begun Wednesday.

Have you translated our motto? A free reading is: "A lion is recognized by his claws." Certainly out boys have "imaginative power," else they could never have selected such a motto to be appropriate for our innocent little paper.

Several Adrian college students subscribed for the Breeze, and one of them was so well pleased with the first copy that he gave himself wholly to its enjoyment, regardless of all other duties. His less fortunate roommate hopes the next number will come on the installment plan, which he has adopted.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS.

The home of Mrs. C. A. Corson, 32 Myrtle St. Detroit, was the scene of a pleasant gathering on Thursday last to witness the marriage of her daughter Josephine to Mr. Edgar L. Ide, formerly of Tecumseh. Promptly at eight o'clock the bridal march was begun, and the wedding ceremony followed which was impressively rendered by Rev. Mr. Bault. The bride was attired in a very becoming dress of cream brilliantine, cut directoire, with V cut neck. The bridesmaid, Miss Laura McCloskey, was dressed in heliotrope and green, with Zouave jacket and Queen Anne collar. The groom himself and best man, Will H. Hayden, were attired in conventional suits of plain black. After the ceremony congratulations followed and the usual bridal repast. The friends of the contracting parties evinced their good will and esteem by a liberal assortment of bridal gifts. The happy couple left on the ten o'clock Wabash train for a short trip to Adrian and Tecumseh, and upon their return they will take up their permanent residence at 32 Myrtle St. Detroit. As the groom is not only an old Tecumseh boy but a former attache of the HERALD office, we have watched his business career in Detroit with considerable interest. We have no acquaintance with the bride, but can assure her that she has made a most happy choice of a life's companion. And the groom can rest assured that the congratulations extended by the HERALD are not a mere formality, but an earnest God speed from a personal friend. May health, happiness and prosperity attend them both through all the future years.

News was received last Monday that Harry Root was seriously ill down in Alabama, and his sister Jennie left home at once to go there.

Mr. C. C. Travis has been looking over several locations this week for his electric light plant and expects to close a bargain for a suitable site very soon.

The Lilley House is having a big run now, of both transient and regular guests. Several new regular boarders have engaged meals there during the past two weeks.

Mrs. N. R. Merritt returned home yesterday, after a winter's sojourn with her son at Big Rapids. She had a pleasant visit, but is glad to get back to the old home once more. She was accompanied by Miss Hyde of Lockport, N. Y. who will spend the summer here.

The Helen Blythe Co. gave the play entitled "Mother's Love" at the Opera House last Saturday evening. The play affords an opportunity for fine acting and the title role was carried very finely by Miss Blythe. On Monday evening the troupe presented the "L'Article 47," for the benefit of P. J. Welling, which was equally well rendered.

The funeral services of Mrs. James Boyd were attended at the family residence last Friday afternoon. As she was one af the pioneer settlers of Raisin, a large number of her old Raisin friends were present in addition to her Tecumseh acquaintances. Rev. W. H. Babbitt offered a few words of consolation to the mourners, and the Presbyterian choir rendered appropriate music. The remains were laid at rest in the Tecumseh cemetery.

A turn in the wheel in the Detroit Evening News office makes George E. Miller assistant managing editor, and Mr. Harry Lowrie succeeds to the position left vacant at the head of the state department by Mr. Miller's advancement. This is a stride forward by two Adrian gentlemen we are pleased to note. It is the sincere wish of The Times that their shadow may grow broader and broader in metropolitan journalism. They are gentlemen both, true friends, and as full of newspaper meat as their hearts are full of love for their calling.—Adrian Times.

The King's Daughters gave a very pleasant entertainment last Friday evening, at the residence of Mrs E. A. Wood. This is a charitable order, which was first started in 1886, and it now has a membership of over one hundred thousand members, with local clubs in every state in the Union. Their badge is a silver cross. Tecumseh has two clubs, one composed mostly of young people and this club got up the affair last Friday evening. Young ladies represented the different days of the week, and were attired in special costumes. A threading match was one of the attractions. Miss Carrie Osborne won the first prize for making the best time in threading a paper of needles—three minutes. Editor Field accomplished the feat in twenty minutes—the longest time—and took second prize. Ice cream and cake were served and the evening was most enjoyably spent by a large company.

Mrs. Gen. Humphrey and Mrs. T. S. Applegate, of Adrian, are on the committee having charge of the booth of "Home Industry," at the Detroit flower show this week. The booth represents the home for ex-convicts, and should be visited by all our citizens attending the great exhibition.

A bill has been reported on favorably by the House committee on Post Offices, by which all offices, the receipts of which exceed $3000 annually, would be entitled to a public building. If this bill should become a law, it would give Tecumseh a public building to cost not more than $25, 000.

Capt. C. R. Miller and bride were in New York city on Friday, having enjoyed a very pleasant bridal tour in New England, besides devoting a day or two to Boston. After seeing the attractions of the great metropolis they turn their direction homeward, arriving in Adrian probably the latter part of this week.—Adrian Times.

Harry VanAukin, aged 19, a Hudson boy, was drowned in the bay near Toledo last Monday night, while on a hunting and fishing expedition. He was employed as a salesman for Childs, Lee & Dunlap, wholesale boots and shoes, and his remains were taken to Hudson for interment by the side of his father, who died eight years ago. It was a very sad death, as he was universally loved.

LIPPINCOTT'S Magazine is showing remarkable enterprise in securing all the greatest novelists at home and abroad to contribute to its pages. The May number contains a novelette by Bret Harte entitled "A Sappho of Green Springs." That Mr. Harte's residence abroad has not dulled his genius for depicting Western scenes and character is abundantly proven by his latest story, which is one of the brightest and cleverest products of his brilliant pen.

Rev. Mr. Wastell of Clinton, was in town yesterday forenoon, and favored the HERALD with a friendly call.

All who enjoy a good cup of coffee—and who does not?—should not fail to read Will Anderson's new card on the 4th page.

The ladies of the M. E. church, at Springville, will hold their next social at the home of Mrs. Jno. Stafford, April 30th.

Alva Raymond has sold his Raisin farm, his son Will taking one half thereof, which he will convert into a home of his own.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Ide came to Tecumseh last week on their wedding trip and were the guests of Mr. Ide's parents until Tuesday.

A. C. Bryan, of Neosho Falls, Kan., is stopping with Frank Bryan now. After remaining here about two months he expects to go to Arkansas.

The Daily Free Press of last Sunday week, April 13, contained 24 pages. It was a bouncer, and the composition of the advertising was exceedingly artistic.

During a short stop at Dundee the other day, we met Dr. J. B. Haynes and found him enjoying health and prosperity. He had a "big run" during the grip epidemic.

John Carey and wife and C. J. Hendershot started yesterday for Denver, Col., expecting to make that city their home. Lloyd Carey will join them at Chicago and they will proceed west together.

Sportsmen are so thick up around Wampler's lake that it isn't safe to be outdoors in the daytime. Fred Hennie was struck in the head by a stray shot the other day, and quite badly injured.

M. W. Goodrich, of Dundee, has extended his restauraut business, and is now taking both transient and regular borders. We took supper there a few days ago, and partook of a first class evening meal.

Bishop Thos. G. Davies will make his annual visitation of St. Peter's church, Tecumseh, on Monday the 28th inst. Services will be held at 7:30 P. M. The Rite of Conformation will be administered at that time.

During a short business visit at Dundee last week we called on our old friend C. H. Gainsley and found him behind the counter, measuring off calico and dress goods patterns as usual. He seems to be building up a good substantial trade, and has evidently become a business fixture at Dundee.

Hon. G. P. Waring of The Messenger and secretary of state committee, left Monday to attend county conferences as the representative of the state committee. He visits Kalamazoo, Van Buren, Berrien and Cass county this week, and for the next six weeks will be on the wing attending conferences in other counties.

John F. Hicks is at his old tricks. He has lately fitted out the Episcopal church and the M. E. parsonage with a full assortment of lightning rods, and has done several smaller jobs about the village. Next week he goes to Monroe to fill several orders for rods in that county. He returned last week from Chicago where he purchased 50,000 feet of the very best quality of galvanized rod, and is now prepared to put up better rods than ever before. He expects to do a good business during the coming season in this vicinity.

Another pleasant social and entertainment was given by the G. A. R. and W. R. C. at their rooms last Monday evening. The following literary and musical program was presented:

Song—By the Audience.
Song—Grace Davis.
Recitation—Bessie Spayde.
Original Poem—Lucy Train.
Cornet and Piano Duet—Will and Edith Ingersoll.
Recitation—Miss Haydenbeck.
Reading—Mrs. E. S. Tate.
Song—Edgar and Etta Coddington.
Recitation—Isabel Davis.
Address—Rev. Palmer of Tipton.
Recitation—Lena Wyrill.
Recitation—Miss Bond.

The program was very nicely rendered and enjoyed by all present.

The second number of "The Breeze" was issued yesterday. Although a difficult thing to do, we consider it an improvement on the first number. The editorial work is exceedingly well done, and the sheet is a fine sample of typographical excellence.

Last Friday, while Abner Wilson was foddering stock, he accidentally jabbed the tine of a pitchfork into his foot, injuring the chord of the great toe. It produced a painful wound, though not a dangerous one, but he will be compelled to keep quiet and favor that foot for several days.

Arrangements have been made with Wolff and Leon for a concert program to be given at the May party, before the grand march, consisting of the following pieces: 1st.—Overture from the "Calif of Bagdad;" 2nd.—Musical Melange—Medley of late and popular airs. In conclusion, Ten minutes with the minstrels. Admission to gallery, 15c Reserved seats at Adamson's, 25c. Concert program begins at 8, grand march immediately following.

HE WAS AN OHIO MAN.

SUNSET COX EULOGIZED IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Eloquent Tributes to His Memory and Testimonials to His Many Virtues and Strength of Character by Those Who Knew Him Best.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 21.—At one o'clock business was suspended and Mr. Cummings, of New York, delivered an eloquent eulogy on the life and public services of the late S. S. Cox, of New York. He said Mr. Cox had friends everywhere and no enemies. His active and busy mind and his ever ready tongue were at rest. He traced the progress of Mr. Cox from his boyhood to his death, reviewing his services in the House in shaping legislation in behalf of the people, the workers, the poor and the humble. He spoke of the great services of the deceased in framing legislation affecting all classes of people, the life saving service, the census, the letter carriers, the contract labor law, and all, through the statutes during the last quarter of a century is traced the hand and the mind of the statesman. In conclusion Mr. Cummings, after paying a tribute to the domestic life of Mr. Cox, said: "Samuel S. Cox, aided to reconcile the sections; he shielded the Israelites from political demarcation; he shortened the tramp of the weary postman; he made the angry waves jubilant with the song of rescue. He was a star in our political galaxy from which men took observations. The House was his workshop; the constitution was his guide. He asked for no furlough; for no leave of absence. In the most trying times he stood for his country with a cheerful spirit and an unshaken constancy.

Mr. Cummings stated that Mr. Cox delivered the first speech in the present chamber of the House of Representatives.

Mr. Holman of Indiana, said that the work of Mr. Cox was ever on the side of humanity and his greeting was a gleam of golden sunshine. Mr. Bank of Massachusetts, said that from his youth up the aspirations of Mr. Cox appeared to have been directed to the amelioration, improvement, and elevation of his country and his countrymen. He has left no other tangible motive for the continuous wearying and crushing labors of his life. In a feeling and touching manner Mr. Banks expressed his admiration of the brave man who had fallen by reason of a too long and too severe public service.

Mr. Mills, of Texas, recalled the recent deaths of Cox, Kelley and Randall. As he stood over the three newly made graves, he could truly say that three great men had fallen. Eulogizing the deceased, Mr. Mills said: "He is dead, but he still lives in the hearts of the people, and will live on the pages of our history as long as our history shall endure, and as long as posterity shall cherish true manhood and a manly and a loving heart."

Mr. Butterworth, of Ohio, said that the world was the better for his having lived, and that those with whom he had come in contact were the better for that association.

Mr. Breckenridge, of Kentucky, said that Mr. Cox had many apparently diverse qualities that had the same common root. Under all circumstances and every emergency he had exhibited adaptibility to that particular occasion and to the particular environment. It was not unnatural that Mr. Cox, always a conspicuous, able and influential member of the House, had never become the leader of his party. There was something needed that had more of iron in it than had been in his composition; something that had less of consideration for the reputation and feelings of his followers and enemies than he had; something more willful, something larger in the capacity to risk all, to dare all and to wound, or if necessary, murder, all who stood between him and the accomplishment of his purpose, than he had possessed.

Mr. McMillan, of Tennessee, characterized Mr. Cox as gentle as a breeze to his friends; strong as a storm to his enemies.

Mr. Grosvenor, of Ohio, in eulogizing the deceased credited him with marvellous rapidity of thought and action—to his adversary seldom bitter, always ready; seldom cruel, always incisive.

Mr. Bland, of Missouri, Buckalew, of Pennsylvania, added their need of praise to the qualities of the deceased.

Mr. Lawler, of Illinois, expressed his admiration for the character of Mr. Cox and for his public achievements, especially for those which connected his name with the highest attributes of philanthropy.

Mr. Dunnell, of Minnesota, spoke of Mr. Cox's great devotion to the life saving service. To save human life was with him the greatest service of man. The drying up of a single tear was with him grander than the shedding of seas of blood.

Mr. McAdoo, of New Jersey, made a feeling address in honor of his friend, and Mr. Chipman, of Michigan extolled the Democracy and fidelity of the dead congressman.

Mr. Covert, of New York, closed the addresses, and unanimous request was granted for the printing of further remarks. Under this leave Mr. Quinn, of New York, will file a speech in which he will say that he had loved Mr. Cox, and he honored his memory now for his patriotic and magnificent Americanism, for the kindly gentleness of his great heart, for the brilliancy of his genius, and for the unselfish purity and grandeur of his whole life. The bright rays of his genius would continue to enlighten and cheer the people of every land. His name, now a household word, would live forever with the other immortals. His career as a patriot and a statesman would continue to illuminate the brightest pages of our history. Empires and thrones would pass away but his name would live forever and forever; be dear to the heart of a loving and grateful country.

Further remarks will be printed by Messrs. Stone, of Missouri; O'Donnell, Caruth, Washington, Heard, Maish, Wheeler, of Alabama; Yoder, McClammy, Turner, of New York; Hansborough and McCarthy. The House then as a mark of respect to the deceased at six o'clock adjourned.

In Honor of the Late S. S. Cox.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—The House spent the morning hour Saturday in consideration of unimportant measures, and at one o'clock gave up business for the delivery of eulogies on the life and services of the late Congressman Cox. A large number of citizens from New York were in the galleries. Eulogies were delivered by O'Neill, Cummings, Holman, Banks, Mills, Butterworth, Breckenridge, Grosvenor, Outhwaite, Bland, McMillen, O'Donnell, Durnell, McAdo, Covert, Wheeler, Washington, Chipman, Caruth, Heard, McClammy, Yoder, Marsh, Gifford, Lawler, McCarthy, Turney and McKinley.

MR. BLAINE'S SPEECH

Before the Pan-American Congress Just Before it Adjourned.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—Just before the adjournment of the Pan American congress Saturday. Mr. Blaine appeared and addressed the delegates as follows:

"GENTLEMEN—I withhold for a moment a word of final adjournment in order that I may express the profound satisfaction with which the government of the United States regards the work that has been accomplished by the international congress. The importance of the subjects which have claimed your attention, comprehensive intelligence, and the watchful patriotism which you have brought to their discussion must challenge the confidence and secure the admiration of the governments and people you represent, while that larger patiotism which constitutes the fraternity of nations has received from you an impulse such as the world has not before seen. The extent and value of all that has been worthily achieved by your conference cannot be measured today. We stand too near it. Time will define and heighten the estimate of your work, experience will confirm our present faith, and the final results will be your vindication and triumph. If in this closing hour the conference had but one deed to celebrate, we should dare to call the world's attention to deliberate, confident, solemn dedication of two great continents to peace and to prosperity which has peace for its foundation. We hold up this new Magna charta which abolishes war and substitutes between the American republics arbitration as the first and great fruit of international conference."

Mr. Blaine then alluded to the salutation and benediction of the poet Whittier, which had been received, and continued by extending to the delegates the wish of the president, that before leaving they should accept the hospitality of the United States in a tour through the South, and closed as follows:

"May I express to you, gentlemen, my deep appreciation of the honor you did me in calling me to preside over your deliberations. Invoking the blessing of Almighty God upon the patriotic and fraternal work which has been begun here for the good of mankind, I now declare the international conference adjourned without day."

The speech was heartily applauded by those present and the delegates then proceeded to the white house to pay their respects to the president, who entered the room on the arm of Secretary Blaine, and in a few appropriate remarks expressed his approbation of the work accomplished, especially the arbitration treaty. He closed by saying: "I wish each and every one of you a heartfelt good-bye."

His remarks were received with applause and the delegates then withdrew to their homes to prepare for their southern tour.

MOUNTAIN DEW

Renders the Imagination Very Productive Indeed.

CINCINNATI, April 21.—There are several features in connection with the sensational story sent out by two press associations that cast strong doubts on its credibility. The story was of a "deadly fight" supposed to have occurred between outlaws and state troops in Black Mountains, seventeen miles east of Harlan Court House, Ky., early Saturday morning. It was further stated that news had been brought in by a corporal who had been sent from the scene of the battle after reinforcements. This latter detail involves a practical impossibility. It is fifty-six miles over mountains, with mud a foot deep, from the scene of the reported fight to Pineville, the nearest telegraph office. No man alive could make that distance in thirty-six hours, let alone twelve, as intimated by the story.

It is also incredible that the solitary soldier in a strange land with troops at Lexington, two hunded miles from the scene, would leave a battle field at the dead of night without a guide to travere the section, every foot of which is guarded by hostile mountaineers. In addition to this the fact that Captain Gaither in command of the troops has repeatedly refused to interfere with the civil processes. The facts in the case probably are that Captain Gaither, fearing trouble in bringing out the prisoner, has sent for reinforcements.

"Mountain dew" and lively imagination of special correspondents having "space" in view, have supplied the rest of the details.

TITHING MEN.

Assaulted and Driven from Welsh Towns.

LONDON, April 21.—Attempts to enforce the collection of tithes continue to meet violent opposition in Wales. Great excitement was caused by an effort made by the officers of the law to sell property for arrears of tithes. A mob collected and refused to allow the sale to proceed. They drove the officers away with stones, and seized and maltreated the auctioneer, blackening his face, and finally conducting him blindfolded out of the town. These proceedings make an early action on the tithes bill, now awaiting final passage in the house of commons, imperative.

FORTY MILLIONS

Is the Business of the H. B. Claflin Co.—To be Reorganized.

NEW YORK, April 21.—John Claflin, the present head of the wholesale dry goods firm of H. B. Claflin & Co., confirms the report that the firm is to be reorganized as a joint stock company and to continue business after May 1st under the name of H. B. Claflin Co. The plan is being carried out under the provisions of the will of the late H. B. Claflin which directed such action at the expiration of five years from the time of his death. The business of the present firm is said to be about forty millions a year.

Primrose Day.

LONDON, April 21.—"Primrose Day" was observed Saturday with more than usual fervor. The pedestal of the statue of Lord Beaconsfield in the Parliament Square was heaped with flowers in various forms and large crowds gathered about it all day. Throughout the city the primrose was worn by people in every rank of life. Ladies of the Primrose league decorated their "habitations" and appeared in public wearing primroses.

The Concord Fight Celebrated.

CONCORD, MASS., April 21.—The 115th anniversary of the Concord fight was celebrated here with ringing of bells and firing of salutes. Many of the town people went to Lexington to celebrate. At Peabody 600 school children marched to the Lexington monument which marks the starting point of the minute men, and there held appropriate exercises.

JOHN C. FREMONT

Placed on the Retired List—The Bill Approved.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—The president has approved the bill placing John C. Fremont on the retired list of the army with the rank of major general.

A $9,000 HIGHFLYER.

He Defrauds a Jewelery Firm Of Costly Diamonds.

CHICAGO, April 21.—A special to the Inter-Ocean from St. Louis says: Lern Goldman, aged 27, a local Napoleon of finance and stock and lead broker, and a highflyer in financial circles generally, was arrested for defrauding the big jewelry firm of Merrick, Walsh & Shelp out of diamonds valued at $9,000. He got the diamonds ostensibly to show to his wife it is said, but failed to return them. The diamonds were found in a pawn shop. If he has a wife none of his friends ever knew it. His name, however, has been connected with that of a notorious woman, and he is said to have spent a fortune in furnishing her house. He is a nephew of Moses Traley, the great speculator who recently got caught in the big wheat deal. He has two brothers, prominent in financial and social circle. The arrest causes a sensation.

THE EQUESTRIAN STATUE

To Be Erected to General Grant at Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—The bill introduced by Senator Squire, of Washington, last Wednesday, providing for the erection of an equestrian statue of General U. S. Grant in this city, was passed upon favorably by the committee on public buildings and grounds, and later in the day Mr. Squire reported it back to the Senate. There is unanimous agreement among the members of the committee that at the earliest acceptable moment the bill shall be taken up and passed, so that it may be sent to the House and there put upon its passage, in order to have it enacted into a law before the fifth anniversary of the death of the great man whose memory this monument is to commemorate.

SHERMAN NO MORE.

The Boomers Abandon the Town and Choose a New Site.

CHAMBERLAIN, S. D., April 21.—Sherman, the town from which the boomers were ordered to move by troops a day or two ago, is no more. Some of the town-siters were in favor of remaining on the land until forcibly ejected by the soldiers, but better counsel prevailed and Saturday the work of removing the buildings began. The boomers succeeded in purchasing a homestead relinquishment from a white man in the vicinity, and it is to this new tract that the town is being moved. This long contested matter is now practically settled.

TYPHOID FEVER.

Forty-five Students Have the Epidemic—The College Closed.

ROCK ISLAND, ILL., April 21.—Augustana college, in this city, has been closed on account of an epidemic of typhoid fever among the students. Though Rock Island is otherwise free from the disease, about forty-five students have been on the sick list. Twenty of them are not regarded as dangerous, but sixteen cases have developed a malignant form of the disease. Two of the students have died and two others are in a critical condition.

Revenue Cutter Service.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—The Senate last week spent considerable time discussing the House bill to transfer the revenue cutter service from the treasury department to the navy department. The bill offers an additional compensation of $132,000 a year to the officers of the revenue marine, who now receive less compensation than they would were they in the navy. Some of them would be promoted and many retired. At present there are thirty six vessels in the service.

Army Desertions.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 21.—The reports received at the war department for the 9 months beginning with the fiscal year July 1st, 1889, and ending March 31st, 1890, show that there have been 1,578 desertions from the regular army during that period. For the corresponding months of the previous year there were 1,893 desertions—a reduction this year of over sixteen per cent. The desertions for March were but 151 as compared with 285 during March 1889.

Two Ex-Governors Dead.

LOCKHAVEN, PA., April 21.—Ex-Governor James Pollock died last night, aged 90 years. He was a member of the Twenty-eighth, Twenty-ninty and Thirtieth congresses; governor of Pennsylvania in 1854; director of the Philadelphia mint in 1861; superintendent of the mint in 1873 and federal chief advervisor of elections in 1886.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 21.—Ex-Governor W. W. Hoppin died yesterday, aged 82 years. He was governor from 1854 to 1856.

One Killed and the Other Mortally Wounded.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., April 21.—News of a fatal stabbing affray was received here from Hempstead county. J. V. Hildreth and Tony Cooper, two farmers, while rebuilding a fence, fell out about the ownership of some rails, and knives were resorted to. Cooper was stabbed to death on the spot, and Hildreth received wounds from which he cannot recover.

Mrs. Parnell's Condition.

ATLANTA, GA., April 21.—In a letter to Mit. D. Murphy, of the Atlanta Journal, John H. Parnell, brother of Charles Stewart Parnell, says that the recent reports of poverty and suffering of their mother are merely sensational.

Wants a Guardian.

CHICAGO, ILL., April 21.—The wife of E. J. Lehmann, proprietor of the "Fair," has petitioned that a conservator be appointed to take care of his estate valued at two million and a half.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January, A. D. 1884, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife, of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan, of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A. D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages, on page 591, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1885, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 26th day of January, A. D., 1890, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in Liber 118 of Mortgages, on page 669; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Eighty and 8-100 Dollars ($1780.08) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and the statutes of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now, as aforesaid, due and owing on said mortgage, together with interest to accrue thereon, and the costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Thirty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the 29th day of July, A. D. 1890, at nine o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan, known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5) town five (5) south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Default of payment having been made of a mortgage made by Marion F. Mason and Elizabeth J. Mason to Elihu L. Clark, dated the Thirteenth day of November, A. D. 1877, and recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county, Michigan, in Liber 90 of Mortgages, on page 82, the 13th day of November, 1877, and said mortgage was by instrument in writing, dated the Seventeenth day of November, 1883, assigned by Isabella T. Clark as executrix and residuary legatee of the last will and Testament of said Elihu L. Clark, deceased, to the undersigned, Bronson C. Knapp, and said assignment was duly recorded on the 17th day of November, A. D. 1883, in said Register of Deeds office, in Liber 104, of mortgages on page 5 8, upon which mortgage there remains due and unpaid at the date of this notice the sum of Seven Hundred Sixty-eight and 46-100 Dollars. And no proceedings at law or in equity have been taken for the collection thereof.

Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the power and provisions in said mortgage contained, and of the statutes of the State of Michigan in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the moneys above mentioned and interest thereon at 7 per cent per annum from the date of this notice, and costs of this foreclosure and sale, including an attorney fee as provided by law, I shall on the 7th day of July, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Adrian, Lenawee County, and State of Michigan, (that being the building in which the Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee is holden) all that part of the land situate in the village of Springville, in the County of Lenawee, and state of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Village lot Number Five (5), being situate on and a part of the Southwest quarter of the Southwest quarter of Section Fourteen (14) of Town Five (5) south of Range Two (2) East, containing about Three fourths of an acre of land.

SPELLIN' SCHOOL.

"Time we went to spellin' school,
Me an' Mandy, lawzy me,
I war jes a nat'ral fool
'Long o' her, an' knowed it; Gee!
When I look I see it yit
Stannin' up thar in the rows
Till the words begun to hit—
'Moribund' an 'adipose,'

"Drappin', drappin', one by one,
Till the last two stood thar still,
Lordy! wuzn't that the fun,
Mandy thar and Johnson's 'Bill;'
Spellin' book had plum giv' out
Dickshonary fetched along,
'Consecration' an' 'redoubt,'
Still they spelt an' nothin' wrong.

"'Vertebra,' 'vicissitude,'
Gosh, all hemlock, I got scared!
Both my lips together glued,
Mandy, tho', she never cared;
Teacher he wuz gettin' weak
Settin' thar, an' Mandy's pap—
Too excited fur to speak;
You could heard a needle drap.

"Last they got the Bible down,
Durn my buttons but they did;
Teacher got to slashin' roun'—
'Moabite' an' 'pyramid;'
Mandy took 'em as they passed
Kind o' heerful, kam an' slow;
She wuz grit, an' so at last
'Bill went down on 'Jericho.'

"Then the folks they riz, an,' well,
Sich a holler never wuz;
Sich a neverlastin' yell—
Hosses broke an' run becuz
They got skeered at all the noise
An' skedaddled down the track;
Tom an' me we got the boys
Posted out an' fetched 'em back.

"Then I helped her in, an' we—
Me an' Mandy, driv away;
I war jes a fool, but she
Bright an' smart as peep-o-day;
Here's her picter—sweet sixteen—
Hansum! well I sorter 'low;
Peartest gal I ever seen—
Married to the teacher now."

HOW LITTLE KIT DIED.

A Tragic Scene in a Town in Far-Off Idaho.

Small and Trembling Hands That Held a Mark for a Shooter—Tragic Result of a Drunken Man's Boast—Two Graves at Soda Springs.

It was a cold autumn evening, but the red sun going down behind the spectral mountains on the desert of Idaho seemed to brighten up every thing—just as a blazing log paints the white ceiling of the sitting-room and colors the faces of those who watch the incandescent embers glow. The village was quiet, as it always was at this time of day. It wasn't much of a village—a house here and a store there, and all blackened by storms and age. People were scarce, too. Those who were on the one broad street were the kind that grow among sage brush and grease wood—tall, heavily-jawed men, with an awkward swing to their gait and their faded clothing and high-heeled boots bespattered with mud. A lean, skulking dog prowled along the road, and three heavily saddled and branded ponies were tethered near the Ark saloon. There were two hundred and fifty people in the village but every body who lived there knew the population exceeded five hundred.

On this cold afternoon five of the inhabitants sat in front of the Ark saloon. Four of them were men who wore soft hats and collarless shirts. Their coarse hands and rugged faces showed that they toiled out of doors—herding cattle on the plains no doubt. The fifth person was a little girl with hair as black as the lava blocks and eyes so big and so round that they looked like wells of ink. She wasn't even seasonably dressed, for whenever the wind brushed her she shivered, hardy as she was. A coral necklace clung so tightly to her neck that it looked like a scar. Her thin, blue dress, clumsily cut from a large garment, hung in scandalous proportions about her well-rounded body.

The men had been drinking heavily. The little girl had come to lead her father away. But the big, rough man was angry. A man from the Snake river country had questioned his ability as a marksman with a six-shooter. The dispute had been going on for an hour or more, with delirious tales of gun feats and terrific expressions of profanity, when the mite of a child stole timidly up to the big man. For a moment the child was not noticed. The wind picked up the ragged hem of her dress and whipped it about her legs, and the big sun, glowing with the richness of a solferino disk, made the tears in the child's great eyes shine as one has seen rippling water glitter in a stream of sunshine. The glass in the shop windows was red, too, and the snow on the three mountain peaks in the distance looked like a carpet of crimson geraniums stretched over cathedral spires.

"Here's Kit, boys," the father finally exclaimed, as he looked admiringly at the tot who had some way managed to nestle beside his leg.

"I'll leave it to Kit, fellows, as to who is the handiest man with the gun. Who's the best man as what you ever seen, Kit?"

"Ma wants you to come home and eat supper," came the stammering, almost plaintive reply.

"So she does, Kit; but who's the best shooter as you know of?"

"Pap."

"Who shoots hers right and left and never spiles the meat?"

"Pap."

"Whose Kit be you?"

"Pap's; but mam wants you home for supper."

The four rough men looked at the child with a stupid gaze.

"Why, I'll tell you, fellers, as speaking about shooting, me and Kit will show you something, won't we, Kit?" and the big man drew two enormous revolvers from his holsters and placed them upon a box. The child shrank instinctively at the sight of the weapons.

"Won't we, Kit?" repeated the big man, noticing that the child was silent.

The black head nodded a reluctant affirmative.

"Course we will. Kit knows pap, and seeing as somebody does not knows us we will make us known." Then the man drew a leathern bag from his pocket and took from it two five-dollar gold pieces.

"Now, Kit," he said, with as much pride as his thick voice could portray, "you take these shiners and walk out into the wagon-track and hold 'em up stiddy like, and then we'll show 'em how pap kills hens."

The child faltered, but parental discipline had been stern in her home, and with nervous fingers she seized the coins and walked bareheaded out into the street. The father seized his heavy guns and staggered proudly to the roadway.

"Stand straight like, Kit," commanded the father.

The little girl's tattered shoes came together and her white face was turned directly toward the father.

"Hoist up the shiners, little un', this way—see?" and the man, placing his pistols upon the ground, held up his thumbs and index fingers so that those of each hand came together.

The little coins flashed above the tangled mass of hair.

"Be you ready, Kit?"

There was not a tremor in the little body.

The drunken man, proud of his marksmanship, leveled the muzzles of his weapons at the child.

The eyes of the shooter closed and opened in maudlin fashion. On a sudden two streams of fire poured from the black barrels of the pistols. The smoke from the weapons turned crimson as it arose in the red light. The child lay upon the ground with her legs stiffening in the lava dust. A white hand clutched one of the gold coins. The metal once clasped by the other hand had been blown down street by a bullet. One bullet had torn its way somewhere beneath that crown of tangled hair.

"Guess you hurt the child, Ike," one of the drunken men exclaimed, as he gave his trousers a hitch and reeled out to the spot where the child lay.

The father's heavy revolvers fell upon the ground. His ashy face moved toward the head of his child. As he grasped the rigid shoulders a tiny stream of blood trickled over his gnarled fingers. Then he arose. Men and women with terror-stricken faces were clustered about him and dogs skulked around the crowd. The sun was now so low that the peaks of the distant mountains glowed with a delicate pink, and the sky, beginning with a deep maroon at the horizon, ran in beautiful shadings to a soft, rich purple at the zenith. For a moment the father was silent. He seemed to be looking for a familiar face in the crowd. He was sober now. His face was almost hideous in its determination.

"That's the worst shot what was ever made," he finally stammered as he wiped the sweat off his face. "Boys, I can beat that. Hands off, till I show you." And before one of the villagers could reach him the frantic man picked up one of his weapons, and, turning it full upon himself, fired.

They didn't take the bodies home that night. They were placed side by side in a feed store and guarded by three hardy villagers. There are two graves in the sage-brush near Soda Springs. The boasting marksman and his guns rest in one. The yellow grass on the other grave covers little Kit, who was buried in her tattered dress and worn-out shoes. The mother married the man from the Snake River country.—Chicago Herald.

RABBIT'S-FOOT LUCK.

Why the Old Darky Believed in It with All His Soul.

"Do I believe dat dis yere rabbit's fut brings me luck?" The old darky repeated this question to a New York Sun man in shrill tones as he softly brushed his chin with it. "Why, sah, if I hadn't a bin fur dis fut dar's no tellin what might a happened to me. "Look a dat Julius Tompkins. He 'lowed dat rabbit's fut was no good, an' whar is he now? Went up to Louisville to work in a pork house an' died 'wid small-pox."

"Yes."

"An' look at de time I was on dat coal barge at Mobile. Had dis yere fut hang in' to my neck by a blue string, an some of dem niggers called me 'Hoodoo' and was gwine to take it away from me an' feed it to a dog. When dat barge struck a snag an' went to de bottom who got saved? Dis yere pusson an' nobody else. Four of 'em went right down like rocks, jist like dey might hev expected.

"Lucky for you."

"Yes, sah, an' how was it de time de ghost of Peter Robbins cum screaming frew our nayborhood? Pete he was hung up at Greenville, you know. I was right dar' an' seed it all, an' when he swung off I kissed dis rabbit's fut fo' times. Some of de folks laughed at me an' called me a fool nigger. But how did it cum out? Peter's ghost cum up to Langville an' scart every boy outer his shoes—every body but me. Nebber knocked on my doah one single time, an' nebber left no smell of brimstone round my cabin. Couldn't do it, you know. Dis yere fut was pawin' him away all de time."

"Will any rabbit's foot bring a person luck?"

"No, sah! No, sah! Dat's de reason I wouldn't sell dis one fur a million dollars in gole! De sarcumstances hev got to be right. You has got to find your rabbit in de full of de moon. The wind has got to be from de east. The rabbit has got to be huntin' fur jimweed to cure a cataract in his left eye. You has got to creep up an' kill him with a stick dat a dead man has carried, and when you ar' takin' off de fut you have got to h'ar a ghost cry out down in de cotton. Oh, no, sah. Doan you let none of dese yere common niggers round yer sell you no common rabbits' futs. They wouldn't keep de kyars on de track till you got over to Decatur."

He Sat on the Fire.

A householder discovered that a spark from a neighboring conflagration had fallen upon his own slightly slanting roof and had set fire to the shingles. All the buckets and tubs had gone to the big fire and there was no one to send after them, even had there been time for such a measure; but the man was equal to the emergency. He rushed to a pond near by and deliberately sat down in the water. To run upstairs and out upon the roof was the work of a moment, and then he "sat on" the fire in more senses than one and saved the house.

PARABLE OF THE SOWER.

LESSON IV. SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 27.

Text of the Lesson, Luke viii, 4-15—Commit Verses 12-15—Golden Text, Luke viii, 18—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

According to the first three verses of this chapter, after bringing joy and peace to the poor women in Simon's house, He went through all the cities and villages showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, the kingdom foretold by all the prophets, when the Lord shall again choose Jerusalem, comfort Zion and restore Israel, never to be plucked up or scattered again (Zech. i, 17; ii, 10-12; Jer. xxiv, 6, 7); that through them He may establish His Messianic kingdom in all the world. He was accompanied by the twelve and certain women whom He had healed and who now ministered unto Him. Returning, probably, to Capernaum, He healed one possessed with a blind and dumb demon. This drew forth from the Pharisees the accusation that He was possessed by the devil, and thus did these mighty works. Jesus in reply warned them of the sin that can never be forgiven, whether committed in this age or the age to come. He also foretold His death and resurrection and pointed them to a coming judgment. They receive not His teaching, but determine to kill Him (Matt. xii).

4. "And when much people were gathered together, and were come to Him out of every city, He spake by a parable." Matthew says: "The same day went Jesus out of the house and sat by the seaside; and great multitudes were gathered together unto Him so that He went into a ship and sat, and the whole multitude stood on the shore." If the rulers would not listen to Him the common people heard Him gladly (Mark xii, 37); and it is still true that "not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called" (I Cor. i, 26).

5-8. "A sower went out to sow his seed," etc. "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." It is a simple story of what may have been taking place before the Saviour's eyes at that moment. On the hillside a farmer may have been actually sowing his seed, some falling [illegible] beneath

Read in reference to them such words as Luke vi, 22, 23; xix, 16-19; xxii, 28, 29; II Peter i, 5-11; II John viii, etc. The difference between those and the others is that these have truly accepted Jesus (not simply the truth about Him) and have firmly believed the truths concerning the kingdom and the glory to be revealed at His appearing. They are, therefore, weaned from present things, are not seeking to convert this world in this dispensation, but, believing this parable, are not discouraged if their labor seems largely in vain; content to have it turn out as He said for the present, sure that in His time and way the kingdom will come.

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidney, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles should remember that no other remedy in the world will so spedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

A nine-pound girl has tripped into the family of Prof. Tripp, of Addison.

Monroe has already begun preparations for celebrating the Fourth of July.

The ladies of Addison have declared war on the whiskey shops of that town.

The Good Templars' Lodge, of Clayton, initiated twenty-one new members in one evening.

The flock of Rev. Father Nacy, of Hudson, surprised him with a cash present of $80 on Easter day.

Twenty-two new members have joined the M. E. church of Hudson, as a result of the revival meetings.

A Michigan mathematical fiend calculates that 17,500,000 people in the United States have had the grippe.

Hillsdale county has a Democratic board of Sepervisors for the first time since the Republican party was organized.

The new vault in the Saline cemetery received its first corpse last week, although it has been completed over six months.

In May, Col. Charles V. Deland, of Jackson, Vice President of the State Association of the Patrons of Industry, will deliver six lectures in Lenawee county.

A Hudson undertaker was recently married in Adrian. It seemed so odd to him to contribute $5 to the enterprise, instead of charging $100 for mortuary expenses.—Adrian Press.

Irving Reed, aged about 18, living at Wm Baker's, in western part of Dundee, was monkeying with a target gun Sunday, when it went off, badly injuring one of his feet. Dr. Haynes dressed the wound.

The Prohibitionists of Hudson have increased their vote this spring 20 over that of 1889. The party is making progress at the west end. Behold how a few hops gradually hoppeth the whole beer tank.—Adrian Press.

Through Congressman Allen's recommendation the President has sent to the Senate the nomination of Eugene E. Beal for postmaster at Ann Arbor. Now there'll be great gnashing of teeth at the university town.

The postoffice now has two lady clerks—Miss Minnie Palms having taken a situation thereat. Postmaster Johnson, finding the business too confining for his health, by above arrangement will be enabled to spend more of his time outside the office.—Dundee Reporter.

In the midst of Democratic defeat in Macon, it is encouraging to reflect that the party elected a highway commissioner; for we trust he will cast up the highway of democracy so plain that no fool need err concerning the political road he should travel. The tariff is a tax. Adrian Press.

Than Stoner, of Blissfield, has discovered that the shrinkage of his woodpile is caused by a female wood thief who carries it away in the gloaming of the eastern twilight. And yet that woman has a prosperous woodpile of her own. Strange that she would pile up that of her neighbors.—Adrian Press.

The Blissfield Advance scolds the Times for its attacks on Fred Bay, which it charges was designed to defeat his election for Supervisor, and claims that now Mr. Bay having been vindicated by being rechosen, he will set an example for the board and return the $9 overpay allowed him while absent from the board.—Adrian Press.

In the opinion of the State board of health measles is a disease dangerous to public health and they therefore advise health officers throughout the State to placard all houses where there are cases of this disease, and to take the same precautions after recovery or death therefrom as are observed in cases of other contagious diseases.

An examination of the boiler of the fire engine a few days ago showed that some of the flues were mere shells and that it was a wonder they had not collapsed long ago. The machine was hauled to Hoxsie's foundry Tuesday and an entire new set of flues will be put in, the expense of which will be some $150. While repairs are being made the village will be under patrol every night.—Blissfield Advance.

The Dundee cheese factory began business for the season Monday with ten patrons and 1500 lbs. of milk, the number of patrons and quantity of milk have increased each day during the week. The factory has been supplied with new vats and other improvements. A large business is expected for the season. The amount of milk now received daily reaches about 2500 lbs.—Dundee Reporter.

Nothing succeeds like success. A fitting example is the Ann Arbor Argus, which but a few years ago was a comparatively unknown sheet with a very meager patronage, but under its present management has grown to be one of the best county papers in Michigan. Its latest stride forward is to appear semi-weekly—each Tuesday and Friday. Bro. Beakes will be giving 'em a daily next.—Saline Observer.

The debate between D. B. Heckert and J. H. Porter on the Sunday rest bill soon to be held in Ogden, will bring out a crowd. The gentlemen are neighbors, both Prohibitionists, and have honest difference of opinion about the Blair bill, which they will discuss in a gentlemanly and neighborly manner. Our Ogden friends have some life in them and are not afraid to tackle anything that comes along.—Michigan Messenger.

"Love laughs at locksmiths." A. P. Fisher, an ex-conductor on the Lake Shore, who resides at Wauseon, had forbidden his 17 year-old and pretty little adopted daughter Katie from receiving the attentions of a young mechanic named Calvin Palmer. On Friday night week the maiden and her lover, though not in each other's company, attended a dance and then carried out an elopement scheme by taking a train and going to Cleveland, where they lost no time in getting married. Wauseon society was considerably agitated over the affair.—Morenci Observer.

FREE EDUCATIONS FOR GIRLS.

How Girls Can Get a College Education Without Cost.

A most praiseworthy movement is about to be set on foot by The Ladies' Home Journal of Philadelphia. It proposes to give to any young girl of 16 years or over who will send to it between now and January 1st, 1891, the largest number of yearly subscribers to the JOURNAL, a complete education at Vassar College or any other American college she may select. The education offered includes every branch of study, with every expense paid, the Journal agreeing to educate the girl irrespective of the time required or the expense involved. To this is also pinned a second offer which guarantees to any girl of 16 or over who will secure 1000 yearly subscribers before January 1st., a full term of one year at Vassar or any other college, with all expenses paid, thus making it possible for any number of young girls to receive free education at the best colleges. Any girl can enter into the competition, and any such can be thoroughly posted by simply writing to The Ladies Home Journal at 435 Arch Street, Philadelphia. The management says that it has been led to its generous offers by the fact that there are thousands of parents throughout the country anxious to educate their daughters, and yet who cannot afford the expense. This step helps to a comparatively easy solution of the problem, since it throws a free education into the hands of any bright and active girl. The Journal's movement is one that certainly cannot be too highly commended and praised.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH, Mich.
Council Room, April 21, 1890.

Regular Session.

Present—President Heesen, Trustees Ames, Elliott, Heck, James, Kennedy, Smith and the recorder.

The minutes of the last regular and called meetings were read and approved.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following bills were received and referred to the finance committee:

Wm. Payne, assessment rolls $5.00; and the following for street labor:—E. A. Hodges $21.00; B. Bartholomew $6.25; A. Kent $6.25; W. Hastings $5.00; L. Younys $13.75; Wm. Mellon $8.75; David Zeluff $2.50.

The liquor bonds of Will H. Suffin, Erving C. Kennedy, Wm. J. Arnold, and Eugene Service, each in the penal sum of $4,000, with two sureties, and the drug bond of Chas. A. Wright & Co. in the penal sum of $2,000, with two sureties, were presented and on motion were severally accepted and determined sufficient.

On motion the street committee was instructed and empowered to locate the street intersections for the electric lamps.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The finance committee reported favorably on the above bills as read and on motion the recorder was instructed to draw orders on the treasurer for the several amounts.

On motion the penalty of the marshal's bond for the ensuing year was fixed at $6,000.

The President recommended that certain repairs be made on the cemetery fence on the south side.

On motion the president's recommendations were adopted and the cemetery committee was instructed to make the necessary repairs as suggested in said recommendations.

The president further suggested that the old cemetery lots and alleys be cleaned up and put in a suitable condition. The recommendation was, on motion, adopted, and the cemetery committee instructed to carry it into effect.

Council then adjourned.
CHAS. F. FIELD, Recorder

REPORT OF CLINTON LECTURE COURSE.

The Clinton lecture course after having given eight entertainments is completed. It has been the most successful in every way ever given in Clinton. Its success is due not only to good management on the part of the committee, but to the hearty co operation of the people of Clinton and vicinity. Get ready for next year. THE NEW VIBRATOR. — THE NEW VIBRATOR. — THE NEW VIBRATOR. — THE NEW VIBRATOR. — THE NEW VIBRATOR. — THE NEW VIBRATOR.

The same firm which 31 years ago completely revolutionized the Threshing Machine trade by inventing a new Threshing Machine, much better than any machine before known,—so that all builders of the old-style Threshing Machines stopped making them and copied the new machine as closely as they dared—have now made another advance, and in their New Vibrator present a Threshing Machine containing entirely new features in separation and cleaning, which place it as far ahead of any other as the old Vibrator was ahead of the "Endless Apron" machines. Every Farmer and Thresherman should at once get full information regarding the NEW VIBRATOR, which will be sent Free on application to

WILHELM'S IMPROVED CREAMERY CAN.

Unequalled for private Dairies of from one cow to full size Creamery. $5.00 will buy FOUR 3-GAL. CANS making a capacity of 12 gallons of milk, and will PRODUCE ALL THE CREAM FROM 4 TO 8 HOURS, in a vat, tub, or any receptacle the farmer may choose, holding water from 10 to 14 inches in depth, and at temperature from 40 to 60 degrees cold. IT MAKES A PERFECT SEAM and combines the advantage of deep setting, rapid cooling, protecting the milk from all impurities of the atmosphere which so quickly taints cream. Also preventing souring by thunder storms, from flies, insects, dust, and all bad odors, thus preserving both cream and milk, clean and sweet. Over 600,000 in actual use in the U. S. One setting of milk is all that is needed to prove the merit of the can. Usual size of can, 3-gal., price $1.25. A liberal discount on orders of one dozen Cans and upwards. Write for descriptive circular and testimonials. I also make a specialty of building Creameries and furnishing all the best improved machinery and apparatus. JOHN WILHELM, Wooster, Wayne Co. O.

C. L. Osgood, Samaria, Mich. says—The Milk Cans I bought of you give perfect satisfaction. We can make just as good and just as much butter in the most unfavorable season of the year by the use of your Cans as at any other time of the year. I have 4 Cans. Have used them 3 years and would not be without them.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, with its varied and excellent contents, is a library in itself.

It was indeed a happy thought to print an entire novel in each number.

Not a short novelette, but a long story such as you are used to get in book form and pay from one dollar to one dollar and a half for.

Not only that; but with each number you get an abundance of other contributions, which give you a good magazine besides the novel.

The ringing blows which have been struck at the gateway of popular favor, have resounded throughout the entire land, and to-day Lippincott's Magazine stands in the front rank of monthly publications, and is the most widely read-and-talked-of publication of its kind in the world. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

O. P. Bills, of Tecumseh, was in the village Monday.

Mrs. A. J. Sutton has been on the sick list for the past week.

Rufus Raymond, of Mason, Mich., called on friends Monday evening.

Dispatcher Frank Allen, of Toledo, was in the village the first of the week.

Agent A. J. Sutton is moving and repairing his old house on North street.

Mrs. W. J. Helm and daughter spent the past week with Franklin relatives.

H. J. Williams and T. H. Temple report a fine time while at Lake Erie last week.

Mrs. J. W. Osborn is sick again with hemorrhage of the stomach, at present writing.

Schuyler Easlick is performing the duties of agent at the station during the absence of A. J. Sutton.

Cornelius Waring, of Holland, Mich. was home the first of the week, being called by the death of his mother.

C. Satterthwaite, of Holloway, and Miss Alice Garlinghouse and Etta Coddington, of Tecumseh, called on Miss Emma Miller Sunday evening.

Sabbath evening services will begin hereafter at 7:30 during the summer.

The third Quarterly meeting services will be held on next Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. John Pocklington is very sick with pneumonia at present writing.

Mrs. John Boyd, after a long sickness, died on Monday. The funeral services were held at the house on Wednesday morning.

The L. C. S. will hold a social at the home of Mrs. W. R. Wilson, on Friday evening of the present week. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Hot coffee and doughnuts will be served during the evening.

Those who attended the flower show at Detroit last week are Rev. J. A. Lowry and wife, W. P. Cadmus and wife, W. F. Clack, Ransom Remington, Mrs. D. W. Loree, Mrs. G. P. Waring, Mrs. Frances Wiggins, Misses Ada Linn, Kitty Clark, Clara Temple, Mary and Jennie Oogood.

A large number of our young folks took in the mock trial held at Grange Hall on Friday evening. There was considerable amusement furnished throughout the evening. Charles Hiscock, who acted as prosecutor, did so very ably in questioning and cross-questioning the witnesses for the defense. Joe Howell, attorney for the defense, put forth some very weighty argument for his client. Both pleas were well presented, as was also the judge's charge to the jury. The jury failed to agree on a verdict.

OBITUARY.

Our village and vicinity was greatly shocked last Saturday afternoon when the report spread that Mrs. Waring had suddenly died at her home. Neither friends nor physician, who were by her side immediately after she was stricken, could fan the flame of life or bring a moment's consciousness. She had been about her usual house hold duties and sat down in the afternoon, as was her custom, feeling only slightly indisposed. The following sketch was read at the funeral, which was held at the M. E. church Tuesday forenoon, Rev. J. A. Lowry officiating.

Ruth Ann Lockwood was born in Orange county, N. Y., Nov. 14th, 1815, and died April 26th, 1890, being in her seventy-fifth year. In the year 1832, in the county of her birth, she was married to Joshua Waring and two years later they came to the wilderness of Michigan to locate a home, and, and, after living a few months in Raisin township, determined to permanently settle in Ridgeway, where they became pioneers. Their new, though humble, home was for years used for prayer meetings and Sunday preaching service, they being among the first who organized a class in the English settlement belonging to the Methodist society. Their history is well-known to all in this community. The husband and father was called to claim his reward seven years since.

Mrs. Waring at the age of fifteen, sought the Saviour and his pardoning grace, and often referred to the bright witness of the spirit which accompanied her daily walk of life. She at once united with the Methodist church of which she remained a faithful and active member. Only those who have had fellowship with her know how much this statement implies.

Mrs. Waring's death came suddenly, without a moment's warning, while sitting in her home in her usual good health, with the exception of a slight attack of neuralgia. She fell from her chair and the light of life was out, passing away without a word or a struggle, a fitting termination of such an earnest, lovely Christian life. Her last words spoken to the son upon whom she had especially leaned in her declining years, was on the Monday morning previous to her death, when he was about to leave home for a few days. She said: "I am sorry to see you go away but you can always know that your mother's prayers follow you."

When such a life goes out, after lighting the pathway of a household for nearly sixty years it leaves a vacancy not easily understood when the trying hour comes. However, the consolation of knowing that a life's work has been well done and a Christian example set before all, and the spirit translated to that haven of rest, is worth everything to those who mourn their loss.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Now is the time to set maples, and any number of them can be had for the trouble of going after them.

Rev. Mr. Borden also seems to have a touch of the fever and is getting material on the ground for a house.

Dave Sloan has fitted up a suit of rooms over his store and has moved in and now is a full pledged Brittonite.

John Beasley is making preparations to build some houses on the lots once occupied by the Dewey Stave Co.

Grandma Britton is spending a few days at Mathew Yates over in Macon.

Irv. Hause has gone to Clinton to work in the Woolen mill and not to join the Kickapoos.

I. S. Osborn is building a house on Wells street, just to pass away the time, until he gets ready to open up his summer campaign.

Joseph Exelby, who has been sick for some months, is at this writing quite low, and his friends have grave doubts as to his recovery.

Frank Brown of the firm of F. Brown & Co., has moved his family into the village, occupying Geo. Smiths house in Osborns addition.

Dr. Charlie made his Britton friends a short call Monday while on his way to Detroit. The Dr. is all wool and a yard wide and wears well.

The Dramatic Club expects to take "Dot" to Holloway next Saturday evening, and we hope the people of that city will give them a full house.

Miss Bertie Hoffman of Quincy Mich, is visiting at Squire Rogers. Miss Hoffman made many warm friends here while in charge of the primary department of the school a year ago.

Jess Coller has had a tussle with lung fever or some analagous disease out is able to be out again, he is putting in this week on the farm and we hope to see him return looking as of old.

Our little village was greatly shocked on Saturday afternoon upon hearing of the sudden death of Mrs. Waring of Ridgeway. Loved and respected by all and especially by all of her old neighbors of pioneer days, who particularly feel the loss of this one of their number.

CARRIE AGNES BOYCE.

Deceased was a daughter of James T. and Esther A. Boyce, of eastern Macon. At the age of 17 years, 9 months and 14 months Carrie peacefully closed her eyes in death, Monday evening, April 14th, 1890, at 10 o'clock P. M., after an illness of eleven months and a half from that most deceptive disease, consumption. Though it seems most hard, for one just developing into life's most hopeful days of promise, as in the case of the deceased, to be cut off in death from earthly relationships, so full of golden hope, yet in the case of her who is only gone but a little in advance of parents, sisters, brothers and friends who mourn—"ye sorrow, not even as others who have no hope"—for Carrie read her Bible, and sought from the Lord in whom she trusted a preparation for death. The funeral services were conducted by Elder James Wright, of Britton, from the Reformed church of east Macon, on Thursday, at 12 o'clock. There where present many of the neighbors and friends to manifest their esteem for one whom they respected in life.

J. W.

Card of Thanks.

We most sincerely express our thanks to the neighbors and friends for their sympathy and deeds of kindness during the sickness, death and burial of our beloved daughter Carrie; also to the Britton choir for their appropriate music and song, rendered at the funeral.

ONSTED ODDS.

Grass and wheat doing finely.

A very nice rain last Saturday.

The Sunday school has raised some money to enlarge their library.

Herbert Gallup has erected a small barn at the back end of his lot in the village.

Oats all sown and now the farmers are busy preparing the ground for potatoes, corn and beans.

Clarence Aten has very nicely painted his house lately, which improves the looks very much.

Wm. Aldrich called on his granddaughter, Mrs. C. D. Bills, at Tecumseh, the latter part of last week.

S. G. Aten has remodeled his dooryard and somewhat changed the position of the approach to his house from the street.

William Hawkins has sold a lot of January lambs for $3.50 per head. They were a cross between coarse and fine wool sheep.

A brand-new girl at Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Kane's, and it makes John smile right out loud to call him pa, as this is their first production.

Frank Sheeler, our supervisor, is confined to his bed with inflammatory rheuma[illegible] a stomach difficulty, and Mr. [illegible]lbury has been appointed [illegible]sh taking the assessment, etc.

Mrs. Eliza Durkee was buried on Wednesday of last week. The funeral was held at the Prospect Hill church and the remains taken to the Junction cemetery for interment. She has been a sufferer from consumption for a number of years.

RAISIN RACKET.

Jim Gordon thinks that a picket saw is not a very good thing to trim finger nails with because it is apt to take a piece of finger with it.

Westgate and Jones are having quite a run of picket sawing on the river flats. They have sawed at two places and have cut nearly fifty cords of bolts, and are doing some very good work.

Mrs. J. H. Green attended the District W. C. T. U. meeting at Hudson as a delegate, and visited her sister at Rollin.

Quarterly meeting of the Society of Friends will be held at the Valley church on Saturday and Sunday of this week. Rev. David Lewis and Judith Johnson are expected to be present. Those that have heard them speak very highly of them.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.

The Longmont Ledger of a recent date contains a spicy account of a surprise that was played upon our whilom friend, Rev. H. L. Hayward. We wish we might have been there to have made one of the party.

Last Saturday evening, April 5th, an overwhelming surprise was played upon the editor of this paper and his wife, by over 60 of their acquaintances and friends. It proved to be not only a "surprise," but a most welcome social visit of pretty large proportions, which did not terminate until 11:30 o'clock. It was about the hour 8:30, when a ring at the door announced the arrival of callers As soon as the door was opened, a stream of male and female humanity came pouring into the room, all of them overflowing with good feeling and hearty congratulations to the editor and his wife, on their having reached the 35th. anniversary of their wedding.

Thirty six of the gentlemen were each armed with a folding chair, so as to insure them a chance to sit down some portion of the time during the evening. Of course, these uninvited but none the less welcome guests, took forcible possession of the premises and had everything their own way. The editor and his wife were directed to remain in the parlor until further orders, the door between that room and the dining room being closed and guarded. When the door was again opened, it disclosed a large and elegant hanging lamp, suspended from the ceiling and flooding the room with its brilliant light. In a few well chosen words, expressing the kind feelings which had prompted the bestowal of the beautiful gift, Rev. H. E. Thayer made a formal presentation of it to the surprised and delighted recipients. Accompanying the lamp, there was also a low rocking chair of antique oak. Both these articles are useful as well as ornamental, but in all the years to come will be valued not so much on account of their intrinsic worth, as for the visible proof they furnish of the affection cherished for us, by those with whom we are closely associated in business and social relations.

Of course our unexpected guests brought their own refreshment, which would have done credit to the wedding supper of a prince of royal blood. There were more than five baskets full left, after all the guests were filled. All who were present accepted an invitation to be with us at our golden wedding 15 years hence, when the writer of this will be a frisky youngster within three months of his 90th. birthday anniversary.

GREEN GOODS.

A Franklin man has a little experience which he is not Likely to repeat.

The following particulars in regard to the Tipton robbery case are gathered from the Times.

After developments in the case of the robbery of the store of W. J. Hampton, of Tipton, the other night, have brought to light a state of things not altogether pleasant.

It seems that Hampton went East some weeks or so ago to buy a stock of boots and shoes, borrowing about $400 with which to make the purchase. At Cleveland and Buffalo he could find no bargains to his liking, and went on around through Washington, Philadelphia, and New York.

At the latter place he walked into the old "green goods" scheme of a sharper, in which he was to receive a large quantity of bogus money for a small quantity of his $400 in good cash.

Of course he was shown a specimen of the "queer," and could not tell the difference between what he was purchasing and the money he was to pay for it, for the reason that there was no difference. He was being worked on the old "saw-dust" racket.

His borrowed money was paid over and the "green goods" placed in a satchel, and set up on a shelf. A pleasant little time followed, in which Hampton was made to believe that he had struck the prince of all good fellows. When his back was turned the satchel was slid through a panel in the wall and another one substituted, filled with worthless paper.

After the conviviality, Hampton took his purchase to the express office, and shipped it home, not wishing to entrust so much boodle to his own care by day and night on the train. He arrived home Saturday night, opened his bundle, and found—not his crisp and fresh bank notes, but a quantity of paper, as worthless as the scraps that blow through the streets.

He sat down and brooded over the loss of his $400, and in his broodings he conceived the idea of having his store robbed and the money stolen.

Officers Ferguson and Pease were sent out there by Sheriff Baldwin yesterday, and by a shrewd piece of detective work on their part, the whole scheme was unearthed, Hampton was pinched, and made a full confession.

Sheriff Baldwin and Deputies Ferguson and Peas went out again to-day, and returned at noon with a full written confession from Hampton, since he left Lenawee to go east, and buy his stock of goods.

Thus ends another robbery in the county, and to Messrs. Ferguson and Pease is due the credit of stopping a fruitless search for an imaginary burglar.

Found An Old Friend.

COLOMA, Mich., December 3, 1889.

Gentlemen:—One of your circulars came to my notic to-day, and it reminds me of an old and very valuable friend, one that saved my life 12 years ago, and because I had not needed its help since, I coughed continually and had chills every day. I was as miserable as any one could be and live. A lady who knew the cause of my illness persuaded my mother to have me use Zoa-Phora—it was called Woman's Friend then. Before I had used one bottle my cough and chills ceased. I kept on and used two bottles and they brought me out all right. I afterwards mared, and am now the mother of three nice hearty children.

I feel that I owe a great deal to Zoa-Phora. I hope it will become well known and that every woman and girl who needs it will use it. If you will send me some circulars I will give them to acqsiutances and do all I can to help you.

Yours truly, MRS. LAURA FURMAN.

To Zoa Phora Medicine Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.

After a long illness of pain and suffering, Miss Rose Lowry departed this life on Friday last at the age of 67 years. Funeral services were conducted on Sunday by Rev. W. H. Babbitt.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAY 1.

The trusts seem to be all well pleased with the new schedules in the McKinley tariff bill.

Eighteen of the twenty townships in Washtenaw county elected Democratic Supervisors this spring.

Gov. Campbell says that the Democratic gains in that state are due to the young men. This is undoubtedly true.

The republican Chicago Tribune declares that the McKinley bill "has not a ghost of a chance of adoption in this republican congress."

Major McKinley's what-is-it may not reduce the public revenues, but it is doing excellent service in reducing Republican majorities.

The farmers Alliance of Nebraska is petitioning congress for the free coinage of silver, and additional greenbacks up to $50 per capita.

The tariff is a tax, and a bounty is also a tax in a different form. If the sugar raisers are entitled to a bounty, why not the wheat raisers also?

The Springfield, Mass. Republican says that from 60 to 100 woolen mills in New England have been tariff taxed into idleness within the past year.

A bounty is a tariff tax in its most odious form. The consumer alone pays the tariff tax, but every tax payer, without exception, is compelled to pay a share of a bounty.

President Harrison has signed the World's Fair bill and it is now a law. Chicago has a great trust committed to her care, but we believe she will be equal to the emergency. She will give the country an exhibition worthy of the occasion, of the trust, and of the site.

An Exchange says: What bothers the Republicans is to tell what caused their overthrow in Rhode Island. If they say it was the Australian ballot system, they confess to years of corruption at the polls. If they attribute it to the movement for a low tariff they foretell the oblivion to which the high tariff party is to be forever relegated.

And now it appears that the interview published in the World, wherein Grover Cleveland was made to heap coals of fire upon editor Dana's head, was "overdrawn" by a reporter. The World says that the offensive remarks were never uttered by Mr. Cleveland, but were added by the reporter without authority. So the venerable editor has emptied his venom upon Grover Cleveland's head for nothing. Is'nt it shocking?

If it is true, as Mrs. Clymer, president of the Sorosis, says, that woman is about to retake possession of the Garden of Eden, it behooves the fruit farmers of California to hustle and increase the acreage of their fig orchards. There is nothing like taking time by the forelock. It might be well to see that the infant industry of fig-leaf culture received proper recognition at the hands of brother McKinley.—Chicago Times.

The Democratic party cheerfully greets Mr. Clarkson as he steps down from the scaffold. He has made a dark background against which the Democratic record beginning with March 4, 1883, will shine in refulgence. By that time the guillotine will be out of gear. The Democratic party will not know how to work it, and will not have the disposition. In looking up at the axe it has has not learned how to pull the string. Oh, no! Good bye, Mr. Clarkson, and peace be with you.—Elmyra Gazette.

What does this mean, from that faithful high-tariff organ the New York, Sun? "The Hon. William McKinley can never become the candidate of Massachusetts for President. If his Tariff bill had merely tanned the hide of the Bay State, all might have been forgiven. But when he proposes a tariff of about 300 per cent. on beans, the proud old Commonwealth of Jas. Otis and John L. Sullivan revolves upon her ear in a dance of frenzy. A tax on brains would not have hurt Massachusetts much of late years, but a high tariff on beans might be fatal to her. If the Republicans are rash enough to assault beans, Massachusetts may be a Democratic State.

WAGES. DEBTS AND SILVER.

The welfare of the masses is wraped in the land question, in the currency question, in the tariff question, in questions of transportation, of temperance, and a host of others of minor importance. To all of these questions there is an aristocratic, plutocratic, and a democratic side; a liberal progressive side and an illiberal, anti-progressive or conservative side; a side that embraces the interests of the producers, and a side that looks toward the interests of those who prey upon the producers; a side of justice and a side of injustice; a side of God and angels and a side of the devil and his imps.

In the present session of congress there is about to open a struggle between opposing forces over what has been termed the "silver question." This silver question is but a branch of the currency question that has agitated this country for years.

MONEY AND WAGES.

As our purpose is to determine upon which side the working classes ought to range themselves in the battle now waging between gold and silver, we may as well begin by determining the relationship between the circulation of money and wages, for the workingman has not and ought not to have, as a first object, any interest in any question except so far as it effects his wages. To the workingman all questions, whether of politics, science or religion, should converge into, to him, the greatest of all questions, wages.

A hard, material fate keeps men on the plane of beasts, while easier but not luxurious life gives birth to and nurtures the spiritual. It was the leisurely shepherds of Chaldea who contemplated the star-studded heavens and gave to man the science of astronomy, not his brother yoked to hard tasks on the surface or in the bowels of the earth.

Freedom from too arduous toil, leisure, inclination to mental, moral and spiritual exercise and culture, happiness, all good things, in a word, are bound up in high wages. We should view all questions, all policies, from the standpoint of wages. This, then, is our criterion: Whatsoever policy tends to increase wages is good; whatsoever policy that tends to decrease them is bad.

And now let us consider the bearing that this question of silver has upon wages. The latter (wages) may be defined as the portion or share of the annual product that is retained by or goes to labor. Whatever tends to divert any part of the annual product from the producers into the pockets of the non-producers lessens, as a matter of course, the amount that would otherwise remain in the hands and for the enjoyment of its creators. If labor, which ultimately supports and carries all burdens of taxation, whether levied by governments or by monopolies, corporations or private individuals, had not these taxes to pay, its wages or share would be equal to the entire product. So that it follows necessarily that lower taxation by governments, lower rates of interest and profit to capital, with diminished rents, or, what is better, no rents at all, to landlords, there being no diminution of production, would simply result in the highest wages attainable.

The object of those who seek to prevent the free coinage of silver is to increase the value of their evidences of indebtedness, and consequently their power to exploit labor.

The free coinage of silver, then, means relief to the debtor class without doing injustice to the creditor class. To prevent this free coinage means to increase the value of gold, its rival metal, and to contract the currency.

WHAT POLITICAL ECONOMISTS AGREE ON.

On one point, at least, most of the doctors of political economy agree and that is, while the volume of money is decreasing, even although very slowly, the value of each unit of the same is increasing in corresponding ratio, and commodities, labor and property generally are falling in price.

It is during the periods of time when money is decreasing in quantity and increasing in value that the classes who hold in their firm grip securities, and all forms of evidences of debt, reap the richest harvest, and virtually fatten on the misfortunes of their fellows; for it is at such periods that those who have contracted to pay money find it constantly becoming more difficult to procure the money wherewith to meet their obligations. It is then that the margins of all securities melt rapidly away, that the mortgage devours the homestead, and usury eats up the profits of business.

A peculiar effect of a contraction in the volume of money is to give profit to the owners of hoarded, unemployed money by reason of the appreciation of its purchasing power by the mere lapse of time. Prof. Jevon testifies that during the 40 years beginning at the year 1809 and ending with the discovery of California gold mines in 1849, gold had appreciated in value 145 per cent, or at a rate of nearly 3½ per cent for each year.

The capitalist who controls money capital, looking over the field of general property, says: "Money by my policy is increasing in value, and other property, including labor, must fall. The article that is now held for a dollar will soon be compelled to seek my market at half its present value. It is my policy to curl up like a spider and wait until my victim falls into my artfully prepared web. Factories, of course, must close; all forms of productive industry will in the meantime slow down or cease entirely, and that will throw vast numbers of men women and even children out of employment; but the competition for what little there is left to do will be so much the greater, and soon absolute necessity will force the workman to dispose of his power to labor on any terms. Then comes my harvest; then will I fatten on the unfortunate debtor and gorge my insatiate appetite for gain with the blood and marrow of labor!"

Oh, Labor! if you could only know, could only learn, could only fully realize the subtile, crafty robbery you are the victims of through this cunning manipulation of the "life blood of exchange," the money market, you would rise in your might and strangle the operators.

At the close of the war, or soon after, our national debt was in round numbers $2,800,000,000. Of that large amount at least $1,600,000,000, by the terms of the contract between the government, i.e. the people, and the bondholder, was to be payable in greenbanks. The act of 1869, in the language of John Sherman, "repudiated this contract" and added at least 40 per cent to that part of the debt, or $656,000,000. Notwithstanding the people have been taxed to pay over $1,000,000,000 of the original national debt $2,800,000,000, the remainder has been so appreciated in value by the change of the standard of payment as to be equal in purchasing power over labor and general commodities to the entire or original debt in the standard prevailing in 1866.

THE TRICKS OF THE GOLD BUGS.

Behold the trick of the gold bugs in all its enormity! A numerical reduction of a debt, and yet the remainder equal in value, computed in days' labor to the original sum contracted.

Suppose we illustrate this trick in another way. Suppose that we had borrowed wheat of these classes instead of dollars; that the measures used were called bushels, but that the bushels only represented 1,750 cubic inches, and after paying one billion of bushels we found that we had not actually reduced the quantity an iota; that through being deceived by the term "bushel," we found the remainder of the debt which we still owed to be equal to the whole in quantity of which we originally borrowed, and that this trick had been performed by simply doubling the number of cubic inches to the bushel. What, workingman and farmer, would you think of that sort of legislative legerdemain? And when you have reflected that it takes just as many hours of hard labor to raise a bushel of wheat or produce its equivalent in any form of wealth as when you borrowed, will you not feel like following the example of the Master and driving the moneychangers and their allies out of the various departments of your government?

The cessation or curtailment of the coinage of silver means contraction, means the further increase of all indebtedness which labor will be made to pay.

It is estimated by reliable authorities that from two to three millions of workmen are now out of employment. Factories and workshops idle, industry checked, while dollars are appreciating in the rich man's pocket, is not a picture to be contemplated with pleasure or patience by the toilers of this nation.

The greed of the classes who are and have been for years clamoring for a gold standard will never be satisfied until they "hear something drop." This class, at the close of the war, raised a howl against what they were pleased to call our depreciated greenback. They asked you to contract the greenback, to return to a sound basis of gold and silver. They obtained your consent to pay their bonds in coin, meaning gold or silver, at the standard of 25.8 grains of the former and 412½ grains of the latter; they had your servants write that contract on the face of the bonds, and now they are yelping that silver is a dishonest currency and ask, with an audacity that has no parallel even in the history of plutocratic impudence, for payment solely and entirely in gold. Why? Not because silver has really depreciated in value in comparison with commodities and services, but because gold has appreciated in its relations to these things. What they want is more and more of labor's earnings. If gold does not continue to rise in value they will clamor for diamond dollars with at least one carat to the dollar, and no flaws at that.

LABOR'S DEMANDS.

We must sit down on them. We demand the free coinage of silver in order to stop contraction of the currency, to the great disadvantage of the debtor. We must see to it that the wages are not reduced in this manner. Silver makes a better money for the people—the laboring classes—than gold, because it is more just to all classes. And while the silver question is not the greatest question of the hour, yet it is one that must be watched in order to prevent its manipulation in favor of the creditor class and to the disadvantage of the farmer, the machanic and the laborer. —Henry A. Robinson, in Detroit News.

MONTANA, OREGON, WASHINGTON.

A correct map of the north west will show that the Northern Pacific Railroad traverses the central portion of Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, and Washington for a distance of nearly 2,000 miles; it is the only Railroad reaching Jamestown, Bismark, Miles City, Billings, Livingston, Bozeman, Missoula, Cheney, Davenport, Palouse City, Sprague, Ritzville, Yakima, Ellensburg, Tacoma, Seattle and in fact nine-tenths of the north west cities, towns, and points of interest.

The Northern Pacific is the shortest trans-continental route from St. Paul and Chicago, to Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Deer Lodge, Spokane Falls, Walla Walla, Dayton and Portland, and the only one whose through trains reach any portion of the new state of Washington. Land seekers purchasing Pacific Coast second class tickets via St. Paul and the Northern Pacific have choice from that point of free Colonist Sleeping Cars, or Pullman's Tourist Furnished Sleepers at charges as low as the lowest.

For the benefit of settlers the Northern Pacific also gives a ten days stop over privilege on second class North Pacific Coast tickets at Spokane Falls and each and every point west, including over 125 stations in Washington, thus enabling persons seeking a home to examine this vast territory without incurring an expense of from $5.00 to $25.00 in traveling on local tickets from point to point.

Insure for yourself comfort and safety by having the best accomodations afforded, thereby avoiding change of cars, re-checking of baggage, transfers and lay overs en-route. Money can be saved by purchasing tickets via St. Paul or Minneapolis and the Northern Pacific.

For Maps, Pamphlets, Rates and Tickets enquire of your nearest Ticket Agent, any District Passenger Agent of the Northern Pacific Railroad; or Chas S. Fee, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, St. Paul Minn.

The Chicago packers are mad because Canada has put a retaliatory tariff on hogs lard. Well, why should'nt Canada build up a "home market" for her hog growers, if she wants to?

For renovating the system, eliminating all poisons from the blood, whether of scrofulous or malarial origin, S. S. S. has won the name "Golden Liquid." To woman it imparts freshness of complexion, beauty of form and elasticity of step. This is the long record of a purely vegetable remedy whose fame is widespread over 2 continents; which has retained its popularity for over half a century, its demand increasing at home, and orders coming for it where the English tongue is never spoken. This speaks volumes for its efficacy:

A high tariff organ, in defending the McKinley bill, says: "A duty on hides would only increase the price of leather." Very true. But why does'nt a duty on plows increase the price of plows?

Spring Medicine

For a good spring medicine we confidently recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. By its use the blood is purified, enriched and vitalized, that tired feeling is entirely overcome and the whole body given strength and vigor. The appetite is restored and sharpened, the digestive organs are toned, the kidneys and liver invigorated. If you have never tried do so this season. It is a thoroughly honest and reliable preparation, purely vegetable, and contains no injurious ingredients whatever. Thousands who have taken it with benefit testify to its peculiar curative power.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"I take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring tonic, and I recommend it to all who have that miserable tired feeling." C. PARMELEE, 349 Bridge Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Makes the Weak Strong

N. B. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, do not be induced to buy any other preparation.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Juniper Berries, and other well known vegetable remedies, by a combination, proportion and process peculiar to itself, and by which the full medicinal value of all the ingredients used is secured. Hence it possesses superior and positive curative power.

Purifies the Blood

"Every spring for years I have made it a practice to take from three to five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, because I know it purifies the blood and thoroughly cleanses the system of all impurities. That languid feeling, called 'spring fever,' will never visit the system that has been properly cared for by this never failing remedy." W. H. LAWRENCE, Editor Agricultural Epitomist, Indianapolis, Ind.

BANK BURSTERS.

ASTOUNDING DEVELOPMENTS ON THE EVE OF EXPLOSION.

Claassen Declares He was a Victim Instead of a Wrecker—Ex-Governor Cornell Preparing a Statement of the Stealings.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Everybody interested in the recent bank wrecking matters seemed to be on the qui vive and important developments were hinted at on every side. Reports that ex-Governor Cornell and Conrad N. Jordan were to make long statements clearing up the mystery which has hitherto attached to the peculiar manipulations of the Sixth National, Equitable and Lenox Hill banks, caused a great agitation among the smaller fry connected with the affair. Some of the latter declared that they hoped all the facts would come out, while others expressed the belief that the less said about the matter the better. Mr. Claasen, whose trial for plotting to wreck the Sixth National begins soon, declared that he was a victim, and that a full statement was just what would clear him of all suspicion. Bank Examiner Hepburn seemed nervous, and denied certain rumors that have been circulating to the effect that his action in closing the Sixth National was premature, and that his subsequent movements were open to criticism. Mr. Sigmund Meyer said that he was thinking of causing somebody to be arrested for alleging that he was connected with the wreckers. Ex-Governor Cornell was seen at his residence, but refused to reveal the nature of the statement which he admitted he was preparing.

One of the new developments in the case is said to be the discovery, while cleaning out the vacated rooms of the Equitable bank, of some ballots that had evidently been used in the election of officers at the time that bank was captured by the wreckers. The ballots, it is said contain the names of several of the prominent men whose conduct in the affair has been more or less a subject of gossip.

OUR LATEST TRUST.

STARCH MAKERS WILL HAVE NO "UNREASONABLE COMPETITION."

A Combination to Put Up Prices—McKinley Paves the Way—A Chance for Mr. Burrows to Act—Will He Take Advantage of It?

On the same day that the McKinley tariff bill was made public the papers contained the news that the starch trust, which had been for some months taking shape, had finally gotten under way with bright prospects. No trust has ever, perhaps, been organized with such kindly encouragement from the tariff makers at the date of its birth. As the new trust enters upon its career Mr. McKinley makes fatherly provision for its future.

The ways and means committee could not have been ignorant of the fact that a starch trust was in process of formation. About Feb. 1 the newspapers contained accounts of the preliminary meeting at Buffalo; and about the middle of that month the trust was incorporated in Covington, Ky., under the name of the National Starch company. The more recent meeting at the Fifth Avenue hotel in New York, for effecting the final arrangements and electing officers, was also reported in the papers, as well as such secret meetings can be reported.

Mr Burrows, of Michigan, is an advocate of the very good doctrine that trusts ought to be prevented by removing the duties which protect them and make them possible. He does not seem to have enforced that view in the crypt of the Capitol. At any rate the duty of two cents a pound on potato starch was untouched by the committee; and the duty on dextrine (a starch product) and all gum substitutes was raised from one cent to two cents a pound. True, the duty of two and one-half cents a pound on corn, wheat and rice starch is reduced to two cents a pound; but this signifies simply nothing at all, for no starch of this kind is imported at present, and none can be imported under the proposed duty of two cents. The price of American corn starch up to the time of the formation of the trust was about two and one-quarter cents a pound, which is less than the duty on imported corn starch. The trust has already advanced the price of starch to two and five-eighths cents, and there is to be a further advance to three cents at an early day.

It is claimed by the manufacturers of starch that prices have fallen so low that there is no profit in the business. The price several years ago was seven cents a pound, but it is now below three cents.

One of the most frequent arguments before the ways and means committee from people who want new duties imposed or old ones increased is that the duty will develop home competition, this will force prices down, and the consumer will be benefited. None of these applicants for government aid will confess that the protection asked for will keep prices up.

On the contrary, we see the singular spectacle of hundreds of men paying the expenses of a trip to Washington to ask for duties on their goods, on the ground that these duties will bring prices down. Before the committee these men have much to say about promoting competition; they seem, in fact, to have overcome the law according to which every business man proceeds—the law that the less competition there is the greater the profits will be. Every business man dislikes competition; but a deputation to Washington in behalf of any industry always appears to be willing to have as much home competition as any consumer could possibly wish.

When, however, competition or other causes have reduced prices, competition becomes unpopular. Hence we hear one of the "promoters" of this starch trust speak of "unreasonable competition."

How "unreasonable" this competition is may be judged from the fact, which is stated by this same "promoter," that the profits of all the starch factories last year were more than $650,000, which is equivalent to more than 8 per cent. on the capital invested. The capital required to start a factory is comparatively small; and no industry in America perhaps has so completely the advantage of cheap raw material as the starch manufacturing industry. Western farmers who have been burning their corn during the past winter will appreciate the truth of this.

A careful estimate, said to be based on actual facts, has been made, which shows that a corn starch factory with a capital of $100,000 will grind daily 1,500 bushels of corn. Putting this at 30 cents a bushel, allowing 300 working days in the year and deducting all expenses for wages, freights, commissions to middlemen and other charges, and a factory of this description can clear a profit of 38 per cent. This assumes, of course, that the factory is run with the latest scientific improvements. That, however, is not done by most of our factories, and this is the reason that they complain of low profits.

There is one fact which shows that starch manufacturing is not the unprofitable business which the trust "promoters" represent it to be. It is that the business has no failures. Almost every business has its failures—many of them are marked in their whole course by disaster—but starch makers never fail. One failure can be found; but this was not brought about by the unprofitableness of the business. The American Starch company, of Columbus, Ind., failed some time ago by reason of the action of the municipal authorities in refusing the company permission to continue its factory inside the corporate limits on account of the offensive odors from the works.

The number of factories, on the other hand, has been constantly increasing, and there has been a very general movement toward enlarging the capacity of existing factories.

Furthermore, the factories have begun to export their product in considerable quantities. They exported last year nearly 10,000,000 pounds, or about twice as much as in 1888. Nearly three times as much was sold abroad last December as in December, 1888. Of course this export will be checked, if not entirely stopped, when the trust gets rid of its "unreasonable competition" and puts up the price to a point just under the duty on foreign starch.

The trust, however, will most likely hold its export trade by selling abroad at a lower price than at home. The "export discount" has grown to be a recognized feature of trade in our seaports. People who believe that our protection tariff is an unmingled blessing to us, while it injures only the foreigner, would do well to investigate these "export discounts," and try to find out how it is that many American made articles are sold more cheaply to the foreigner than to the American consumer, for whose special benefit it is pretended that protection exists.

Mr. McKinley's proposition to double the duty on dextrine has called forth a vigorous protest from the industries which use that article. These industries now import some ten million pounds of dextrine every year, which is a tenfold increase in twenty years. This is potato dextrine, of which none is made in this country. This dextrine and other forms of starch are used by more than sixty of our industries. They paid about $100,000 in duties last year on potato dextrine and are not able to see why that sum should be doubled at a time when the problem is to reduce the surplus. They denounce the increase as an uncalled for and unjust step, and one representative of these industries calls attention to Mr. Burrows' declaration that he was in favor of removing all duties which serve to protect trusts.

Let the people watch and see the result.

In Behalf of the Lime Trust.

About two years ago the lime makers of the Rockland district in Maine effected a combination to reduce competition, raise prices and enjoy the blessings of protection. They have now come to the conclusion that their little trust cannot have full swing till Canadian lime is shut out of the market; for when they put their prices too high people send to Canada for lime.

The Maine lime makers live in the district represented by Mr. Dingley, and as Mr. Dingley has been one of the leading tariff tinkerers in the crypt of the Capitol, the lime trust saw that the tide had come in its affairs which, taken at its flood, would lead on to fortune.

But the little lime trust is both cunning and confident. Most industries will not content themselves with sending a letter to the raisers of tariffs. Men must go in person to argue the case and give additional force to their tale of woe by countenance, voice and gesture.

Not so the little lime trust. It reposes such unconditional faith in their representative in congress that they are content to send a letter and watch the effect from a distance. Perhaps, too, they feared embarrassing questions from Mr. Burrows, who says he is in favor of cutting away the tariff supports of all industries which combine to raise prices.

However that may be, the trust sent in its application by mail, and the result is that the duty on lime is increased fivefold. The present duty is three cents a cask, which is equivalent to 10 per cent. ad valorem, and, including the freight from Canada, amounts to about 27 per cent. The proposed duty is six cents per 100 pounds, including the weight of the cask. Lime dealers say this is five times the present duty.

The proposed increase has been met by a shower of protests. The masons, plasterers, contractors and builders, tanners, dealers, architects and others of Massachusetts have been heard from. Three-fourths of these are Republicans. They show that their only escape from the exactions of the trust is in importing lime from Canada. Through this importation they have brought down the price of lime fifteen or twenty cents a cask, and the Rockland lime trust is still doing so satisfactory a business that it is already announced that the agreement which holds the "combine" together will be renewed in May. The dealers in New York have also gotten up a petition against the proposed increase.

If the duty is put on, the trust has shown that it is ready to reap all the advantage that the duty will give them. They recently ordered a restriction of the output in order to raise prices. The Maine men supply all the lime north and east of Philadelphia, except the small quantity which comes from Canada; and, with their protection raised five times as high as it is at present, they will have a soft snap and grow rich at the expense of the vast army of consumers.

Meanwhile they will do valuable service in teaching these consumers that the tariff is a tax; and there are unmistakable signs that the New England states are learning that lesson.

We have in America only one mill which makes linen. It has been in operation for twenty years, and no rival mill has sprung up to compete with it. Is it for the benefit of this mill or the "Flax Growers' association" that Mr. McKinley makes a heavy increase in the duty on linen? The "bill to reduce revenue" raises the duty on some kinds of linen used in making cheap clothing by 200 per cent. On fine goods the increase ranges from 35 to 50 per cent.

When the Mills bill was in course of construction, protectionist newspapers invented the term "dark lantern bill," and for months they rang the changes on it. This year they have nothing to say on the subject of "dark lantern bills," although Mr. McKinley and his associates have proceeded upon the "dark lantern" method, even to the extreme of secluding themselves in the crypt of the Capitol.

Mr. McKinley has undertaken to win the good graces of the farmers by putting into his bill a special "agricultural schedule," and by raising the duty on some farm products. Protectionist papers, high in the favor of their party, are meanwhile hastening to assure the farmers that these pretended protection duties will do them no good at all, at all.

Epoch

The transition from long, lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is greatfully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of the Great Alterative and Tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of Kidneys, Liver or Stomach, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at

Wonders
Are wrought by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor in restoring gray hair to its original color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, silky, and abundant, and the scalp cool, healthy, and free from dandruff or humors. The universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-furnished toilet.
"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair to use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing."—Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, East Pittston, Me.
"Some time ago my wife's hair began to come out quite freely.
Ayer's Hair Vigor
not only prevented my wife from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to certify to this statement before a justice of the peace."—H. Hulsebus, Lewisburgh, Iowa.
"Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever, my hair all came out. I used such preparations for restoring it as my physicians ordered, but failed to produce a growth of hair. I then tried, successively, several articles recommended by druggists, and all alike fell short of accomplishing the desired result. The last remedy I applied was Ayer's Hair Vigor, which brought a growth of hair in a few weeks. I think I used eight bottles in two years; more than was necessary as a restorative, but I liked it as a dressing, and have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor possesses virtues far above those of any similar preparation now on the market."—Vincent Jones, Richmond, Ind.

DR. ERASMUS MAGNETIC OINTMENT.
The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years,
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

HAPPY WEDDING BELLS.

The wedding event of the season here in Tecumseh occurred on Thursday evening last at the fine new residence of Wm. C. Heck on West Chicago street, at which time his eldest daughter, Jennie H., was united in marriage with Mr. Willis N. Hurlbut of Adrian. About eighty guests were present to enjoy the festivities, many of whom came from Adrian, South Bend and other cities. The large bay window of the east room was profusely decorated with flowers. Promptly at the appointed hour, seven o'clock Miss Ella Jackson struck up the lively strains of the wedding march and at its close the bridal pair took their place beneath a canopy of flowers in the bay window. In a few happy words, Rev. J. S. Joslyn tied the nuptial knot, and the usual congratulations followed. An elegant collation was served and the remainder of the evening was passed in social converse, music and mirth. The parlor tables were loaded with a fine array of wedding gifts, many of which were exceedingly costly and elegant, and which told, better than mere words can express, the many warm friendships that the young couple have formed thus early in life. The groom is one of Adrian's most enterprising young men. He has a well established and a lucrative business, and is universally esteemed by all. The bride has passed from youth to womanhood in this community and has entwined about her the warmest affections of many, many friends. The groom will be envied for his good fortune and the bride will be accompanied with a hearty God-bless-you from all who know her, as she leaves the parental roof for her new home. The couple proceeded the same evening to Adrian, where they began their matrimonial journey in the home furnished for their reception. We take pleasure in presenting below a full list of the bridal presents.

TO BE TESTED.

The constitutionality of the new liquor law is about to be tested in the supreme court. A Detroit saloonkeeper tendered the treasurer of Wayne county $300 for a liquor license. The treasurer refused to accept the tender, as the law provides for the payment of $500. The saloon keeper made the tender on the ground that the new law was not a law, inasmuch as the act signed by the govenor, was not the act passed by the legislature, and also showed other points the constitionality of which is questioned. The supreme court on Tuesday granted a mandamus compelling the treasurer to show cause why he refused to accept the $300 tendered. We understand the liquor dealers of Van Buren county are preparing to contest the local option law, which was recently adopted in that county.

The great superiority of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup to all other cough remedeis, is attested by the immense demand for that old-established remedy.

A NEWSPAPER RELIC.

"Talking about old newspapers," said Ed. Snedecor, the other day, "I have an old HERALD in my possession which is a decided curiosity now." "Very well, bring it up and let us look it over." A few days thereafter he left the paper at our office and it is a decided curiosity, surely.

It is No. 43 of Vol. 5, and bears date Sept. 6, 1855. Richard and Baxter are the publishers and proprietors. It is "devoted to literature and science, progress and truth, morality and religion." It is a seven-column folio sheet, all home print. The first column on the first page is filled with business cards. Not one of them contains the name of any man now insame business. Most of the men are gone, although a few of them still reside here. Below are the names of some of the leading firms:

Albert Anderson—Drv goods merchant and miller.

Anderson and Brewer—Steam furnace, steam engine factory and machine shop.

Baylis and Blosser—Millers and dealers in groceries, crockery and glassware.

B. J. Bidwell—Wholesale and retail dealer in dry goods, groceries, crockery and hardware, boots and shoes, leather, etc.

Bills and Baxter—Attorneys and counsellors at law, and solicitors in chancery.

E. H. Button—Watchmaker and jeweller.

Thomas Clark—Meat market.

Salmon Crane—Architect.

Mrs. Cummins—Millinery and fancy dress store.

Cummins and Smith—Carriage makers, furnishers, ornamental painters and blacksmiths.

Chas. DeMott—Physician and surgeon.

A. Everett—Physician and surgeon.

Emerson and Stocking—Dealers in variegated American marble, etc.

Gleason and Co.—Meat market.

J. E Hall—Watchmaker, goldsmith, jewelry shop and bookstore.

Hyde and Co.—Steam furnace, plow factory and threshing machine shop.

Alfred James and Co.—Grocers and dealers in provisions.

M. A. Patterson—Physician and surgeon.

Richard, VanTyne and Co.—Furniture warerooms.

C. D. Stewart and Co.—Dealers in Iron, Hardware, nails, stoves, glass, tinware, etc.

J. C. Satterthwaite and Co.—Millers and general commission merchants and produce dealers.

H. J. Snell and Co.—Dry goods and grocery merchants.

Stacy and Wood Attorneys and counsellors at law and solicitors in chancery.

Snell and Walters—Clothing merchants.

John Treanor—Dealer in drugs and medicines.

It contains one column of legal notices—about what the HERALD now runs on the average. The local page contains an official register, one column of foreign news, one of telegraphic news, and the rest of the page is given to advertising. Not a single item of local news, even three lines long, appears on that page. The Jackson branch was then built to Manchester and a daily stage ran from that place to Jackson. The trains went north at 8 38 A. M. and 3 38 P. M. Going south they passed this station at 10-12 A. M. and 5-17 P. M. The official register contains the names of Franklin Pierce, President; Kingsley S. Bingham, Gorvernor; Roger B. Taney, Chief Justice; Geo. W. Ketcham, Sheriff; Consider A. Stacy, Judge of Probate; Charles Chandler, Register. Among the patent medicine cards are Holloway's Ointment and Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It is the oldest copy of the HERALD that has yet come to our notice and is well worth preserving.

HIGH SCHOOL HAPPENINGS.

All seem pleased with the second issue of the Breeze.

Miss Anna Osborn is detained at home this week on account of sickness in the family.

Examination day again Friday. We wish all would be fortunate enough to be excused.

Mr. Mills, Mrs. Orr, Misses Hosmer and Gallatin visited our school Tuesday forenoon.

Only two weeks more and the seniors are obliged to hand in their Commencement essays.

The seniors are rejoicing to think that they only have to spend the forenoon in school now.

Last Wednesday morning Robert Moore gave a very pleasing oration on "Reporters." He even thought far enough to speak very highly of "Johnny," the writer of the "Happenings" for the News, and of "R. F. H." Thanks, Rob.

Tuesday morning the chapel exercises were varied somewhat. Mr. Richards, who is visiting Miss Grayson, was present and rendered some of the finest instrumental music ever played in Tecumseh. Those who did not hear him missed a treat. The program was:

Song by the school.
Flute solo—Robe Hosmer.
Vocal Solo—Miss Grayson.
Two inst. solos—Mr. Richards.
Duet—Misses Grayson and Coddington.

My labor was shorter and less painful than on two fomer occasion; physicians astonished; I thank you for "Mother's Friend." It is worth its weight in gold Address The Bradfield Reg. Co Atlanta Ga., for particulars.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

Chas. Hoyt, of Adrian, was in town Tuesday.

Mrs. Jas. Aten and Miss Frank are now on the sick list.

Roy DeWolf is now clerking for S. A. James & Co., in Detroit.

Albaugh & Neeley have a batch of business locals this week.

Deerfield is making arrangements to start a new brass band.

The test well for the Hudson water works is going down slowly.

W. D. Adams and wife, of Ann Arbor, were in town Tuesday.

Will Anderson had the first asparagus in the market last Tuesday.

Secure your gallery tickets for the May party before it is too late.

A ten pound girl arrived at Will Hasting's Monday morning at 7 oclock.

They are grading down the lot for the electric light buildings this week

Prof. W. J. Richards, of Oshkosh, Wis., is the guest of Miss Dora Grayson this week.

Mrs. A. S. Gage has purchased the old Dr. Baldwin property of Stephen Whittier.

Go and hear Prof. Richards, the boy pianist, at the Opera House to-morrow night.

Mrs. Geo. P. Wright of Woodstock, Ill., is visiting friends in Tecumseh this week.

The dedication of the Cone M. P. Church will take place on the 18th of this month.

The Detroit Free Press will begin their great 1st. prize story, "Capt. of Co. K," early in June.

S. W. Anderson has returned from New York and big boxes of dry goods are arriving every day.

Defiance and Toledo parties are in Morenci looking up heavy ship timber to be shipped abroad.

Everybody wonders if they are to live near an electric light—especially the residents of Brownville.

Supervisor James is hustling his assessment this spring; he will nearly if not quite complete it this week.

Rev. H. Churchill, of Fairfield, will occupy the pulpit at the Baptist church next Sabbath morning and evening.

Misses Lucila Hendrix and Carrie Osborn attended the flower show in Detroit last Friday, remaining over until Saturday.

Will Ingersoll is taking a course of ten lessons on the claronet at the Detroit Conservatory of Music. He goes to the city every Wednesday.

Editor Cargill, of the Deerfield Record, plainly and honestly tells his people that he has been running the paper for ten months at a loss, and that if the people do not come to his rescue he will be obliged to quit 'em.

We went to the flower show last Friday on the same train with Bro. Field of the News. Nothing occurred to mar the harmony of the trip. We both perused the morning's Free Press and devoured the last number of Puck with equal relish.

During our short stop in Detroit last week we called upon Ex-Judge Howell and found him both happy and prosperous. The Judge's family like Detroit for a residence very much, and he is enjoying a good practice in his profession.

Hudson Post: A cream gatherer was nearly paralyzed a few days ago, when he stopped at a house on his rounds, to see a cat apparently nursing a lot of little chickens. But when it became known that the animal had been trained to protect the poultry from the clutches of Loyster's men his heart was sad. The cat was lying on the floor, and its paws encircled three or four of the chicks.

Mrs. Mary Hough departed this life last week at an advanced age. The funeral rites were observed on Monday afternoon. The deceased was one of our pioneer settlers and the widow of Olmstead Hough, who was a prominent politician of this county away back in the forties. A notice worthy of her life and character will appear hereafter.

Captain Wood, of Co. C., is too modest by half. At the last election of regimental officers of the first regiment, he was chosen Lt. Colonel, but declined the honor.—Tecumseh Herald.

Yes; the captain deserves to be court-martialed for his conduct. But for his modest perversity he might now be on the high road to military distinction. Forgive him? Never!—Adrian Press.

Walter Thomas Mills, Editor of The Statesman, has challenged Hon. Albert Griffin to one hundred debates on the questions in dispute between Temperance Republicans and Party Prohibitionists. The challenge has been accepted, and the debates will begin on the 1st of April, and continue for one hundred consecutive dates. Mr. Mills has not a superior as a student of politics, or as a keen and ready debater. Mr. Griffin is Chairman of the National Committee of the Anti-Saloon Republican Association. These debates cannot fail to create the liveliest interest in the questions discussed. M. P. Brown is making an effort to get them at Tecumseh on Thursday, June 6th.

James Vick, Seedsman, of Rochester, N. Y., offers $1000,00 in Cash Premiums, to be awarded at the Illinois State Fair by the Society's judges, for best Cabbage, Celery, Potatoes, Cauliflower, Tomatoes, Musk Melon, Onion and Mangel. Last year the prizes awarded at the New York State Fair went to Pennsylvania, Michigan, Iowa and New York. This year we are anxious to see our State take the lead, and hope that all interested in vegetables will send to Vick, of Rochester, for particulars regarding this offer. No doubt it will be one of the principal features of interest at the Fair. The Vicks will erect a separate building, or tent, in which they will make a grand show of Flowers with Vegetables, and will be on hand to receive their friends.

M. P. Brown has a new card this week.

Dora Grayson spent several days in Detroit last week.

Dr. Walter Fowler, of Holly, Mich., visited friends in Tecumseh the first of the week.

Will Bidwell, who is attending Commercial College at Ypsilanti, spent Sunday with his parents.

Alfred James has purchased a "safety," and will enjoy it by riding under the glare of the electric lights.

Notice the call for to-morrow evening, at the Council rooms, to make arrangements for Decoration Day.

Arthur Harding has been laid up for several days with a poisoned eye, but is able to be about again now.

So many people attended the flower show in Detroit last week that we have been unable to keep track of them all.

Several of our Tecumseh citizens attended the funeral of Mrs. Joshua Waring, at Ridgeway, last Tuesday forenoon.

There will be a meeting of the citizens and soldiers of Tecumseh, at the Council rooms, on Friday Evening, May 2d., to make arrangements for the proper observance of Decoration Day. All are invited to attend.

BY ORDER OF COM

The Adrian Times says: "So many Tecumseh men are having their whiskers shaved off that traveling men don't know the place."

We have such excellent barber shops here that but few men can resist the temptation of patronizing them.

Lynn Hardenburg, who is at work for Anderson & Co., had the misfortune to fall through a large plate glass last Friday. He was riding a bicycle, and while trying to stop in front of the store, slipped and fell through the window. Rather a costly tumble.

They fired up at the Table Factory last Monday to test the boiler and engine. They both ran like a new top. The entire arrangements in the engine room are very perfect and it is, without doubt, the best engine power room in the village. Several of the new machines will be planted by next Saturday night.

Mr. Travis has purchased a lot for the electric light plant. It is located on the west side of Mill street between Heesen's Fruit Evaporator building and Evans Creek, just across the creek bridge, north of the Episcopal church. It is a very eligible location. Ground was broken last Tuesday and the necessary buildings will be erected just as speedily as workmen can do the job.

Albert Vedder met with an accident last Friday afternoon which came near being a serious one. While coming from the Lake Shore depot he attempted to cross the track in front of an approaching train. The team and wagon just crossed when the locomotive struck the hind wheels and smashed up the rear end of the wagon pretty thoroughly. Mr. Vedder escaped unhurt but it was a narrow escape for him.

Cultivate the young orchard. You do not plant corn and leave the crop to take care of itself. Nor can you treat the orchard in that way and achieve success with it. Trim up the trees so as to make them look graceful. Clip the straggling branches. By the way, every man who owns trees ought to have a patent pruner that enables him to stand on the ground and reach all over an ordinary tree.—Manchester Enterprise.

Scribner's Magazine for May contains an article of unusual richness in illustration, dealing with the country around Barbizon, made famous by Millet's pictures, and with the artist's personality; a practical article on home-building for men of small incomes; two short stories of striking originality by entirely new writers; the second paper in the useful "Rights of the Citizen" series; and a description of Japanese theatres by a Japanese author, fully illustrated by Japanese artists—with other fiction, essays, and poems.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAY 1, 1890

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Saturday's rain did an immense amount of good.

Several spring cards loom up in the HERALD columns this week.

Chas. H. Beneway of this village has received an original pension.

Scove Walker spent last Sunday with his parents in Brooklyn.

The flower show at Detroit last week was a splendid exhibition.

Alva Spade has a new card this week, giving a short sermon on shirts.

W. C. Jipson, of Blissfield, has purchased the insurance business of O. F. Sheldon.

Whitenack & Bordine have a new card to-day containing a short homily on harness.

John Keyser of Adrian, is spending a few days with his brothers, Henry and Horatio.

There is a good deal of house papering going on this spring and the paperhangers are busy.

District Manager K. S. Baker of Adrian was inspecting the lines about Tecumseh Monday.

H. V. C. Hart of Adrian, was in Tecumseh last Monday and favored the HERALD with a short call.

A position that holds good twelve months in the year, is offered in the "ad" headed $50—$75 per month. Read and consider.

Mrs. Fred Wagner, of South Bend, came to attend the wedding of Jennie Heck, and is the guest of Mrs. Wm. C. Heck this week.

Dr. C. M. Woodward went to Grand Rapids last week to attend the thirteenth annual meeting of the Grand Council of the Royal Arcanum.

The Britton Dramatic club will present Dot, the Miner's Daughter, at Holloway next Saturday evening, May 3d. Admission ten and fifteen cents.

"The New York Ladies' Club" is the subject of an article by Mary Gay Humphreys to be published in the number of Harper's Bazar issued May 2d. The same number will contain a story by Julia Schayer entitled "One Standard."

Owing to the rain last Saturday there was a slim attendance at the committee meeting to make arrangements for the Farmers' Union picnic, and an adjournment was had until next Saturday afternoon at two o'clock at the HERALD Office.

Met Conklin is opening the campaign briskly with the Walter A. Wood Harvesting Machinery. Several improvements have been introduced in these machines this season which buyers should examine before purchasing. We invite attention to his new card on the 8th page.

On Tuesday morning, while assisting in sinking some large stones on his father's farm, Addis Leeson was caught under a stone and his leg was broken. Dr. Lynch was called and reduced the fracture. This is a very unfortunate accident, aside from the pain the young man must suffer, being a member of the senior class in the high school, his confinement to the house may seriously effect his chances for graduating this year.—Manchester Enterprise.

To-day, Thursday, May 1, the last of Michigan's bonded debt, amounting to $229,000, will mature and the bonds will be called in and paid from the sinking fund. The bonds issued for war purposes aggregated $2,555,400. About one-half were payable at the pleasure of the state, and were long since retired. The remaining half are payable May 1, 1890. Efforts have been made to retire all these and save the interest, but they commanded so high a premium that all could not be secured until maturity.

The Magazine of American History for May presents an appetizing table of contents. Its frontispiece is a superb picture after the celebrated painting of Sir David Wilkie, R. A., of Columbus explaining his theory of a New World to the Prior of the Convent where he stopped to ask for his little son. The handsomely illustrated opening article is of special interest, entitled "Spanish Pioneer Houses in California," by Charles Howard Shinn. Mrs. Lamb's description of the frontis-piece, giving the romantic experiences of Columbus at the old Spanish Convent and his subsequent summons to the Court of Queen Isabella, is truly delightful. Among the several shorter papers are, "Chauncey M. Depuy on Washington Irving"; "Duel of Button Gwinnett, the signer," by Col. Charles C. Jones; and "Glimpses of the Interior of Africa," by Professor Henry Drummond. The issue also contains a valuable list, recently prepared, of the "Historic Societies of the United States"; and eight varied departments are crowed with good things. This popular periodical enjoys the well-earned distinction of being the foremost publication of its character in the world. $5.00 a year. Published at 743 Broadway, New York.

Geo. Heesen & Son have a new May card this week.

H. J. Snell and wife have returned from their Grand Rapids visit.

Satterthwaite Bros. & Boyd have a new advertising announcement today.

Harry Tansley sold a new Hammill pipe organ at Benton Harbor last week.

C. A. Slayton has been confined to the house since last Friday with an attack of the grippe.

Mrs. Chas. Hicks completed her Tecumseh visit and returned to her home in Oscoda, last week.

The big strike at Chicago is now on. Over 20,000 workingmen are idle, and the number is increasing daily.

Mr. & Mrs. Geo. Heesen have gone to Nashville, Ill., for a week's visit with their daughter, Mrs. Will Meyers.

The Tecumseh Rack Co., are flooded with orders already, which indicates a lively season's campaign in their business.

Word has been recived from Harry Root that he is improving and will soon be able to return home. His attack was nervous prostration caused by a fall.

The Good Templar's Lodge will hold its next meeting to-morrow evening at the Orangemen's Hall, over Marsden's. All members are requested to be present.

The Times of Tuesday says: "Capt. C. R. Miller and bride arrived home from their wedding trip last evening, and Mr. Miller is receiving the congratulations of his friends to-day."

The liquor law of 1889 has been declared invalid by the Supreme Court, a decision which has been expected by the best legal authority of the state, ever since the bill was passed.

The Tecumseh Celery Co. are making extensive additions and improvements on their farm this spring. They have a force of men at work with steam power, sinking an artesian well, and a new tenant house will also be built.

Geo C. Pocklington is now occupying the store between McCowen's and the west end market as headquarters for his harvesting machinery. He has taken the agency for the Ann Arbor buggy, and expects some sample buggies here every day.

Ladies who desire spring millinery—and who does not?—should remember Mrs. M. A. Freeman's new rooms one door east of Mark's Drug store, where they will find the largest and choicest line of spring millinery ever shown in Tecumseh. Do not fail to give her a call.

Lt. Elliott Gray got entangled in a railroad smash up while taking a lot of sheep to Manistee a few days ago. The stock train he was on collided with the engine of a logging train. About 50 of the sheep were killed, and Mr. Gray himself was badly bruised and cut about the head. It was a closer call than he cares to have again.

We paid a visit to Detroit last week, going out on the early Wabash train. The forenoon was devoted to a few busines calls and the afternoon to the flower show. We had but little time to spare to call on Lenawee County acquaintances and gave most of them the go-by. The flower show was a magnificent affair, and far surpassed that of last year.

Last Friday, while at Detroit, we spent about five minutes in the store of S. A. James & Co. We were quite surprised to see the extent of their business, which consists of wholesale caps and gloves. They are only running the latter department now, but have four men on the road and are selling an average of about 200 dozen gloves per day. Their line of caps, 600 different styles, will be ready in about two weeks.

The Daily Northwestern, published at Oshkosh, Wis., contains a cut and very flattering sketch of J. W. Richards, the boy pianist, from which we clip the following:

People who attended the First Presbyterian church yesterday were surprised to observe a lad, apparently not over eighteen years of age, officiate at the organ with all the skill of musicians many years his senior. The boy was Wert Richards who only recently arrived here from Michigan. He played voluntaries and preludes without notes and his hands speed over the keys with an accuracy that proved him a reliable accompanist. The young man may well be called a prodigy.

The funeral of Mrs. Joshua Waring, mother of Hon. G. P. Waring, was held at Ridgeway last Tuesday forenoon. The large audience room of the church was filled with sympathizing neighbors and friends, and the floral offerings were exceedingly tasty and elaborate. The services, both the musical portion and the remarks of Rev. Mr. Lowry, were very impressive. A lengthy procession of teams followed the mourners to the grave. She was nearly seventy five years old at her death, and had been a member of the church for sixty years. The influence of such a life for good can hardly be over-estimated, and the entire community testified to their appreciation of her character by attending the last sad rites and following her remains to the tomb.

Lew Waldron has a new card this week explaining the good qualities of the aer-motor. Read it.

Henry Anderson, of Devils Lake, is in town for a few days. He says fishing is splendid at the lake.

All the old members of Co. C. are requested to be present at the regular drill next Tuesday night. Don't fail.

The ladies of the Relief Corps give an anniversary supper at their rooms on the evening of the 9th of May, followed by a literary and musical social. All are invited. Supper served at ten cents from 5 to 7.

A rather light audience greeted the Luce Minstrel troupe at the Opera House last Tuesday evening. While the orchestra and band music was first class, and some of the character selections on the program were cleverly rendered, the greater part of the play was of too "chestnutty" a flavor to suit Tecumseh patrons of minstrelsy.

Confirmation services were held at St. Peter's church Monday evening, Bishop Davies made his first visitation here and he created a most favorable impression upon the large congregation in attendance. He is a very ready impromptu speaker, has a pleasing voice and a dignified address. His manner of conducting confirmation services reminds one very much of Bishop McCroskey. A class of nine candididates received the rite of confirmation. The services throughout were very impressive.

Don't miss the May party concert to-morrow evening. Besides the selections by the orchestra, there will be a vocal solo by Miss Dora Grayson, and a piano solo by Wirt J. Richards, of Oshkosh, Wis., the boy pianist. Following is the program:

1. Overture from the "Calif of Bagdad," by Wolff & Leon's Orchestra.
2. Musical Melange, a medley of late and popular airs—Orchestra.
3. Vocal Solo, "To Sevilla," by Jos. Dessauer—Miss Dora Grayson.
4. Ten minutes with the Minstrels—Orchestra.
5. Piano rendition (a) "Home, Sweet Home," imitating waves in a storm, by D. Mazurette, (b) selection, grand march with a piano-spread over the keys—W. J. Richards.
